ISLET PRINCE RESCUE SHIP NOW MISSING

Nothing Heard From Fort William Vessel Since Wednesday.

IN 40 MILE GALE.

Feared That Lake Ship May Be Frozen in For Winter.

FORT WILLIAM, December 17. — Since Wednesday afternoon, when her captain, A. E. Fader, wired here from Rossport, nothing has been seen or heard of the coastal vessel Islet Prince which left the lake head four days ago to conduct a search along the north shore of Lake Superior for the missing package freighter, Kamloops. She carries no wireless.

From Rossport Capt. Fader wired that he had found no sign of the missing ship now given up for lost with a crew of twenty and that he was returning to this port. Rossport is but a half day's cruise from Fort William and his failure to reach here has given rise to some anxiety.

Thursday Lake Superior was whipped by a forty mile gale, accompanied by a blinding snow storm. It is considered probable that the vessel has gained shelter in one of the many bays, but fears are entertained that the coastal ship may be frozen in before the weather subsides sufficiently for the little steamer to venture out again.

THIS CITY TO BE ON NEW HIGHWAY

Sarnia-Ottawa Route Will Pass Through the City of Peterborough.

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—That a highway paralleling and to the north of the Kingston Highway would be constructed in the not far distant future was intimated by R. M. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways for Ontario, in a lecture given before a meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada. The road would be a continuation of the present highway running from Sarnia through to Guelph, and would cut a distance of nearly 100 miles off the present route from Sarnia to Ottawa. It would pass through Peterborough and Carleton Place.

Another step under consideration, he said, was the improvement of the Windsor - Niagara Highway. This road, serving as a connecting link between the new Peace Bridge and the one being built at Windsor, entailed a saving of at least 200 miles for those travelling from Michigan to New York. A considerable amount of transient traffic would be diverted through Ontario if the road were improved, he thought.

Speaking of the technical construction of highways, Mr. Smith stated that, although a much heavier type of construction was in use in Ontario than in most of the States of the Union, and the highways here were of 20-foot width as opposed to 18 feet in the American roads, the pavement there costs at least $10,000 more per mile than in Ontario. "This is largely due to the fact that in Ontario we take advantage of local materials and local conditions to decrease the cost of road-building," stated the speaker.

LIKED JAIL BETTER.

KOKOMO, Ind., Dec. 17.—When he was arrested for trespass and given a $16.50 fine or a 15-day jail sentence, P. J. Flannery chose to go to a cell. Later, officers found $87 in Flannery's clothes, took out the fine and kicked him out. Angered by this inhospitable treatment, Flannery started action to compel authorities to allow him to finish the sentence.

U.F.O. RE-ELECTS WILLIAM M'ELROY

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 17.— The annual business meeting of the Cavan and South Monaghan U. F. O. was held in the hall at Centreville on Monday evening.

The meeting opened with the President, William McElroy, in the chair. After the usual opening business was concluded the reports of the various committees and officers were heard.

The secretary-treasurer's report went to show that there had been nine meetings held during the past year. The receipts for the past year amounted to $470.81, while the expenditures amounted to $457.00, leaving a cash balance on hand of approximately twenty-five dollars when bills were paid.

During the past year the local organization has handled a carload of coal, a car of salt, a car of binder twine, and also flour, feed and seed corn.

Jacob Isbister was then appointed chairman for the election of officers, and the following were nominated for the office of president, William McElroy and Walter Lord, Mr. McElroy was elected.

Messrs. William Belch and J. White were nominated for vice-president. Mr. White received the election.

Messrs. F. Barnard, W. A. Wood and E. Anderson were nominated for secretary-treasurer. Fred Barnard was re-elected.

The following directors were then appointed: Messrs. A. Huggins, W. Barnard, J. Clarke, H. McFee, E. E. Anderson, W. Lord.

During the meeting F. Barnard gave a report of the U.F.O. convention which was held in Toronto last week.

HASTINGS NEWS.

HASTINGS, Dec. 17.—Mr. and Mrs. A. V. German and Mr. and Mrs. John Oliver spent Tuesday in Peterborough.

Miss Dorothy Johnston, who was operated upon for appendicitis in Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, a week ago is doing nicely and expects to be home in a very short time.

Misses Mabel Lynch and Bessie Sargent spent the week end visiting with friends in Belleville and Tweed.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Stinson spent Tuesday in Peterborough.

Mr. S. J. Fisher of Belleville was in town this week on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake and son, Beecher, of Campbellford, spent Sunday renewing old acquaintances in town.

The recent heavy rainfall and strong winds forcing the ice and water down the river from Rice Lake have made the electrical power very weak in town as there is a great deal of anchor ice in the raceway leading to the power house. On Tuesday morning part of the sidewalks on main street were flooded, which caused some little inconvenience for a short time, but was later drained off.

YOUNG BEEF CATTLE BRING GOOD PRICES

Trent River Man Sells Fat Animals To Butchers.

TRENT RIVER, December 17. — Mr. Thomas J. Brown, Browning Avenue, has met with great success with the sale of young fat cattle. These animals were taken last spring when calves, and placed on his property down on the south shores of the canal, known as the "Graham place," where there is abundance of good pasture and easy access to water. This fall Mr. Brown sold seven head to Albert Ford, butcher at Havelock, for $300. On Wednesday of this week Mr. Ford purchased another baby beef giving the owner $50.00. This animal was killed and round dressed to be hung up whole on exhibition in Mr. Ford's meat market, Havelock, for the Christmas trade.

OFFICERS ELECTED

MILLBROOK, Dec. 17.—The annual meeting of the Golden Links Mission Circle was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. E. S. Burnham, the attendance being quite encouraging.

The retiring president, Mrs. J. McKnight, presided and the reports presented showed a good year's work, though the suggestion of the secretray, Dorothy Crossley, that a special effort be made during the ensuing year to increase the attendance at the monthly meetings will receive careful attention. The treasurer, Miss Lila Whyte, reported over $78.00 on hand when the mite-box contents had been counted; there are still some fees to come in. The Circle will fully meet its allocation for the nine months' year which is just closing.

After the devotional period Marjorie Skitch gave a reading, "A Home at Christmas Time", and Jean Burnham a missionary reading entitled, "The Difference." As this was the Christmas meeting all the hymns sung were appropriate to the season, and the address of the superintendent, Mrs. V. C. Lambert, given after a reading, "A Bright Circle Meeting" by Elinor I s, was listened to with close attention.

Mrs. Lambert stressed the matter of systematic giving and on motion this method was adopted for the next twelve months; the superintendent also made special mention of the result from following this Scriptural form of contributing in the case of one member particularly, Mrs. Weatherup, who had ten dollars in her mite-box.

The following officers were elected for 1928:

Honorary President—Mrs. V. C. Lambert.

President—Miss Jean L. Burnham.

Vice-President — Miss Majorie Skitch.

Secretary—Miss Dorothy Crossley.

Treasurer—Miss Lila Whyte.

Corresponding Secretary — Miss Elsie Spence.

Secretary Christian Stewardship—Miss Wilma Fallis.

Stranger's Secretary—Miss Elinor Fallis.

Mite-box Secretary—Miss Hazel McMahon.

Press Secretary— The recording and corresponding secretaries.

Auditors—Mrs. Lambert and Miss Burnham.

Pianist—Miss M. Skitch.

Sincere regret was felt that Mrs. McKnight resigned from the office of president which she has filled most efficiently for the past four years, and after the election, on behalf of the circle members, Miss Dorothy Crossley read a short address and Miss Wilma Fallis presented Mrs. McKnight with a dainty entree set in figured lustre china. The gift was a complete surprise to Mrs. McKnight, who replied suitably, and Mrs. Lambert added a few words expressive of the fine work which the retiring president had accomplished for the circle, the increase in membership, and the growing interest in the meetings evidenced in an enlarged attendance, and a willingness to take active part in anything undertaken for the welfare of the organization.

The honorary president and the president were appointed delegates to the Presbyterial meeting in January, and the treasurer was instructed to remit the tax of ten cents per member to the proper officer. Mrs. Lambert closed the meeting with prayer.

A social hour was enjoyed at the close when homemade candy and fruit were served.

"The best brakes ever developed for a motor car"— are on the Reo Flying Cloud—Try them out

"Every automobile manufacturer and every automobile engineer . . . who has subjected Lockheed Internal Hydraulic Four-Wheel Brakes to the most severe competitive tests, acclaims them the best brakes ever developed for a motor car."

THE HYDRAULIC BRAKE CO.
Automobile Topics, October 1, 1927.

The Reo Flying Cloud was the first car to have these brakes.

It appeared in January, 1927. We said then that we thought these were the best brakes any car, regardless of price, ever had.

Now comes the Hydraulic Brake Company, which makes other types of brakes than the Internal Hydraulic, but they know, as engineers know, which are the better.

They make tens of thousands more sets of external hydraulic brakes than they do of these internal hydraulics, yet they endorse the latter as the "best."

More costly? Yes. But Reo policy is to give the best regardless of cost.

But try them yourself

The best proof of this claim to the "world's best brakes" is a test that you make for yourself. So we hope you will ask for a demonstration. We want you to take a Flying Cloud out on slippery, greasy roads or streets. We want you to learn for yourself how swiftly, yet gently, they halt you in a straight line when you must STOP.

Be sure to try them out.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

IT WOULD BE NO EXAGGERATION to say that I have always been interested in newspapers. I believe that when I sat in my cradle and called for the clock to play with they handed me a newspaper instead. It wasn't that I was precocious and able to read! Oh, no! They just wanted to take my mind off the clock, so they gave me something that was handy and cheap! No doubt they thought the clock was more valuable than the newspaper. Perhaps it is—to some people—but not to me! There is no variety in what any reliable clock has to say. It just says the same thing at the same time all the year round. With the newspaper it is different. There is an ever changing panorama of happenings in all parts of the world, brought under our notice, in every newspaper that comes off the press. And, it is for this, as well as for many other reasons, that my love for newspapers seems to deepen with the accumulating years.

And I am interested in the men—and the women, too—who are engaged in the business of producing newspapers; especially those who are "in the game" for the love of it and not merely for a pay envelope! Let these things be accepted as my reason for setting out in the musings this week a few thoughts, about newspapers, which have passed through my mind. If they don't do anything else they will at least occupy the space placed at my disposal, and perhaps be of some interest to the man who sets them out in type while the most of us are asleep!

THE PRESS AT REST.

On my way home I looked into the office. All was quiet. The power was shut off, the cylinders ceased to revolve and the press was at rest. Copies of the paper were rushed upon the street—wagons were being piled with mailing sacks; the boys were out on their rounds making delivery and the desks were deserted. The paper was out and another task had been completed! The body longed for rest and the sigh of relief was fervent, but what if the paper were followed and its effects noted?

A head was necessary to such a product and somebody must be responsible, but could the parts of such a complex machine escape their separate and distinct portions of responsibility? The whole must bear a character—when the parts were joined deftly they sank out of notice and a new creation went on its way to effect for good or ill the more complex and more important body into which it would be absorbed by rapid digestion.

Just as a bit of food effects the human body for good or ill, so each of those bundles of paper enters into the life of the community and takes a share of responsibility for the life of a day.

WHAT THEY LOOK FOR.

The merchant looks to see whether his advertisement has been attractively presented and passes judgment on the effect it will have on his business. Another, a banker perhaps, eagerly turns to the reports of the markets in the great centres. To some the columns given to the sports have special attractions—they should be well written, graphically descriptive and accurately presented or there is dissatisfaction. These are business details and failures are promptly heard of at the office—to these it may mean dollars or the loss of them; mistakes are noted and the reputation of the paper largely depends on the propriety of its dealings with these interests. They are all important, and it pays to consider them.

WHERE DOLLARS COUNT FOR LITTLE.

There is another sphere into which the paper enters where dollars count for little. At a leisure moment the mother may scan the advertisements and plan her shopping on them, but she waits her time for this; the real reception of the paper is accorded on another basis. In his armchair the father reads the news stories and adds a little of his own wisdom—and the character of the children is being formed by what they hear even if they seem busy at other tasks. Just as surely as the continual dropping of water wears the stone, the influence of the paper, habitually accepted as the reporter and interpreter between the fireside and the outer world, grows gradually till it becomes second only to that of the family circle. Even when dissent is expressed the opinions of the paper fall upon the brain in its most receptive condition—young peopple may seem to forget, but the impressions made in youth come back in after years with the solemnity of a word from the vacant hearth or an admonition from the grave; the newspapers of this country have an important effect on its history because they are impressing themselves on the minds of children and are setting up convictions as well as imparting facts.

THE SUBSCRIBER'S PART.

If the advertiser supports the paper it is the subscriber who pays for white paper only, that passes judgment on its character and fixes its rank as a public institution worthy of acceptation or of burial.

A newspaper may grow in wealth and power while losing all character as a public institution. It may set up and pull down statesmen and parties and dictate to administrations without a single claim to abiding value save in the business world, just as a preacher may secure donations to build a great house of worship and organize a strong congregation without touching the hearts or influencing the lives of those committed to his hand.

THE NEWSPAPER'S HEAD.

Now, only a fool will fail to see that a body so complex must have a head responsible for it to the public. This head must bear a heavy burden. But everyone associated with him in the work of producing a newspaper should recognize that the most obscure member of the concern has his or her own share of responsibility which must be squarely faced and fairly shouldered if the whole is to be a success. If a small bolt in the press failed to perform its exact part in the mechanism the paper could not get itself printed; in a body composed of many individuals the responsibility of each to the head measures the responsibility of the head to the outer world.

Where thought and knowledge and hand and heart must combine with perfect mechanism to produce a finished product, no cog can escape a proper part of the common burden—each contributes to the whole and each should feel a vital interest in the character of the whole.

THE REAL TEST.

Now in what court shall the decision be made? First, there is the conscience of the worker; when a man does his best he has inner approval of his work. The head that overlooks judges the whole and gives a balanced verdict. But after these comes the final court of appeal sitting in the home, with the dog on the rug, the old man in the armchair, the mother placidly knitting and the children listening. Before this tribunal the newspaper stands the uttermost test. What effect is it having on those lives and thoughts and conclusions?

If it dare injure this audience it is guilty though it be held good and wise and great elsewhere—though it make millions for others and itself—though it set up statesmen and parties at will. Let the newspaper keep always in mind its appearance before this court—and let it fear and tremble lest it work harm rather than good.

—Allan Fairbairn.

People who are always hollering about their hard luck should see a throat specialist frequently so as to be in good trim when real misfortune comes along.

Newspapermen Take Heed!

IT will always be true that no newspaper is stronger than its editorial page. No matter how exhaustive its news may be, or incredibly large its volume of advertising, it will not be the power in the life of the people it ought to be if its editorial page is not a beating heart, pumping the red blood of virile ideas through the minds of its readers. The worth-while newspaper will aspire to leadership in another sense than that which leads to the cash drawer.—A.F.

Let The Editor Know!

THE life of the average newspaper man is a gay one. Gathering news is a second nature to him, like picking his teeth with the office pen or addressing the office towel in a profane way. Just the same, there is a limit to his omniscience. He may think of a million, eight hundred and fifty-nine thousand things of importance, besides a couple of hundred thousand small items unworthy of mention, and consider that it has been a slow week. And in all the things he has thought of your particular interest may have been overlooked. If so, whose fault is it? Call upon him or telephone him. He is quite human and very approachable.

Then, if the matter in which you are interested doesn't get into the paper, you may feel quite justified in going up to the office and kicking the stuffing out of the office exchange.

Remember that there are a great many people in the community. If the editor knew each of them by name, besides their family history and the chief events in the lives of every individual, he wouldn't be editor. He would be a demigog, resting his feet on a cloud and sipping ambrosia instead of inhabiting a broken-down office chair and wondering where the money for the next white paper bill is coming from, or how he is going to be able to scrape up enough hard cash to pay the hired help.

After all the editor is just a piece of common clay. And in that respect he is just like the rest of us. Only, some of us may be a great deal more common than he is. Like clay, there may be spots that are green; and I shouldn't wonder to find some spots a bit crusty under the scorching rays of criticism and fault-finding to which the best of editors are subjected. But, give the devil his due, even if he be a printer's devil! Think the best of him till you have proved the worst. Suspend your judgment and you will very often hang it. When you do I know a minister who, without money and without price, will be willing to conduct the funeral service. Save your pen and ink or your typewriter for love-letters. Such an investment of your talent for writing will bring you larger returns if you really mean business and will stick to it!—A.F.

A noble building magnificently furnished, hangings of varied brilliant colours looped up with gold and silver fastenings, a beautiful tesselated floor of vari-coloured marbles, everything betokening oriental splendour and magnificence. Two apparently regal personages surrounded by their attendants, one of these standing near to them is suddenly addressed by his sovereign. What makes that tremor on his face, followed by a pallid look? Has he been committing a crime, or plotting some evil design? Surely if one may judge by his countenance, that is not the face of a conspirator; and see—a change passes over it—there is just for a moment a far-away look in his eye, and then a calm expression settles upon his face. He speaks sadly, but earnestly, and then, as he observes the effect of his words, persuasively. His master's expression entirely loses that stern questioning glance, and sympathy and kindness seem to alternate in his mind; interest appears awakened, questions are asked and answered, and judging by the look upon the servant's face a marvellous answer has been received, far surpassing all that he could have thought or hoped.

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

BEGIN WITH A SONG! "I can't think what you find to sing about," said a blackbird to a thrush, who was pouring out a joyous carol from the top of an old stump.

"Can't you?" said the thrush. "I can't help singing when I am thankful."

"That's just it," said the blackbird; "I can sing as well as any one when there is anything to be thankful for; but the ground is as hard as iron, there isn't a berry in the gardens, and where I am to get my breakfast from I'm sure I don't know. Perhaps you have had yours?"

"Not yet," said the thrush.

"Well, I would wait for my song till I had found some food, if I were you," said the blackbird.

"I've never gone without it yet, and I've no doubt I shall find some presently; at all events, it is a fancy I have to begin the day with a song."

EDITOR OR DOCTOR?

AWAY back in 1916 I read something like the following, which, in spite of all our improvements, may still be true: If an editor makes a mistake he has to apologize for it, but if a doctor makes a mistake it is buried. If an editor makes one there is a lawsuit, swearing and the smell of sulphur, but if a doctor makes one there is a funeral, cut flowers and a smell of varnish. A doctor can use a word a yard long without having to give any evidence that he knows what it means, but if an editor uses it he has to spell it. Any old college can make a doctor. You can't make an editor; he has to be born. At times we are inclined to think that the birth rate is declining!—A.F.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

It is understood by The Examiner that some of the members of the Board of Education whose terms expire this year are contemplating withdrawing from the field.

The retiring members this year are Chairman E. Bruce Fowler, who has served six years; Dr. H. M. Yelland and Dr. J. J. Craig, who have been members of the Board for four years, and J. A. McNabb and E. R. Wilson, elected two years ago.

It is natural perhaps that men who have served two or three terms should begin to feel that they have carried their share of the burden, and that other citizens should be given a chance to take over a part of the duty of providing for the city's educational needs.

But at the same time there will be a general feeling among the citizens that members who have given full proof of their efficiency as administrators and of their interest in educational problems should remain in office at least until the new Collegiate Institute, that splendid building that long will be a testimony to their foresight and vision, has been completed.

The work was commenced during their term of office, and The Examiner is sure that public sentiment is accurately expressed in the statement that there is a widespread hope that they will again offer their valuable services to the community.

SHOP EARLY IN THE DAY.

In their own interest and on behalf of the staffs of Peterborough's stores, The Examiner urges the citizens of Peterborough who can do the balance of their Christmas shopping in the mornings to endeavour to complete their purchases early in the day.

There are many citizens who are in a position to shop in the morning, and not only because they will make conditions easier for others who cannot and for sales forces, already beginning to feel the nerve strain and exertion of the holiday rush, but because they will benefit themselves by getting more attentive service and a better selection early in the day, such citizens should not fail to do their buying before noon.

While there has been a considerable amount of Christmas shopping done since the beginning of the month, undoubtedly a large part remains to be finished, and a little co-operation on the part of those who are in a position to help will eliminate some of the congestion at the peak hour.

Shop early in the morning if you can; early in the afternoon if that is not possible, or early in the evening if you cannot get out until then.

In any event there is no real need for the bulk of Christmas buying being crammed into two or three hours a day.

FIRE PROTECTION FOR LAKEFIELD.

The need of more adequate equipment for Lakefield's Fire Department has been accentuated by the recent fire when the village pumper, after doing good service, failed just as assistance from Peterborough arrived.

Lakefield is fortunate in having one of the most efficient and enthusiastic volunteer fire departments to be found in Ontario in places of similar size, and there is a growing feeling among the citizens of the village that the fire brigade should be provided with a modern combination pumper of about 600 imperial gallons capacity in order that it may be in a position to cope with such fires as that of last week.

Cheaper insurance rates and a strengthened feeling of confidence among the people of Lakefield would undoubtedly follow the introduction of such apparatus, which is recommended by Chief Gimblett of the Peterborough Fire Department as likely to prove of the greatest service to the village.

No matter how willing and enthusiastic Chief Clark and his men may be they cannot be expected to provide adequate protection unless they have the necessary equipment available.

The combination pumper suggested would undoubtedly be a very material addition to Lakefield's protection against fire, and if it prevented only one good sized blaze a year it would pay for itself.

CLOSE TO TRAGEDY.

Since officials of the Border Transit Company began their investigation of the report that one of their buses, crowded with passengers, had had a narrow escape from being cut down by a railway train when the driver took a chance and speeded over a level crossing, the incident has been repeated.

The Examiner learns that on Thursday evening another crowded bus was almost hit by a C.P.R. train, the charge being that the bus driver did not stop at the crossing.

The company has requested passengers who were in the first mentioned bus to communicate with the president, and The Examiner feels that it is the duty of such passengers and also of those who were in the bus on Thursday evening to tell the heads of the Border Transit Company what they know about these narrow escapes.

The company has its rigid rules in regard to safety first conduct, and drivers are not expected under any circumstances to take chances.

That some of them have been violating the company's rules, and also the principles of ordinary common sense, seems evident from the stories of these two close calls.

Only a matter of a few feet in each case intervened between a hair-breadth escape and a tragedy that would have shocked the country.

A collision between a crowded bus and a train would undoubtedly have taken a heavy toll of life, and there should be no place in the operating staff of a public transportation service for drivers who risk the lives of a score or more people to save a few seconds time.

The Border Transit Company should have the assistance of those who know the facts in its endeavour to locate the offenders.

The matter is too serious to allow any feeling of sympathy for the guilty driver or drivers to interfere with what is a plain duty.

When the lives of passengers are at stake there can be no shirking of responsibility.

In the meanwhile every driver who sits at the wheel of a bus and is responsible for the safety of the passengers therein should resolve that time schedule or no time schedule, behind time or ahead of time, he will not cross a level crossing until he has assured himself that it is safe to do so.

Missing trains by a second or so is a gamble with death that cannot be tolerated under any conditions in the case of a public transportation service.

Drivers of the local bus system have in the main been uniformly careful and courteous since the buses have been in operation here, and The Examiner is confident that the publicity given these two near accidents will make a repetition of such incidents impossible.

POPULATION AND FOOD.

Professor J. Arthur Thompson, in John o' London's Weekly, revives the discussion of the growth of the population of the world, and its relation to food supply. He points out that the population of the globe, now about 1,700,000,000, has doubled since Malthus wrote his famous book. He says that apart from the arctic regions the earth's surface contains 33 billion acres, but only 40 per cent. of that is arable, that is about 13 billion acres. If 2½ acres be allowed for each person, the earth could support 5,200,000,000 people, and at the present rate of increase this figure, he estimates, will be reached in a little more than a century.

Canadians, producing so large a surplus of food that its disposal is one of our chief national problems, may find it difficult to conceive of the supply running short in the next century. We do not propose to question the scientist's figures, but it would be interesting to consider what men will do as the problem becomes acute. Canada's fertile lands will be taken up eagerly, and their produce will find a ready market. Tropical regions such as the valley of the Amazon and Northern Australia will be cultivated; the objection to living in a hot climate will be overcome by the eager quest for food. Vegetarianism, instead of being a fad, will be forced upon us by necessity, because, as agricultural experts agree, a given tract of land will supply a far larger amount of food in the form of grain than in the raising of stock. Professor Thomson says that some bio-chemical discovery may alter the whole aspect of the problem, but this is only an off-chance. He rests his hopes on a declining birth rate.

Incidentally Professor Thomson gives some comfort to those who fear that the white races may be swamped by those of other colors. The whites of Europe or of European origin are increasing at the rate of nearly eight millions a year, the browns at a little over one million, the yellows at a little over one and a half million, and the blacks at a little over half a million. If these figures are accurate, the whites are increasing far more rapidly than all the rest put together, so that our sleep need not be disturbed by nightmares of Asiatic hordes. China and India now contain a very large proportion of the world's population, but according to Professor Thomson they are falling behind in the race. The whites are crowded in Europe, but they control between four and five new Europes in America and Australasia; and it is because of this control, says Professor Thomson, that the rate of increase is so much higher for the white races. —London Advertiser.

TAXATION OF PUBLIC UTILITIES.

Owing to an agitation by Quebec electric service corporations for exemption from taxation—based on the fact that the Ontario Hydro services are exempt from taxation—a discussion is going on in the newspapers as to the rights or wrongs of the Ontario condition.

The opponents of exemption of the Ontario Hydro services argue that every public service should stand on its business merits, and that exemption is unfair to private competitors.

The champions of exemption of the Hydro argue that the Hydro services, unlike private electric service, do not look for profit—that they look merely to the lowest possible prices for the public—and that there would be no sense in paying taxes into the public treasury as the result would merely be to charge the public more for electricity. The Toronto Star puts the case clearly:

"Utilities which the people own are not run for profit. If a profit is made, it goes to reduce rates, or becomes a reserve for equalization of rates, or is utilized in some other way for the benefit of the consumer. It does not go into private pockets, and is therefore non-taxable. The privately and publicly-owned utilities are not 'on all fours,' because in the one case the profits signify private gain, and in the other case, public gain, and public gain only."

We do not agree. We think the best basis for public ownership is that the public should always know exactly the merit of the case. If a public-owned business does not pay taxes, its exact financial condition is camouflaged. It looks more prosperous than it really is. By this, the public may be misled as to its value. Better, we think, to have the business run under exactly the same conditions as private business.

The Ottawa Hydro pays some taxes, but not business tax. This is not the fault of the Ottawa Commissioners. They are prepared to pay the business tax, but the law of the Province forbids. In lieu, however, the Ottawa Hydro pays a considerable contribution towards certain service which it gets at the City Hall—although that service is almost purely nominal, and the Hydro does not really need it.

It would not hurt the public anywhere to have any public service pay similar taxes to those which private business pays. If any additional charge for service to the public became necessary, that exact amount would be going into the civic treasury by the taxes.—Ottawa Journal.

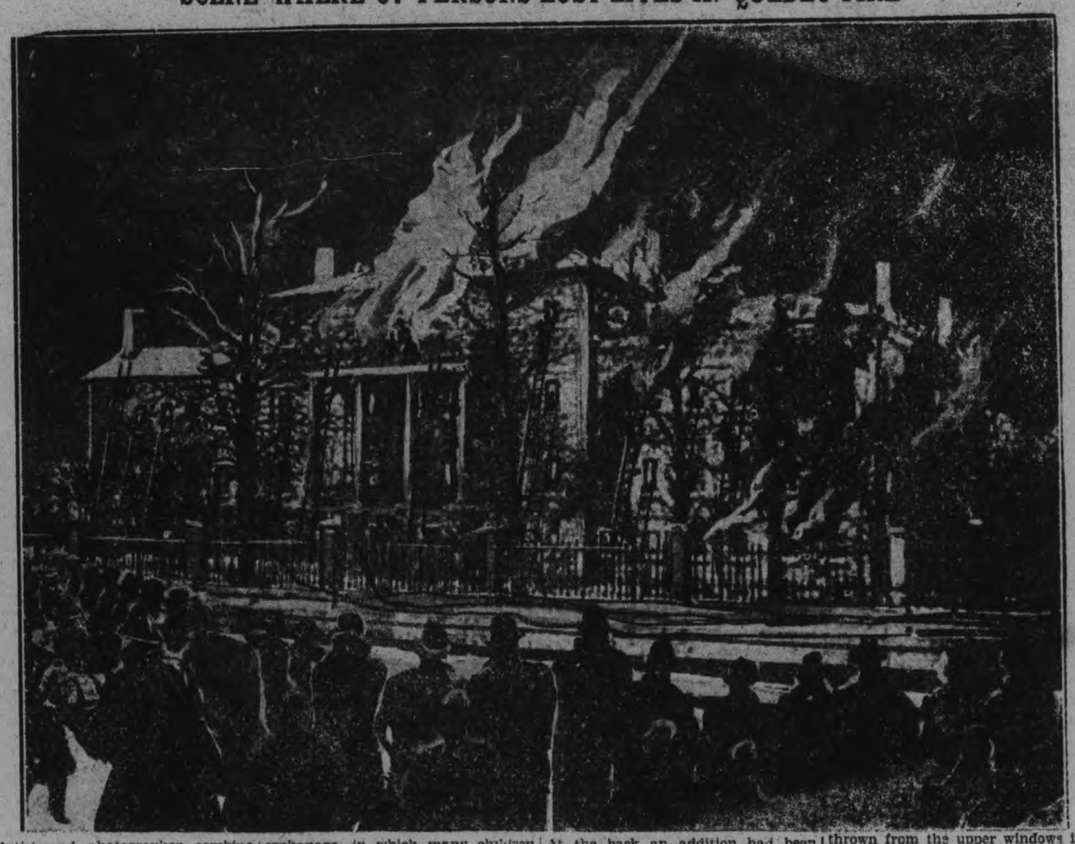
SCENE WHERE 37 PERSONS LOST LIVES IN QUEBEC FIRE



Artist and photographer combine in the above picture to illustrate the costly Quebec conflagration which destroyed the Hospice St. Charles, an orphanage, in which many children and a nun lost their lives. The building was originally erected for a marine hospital, and completed in 1334. At the back an addition had been erected, and from this newer portion the children were marshaled and conducted in order. Children were thrown from the upper windows into the nets held below. A human chain was formed to convey the dazed and frightened children across the street.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, December 17 (Canadian Press). — Grain premiums were advanced one cent a bushel yesterday in the east as a result of the Lake fleet tie-up in the vicinity of Sault Ste. Marie.

In sympathy with the strength in the future wheat market, cash prices for contract grades closed ¾c per bushel higher, though No. 2 Northern registered a decline of ¾c per bushel. No. 1 Northern was quoted at $1.33¾, No. 2 at $1.33¾, and No. 3 Northern at $1.23¾ per bushel, ex-store Fort William.

The wheat market declined about half a cent, after opening unchanged. There was some good buying by exporters on the recession, which took the slack out of the market and brought about some short coverings. This resulted in a price advance to half a cent over the previous day's close, the final quotation being ¾c per bushel higher.

The local market for oats was stronger, prices advancing ½c a bushel. A little trading in car lots passed, No. 2 Canadian Western selling at 77c per bushel, No. 3 C.W. at 74c per bushel. No. 1 feed at 73c per bushel, and No. 2 feed at 71c per bushel ex-store Montreal. Corn registered a rise of ¾c per bushel.

Unchanged conditions prevail in the flour market, with little new business reported. The ruling price for first patents are $8.00, second patents $7.40, and strong bakers $7.00 per barrel in jute bags, ex-track less 10 cents per barrel for spot cash.

No change was reported in the ruling prices for millfeed. Manitoba bran was quoted at $34.25; shorts, $36.25 ;middlings, $44.25 per ton, ex-track, less 25c per ton for spot cash. Standard grades of rolled oats marketed at $3.85 per bag of 90 pounds, delivered to the trade.

The local demand for hay was limited. Ruling prices were No. 2 Timothy, between $13.50 and $14.00 per ton ,and No. 3 Timothy between $12.50 and $13.00 per ton, f.o.b. cars Montreal.

Trade in butter showed no change. Eastern townships No. 1 pasteurized creamery ruled between 36¼c and 37c per pound. Current receipts bring in about 36 cents per pound.

Little business was done in the cheese market, with no change in the quoted price of 20¼c per pound. The undertone to the market for Western current receipts remained steady, No. 1 white and colored being quoted at from 18½c to 19c per pound.

The egg market was also unchanged, 43 cents being quoted for storage extras, cases included. Extras are quoted at 63 cents, firsts at 59c, and pullets' extras at 54 cents.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 17 (Canadian Press). — Pronounced strength developed in the corn market yesterday, and early setbacks in price were transformed into substantial gains. A jump in export bids indicated that Europe is trying to purchase corn in this country. Meanwhile, corn feeders in Illinois and in Eastern Iowa were said to be paying fancy prices for supplies. Wheat rallied with corn.

Closing quotations on corn were strong, ¾c to 1¼c net higher; wheat ½c to ¾c up ;oats showing ½c to ¾c to ¾c advance; and provisions varying from two cents decline to a rise of 2 to 5 cents.

Wheat and oats rallied when corn turned strong. Wheat values were earlier inclined to sag on account of gossip that the Argentine Government crop report was likely to make a bearish showing.

Provisions were easy as a result of scattered selling.

Baby Without Brain Allowed To Die; Doctor and Parents Say Death Humane

CHICAGO, December 16 (Canadian Press). — The possibility of a parallel to the Baby Bollinger case of twelve years ago was seen to-day when a baby girl, born without a brain, died in the hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cullen, parents of the infant, were quoted by the Herald and Examiner as agreeing that death would be more humane than the life of paralysis and imbecility to which the child was doomed had it lived. Hospital attendants said the child would have died in spite of any effort to save it. The newspaper quoted Dr. Schupmann, the attending physician, as saying the child would never have been able to think, talk or move and for that reason "we decided to allow nature to correct its own mistake."

Twelve years ago, the late Dr. Halseldon refused to operate on Baby Bollinger to save its life because it was hopelessly deformed.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

The friend who shot the man whose fee looked to him like rabbits should go hunting with a policeman and get some big game.

The burglar who stole a typewriter must have been reading some of the reporters' stories about the "winter crime wave."

The trouble with most uplifters is that they're so depressing.

MINISTER PLEASED WITH CO-OPERATION

Department of Highways Helped in Campaign For Safety, He Says.

TORONTO, Dec. 16. — "The Department of Highways feels much gratification for the co-operation extended from all quarters in the campaign for acident prevention this fall," stated Hon. George S. Henry, Minister, at the annual banquet of the Ontario Truck Owners' Association last night. "We feel that much good has been accomplished, and the results will carry far into the future. In the formation of the Highway Safety Committee, we set out to make our motor car drivers and the public generally more 'traffic conscious.' That is, we desired them to appreciate more fully the fact of the greatly increased traffic on our highways, and its consequent augmented dangers, and the need for care, courtesy and common sense.

"Reports we have received from all over the province confirm my own personal observations that our campaign can be characterized as successful. Since our motor traffic has assumed any proportions we have never had so little reckless or careless driving as we have had since this campaign was opened. On the other hand we have never enjoyed so much courtesy on the highways. Never to my knowledge have drivers shown so much respect for the rights of others.

"In addition reports from garages all over Ontario are to the effect that they have never had so much business in the adjustments of headlights and brakes. The campaign assuredly brought home to drivers that glaring headlights are a definite menace, and also the fact that slight adjustments of bulbs or lamps greatly reduce this menace. If the headlights and brakes of all cars in Ontario were in proper mechanical condition the problem of highway safety would be well on its way to solution.

"Incidentally the badge, 'I'm for care and courtesy. Are you?' which was attached to windshields did a great deal of good. It kept the idea of care constantly before the drivers. True, some people objected to this sticker, but we felt we had to do something out of the ordinary. Many cars still carry these stickers.

"I wish to thank the members of the Executive of the Highway Safety Committee, editors of newspapers, heads of municipal governments, the police chiefs, presidents of boards of trade, automobile clubs, service clubs, and the chauffeurs' associations. Had it not been for the work of these organizations our campaign would not have gone as far as it did."

DOCTOR ADDS TO CANCER CAMPAIGN

LONDON, Dec. 17. United Press.—A valuable addition to the campaign against cancer is described in this week's Lancet by Dr. Thomas Lumsden, who has accomplished some remarkable cures of cancer in rats. Dr. Lumsden conducts his research work in the Lister institute under a grant from the British Empire Cancer campaign.

He says his experiments prove that the body of the victim develops a resistance to the cancer infection but usually too late to resist its spread. His idea is to force the cancer to reveal itself earlier in the stage of its development. For this purpose he injects into the growth a solution of formalin which has a destructive effect upon the cancer cells. During this year he has treated tumors in 70 rats and has cured 54. Of 25 rats similarly treated since October last 24 have been cured.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith expected to see Nils, whose declaration of independence had amused as well as touched her, spring forward with irrepressible eagerness to accept Cherry's angry invitation to dance with her. But he remained standing beside the cretonne-covered settee, and there was only polite regret in his voice as he answered:

"I'm so sorry, Miss Lane! But if you'll excuse me I don't think I shall dance this evening. I'm leaving in a few minutes and I very much want to talk further with your sister about Rhoda."

Cherry's golden eyes blazed wide. "Oh, pardon me!" she cried, her voice sharp with scorn. "I was only trying to be courteous, but I suppose a farmer doesn't know any steps later than the square dance."

The music had started again and Bruce Patton came toward Cherry with arms outstretched, his slim, dapper body already weaving with the rhythm of the music. Cherry whirled into his arms, but Faith and Nils saw that the little face which she tucked against her partner's shoulder was quite pale with fury.

"She has a rotten disposition, hasn't she?" Nils laughed. "Jealous, too. Did you notice that she didn't close the door? She both wants to observe us and to have us observe her. I imagine we shall be treated to an expert demonstration of the art of flirting, if we don't keep our eyes resolutely turned away from that open door."

Faith frowned as her eyes searched his face. "I don't understand you, Nils. You aren't acting at all like a man in love. You should be blind to all her faults, but you seem to have picked them out with fiendish accuracy. Why do you love her if you can see through her so plainly?"

Nils' blue eyes became suddenly very serious, and Faith liked the expression of tender solemnity that settled upon his almost too-handsome face. "My only hope of happiness with Cherry, and by that I mean her happiness more than mine, is through my understanding of her. I don't love her less because I understand her. Neither do you! She's a spirited colt that needs breaking, Faith, for her own good. She's been kicking over the traces all her life, because no man stronger than she, more dominant, has ever loved her.

"I'm stronger than Cherry. She'll never dominate me, and if she really learns to love me, she'll not want to. Cherry needs a master; in fact, I'll wager that she frequently cries herself to sleep because she's never met her master. She's got a lot of fineness in her that's never had a chance to be developed because she's found it so easy to crack the whip over those who love her and thereby get anything in the world she wants. Who wouldn't be selfish and arrogant?"

"I've never seen her behave toward any other man as she has toward you," Faith told him, her voice puzzled and troubled. "She was rude to you last night, and she usually makes an attempt to charm any eligible man she meets within ten minutes. This morning she was pale and subdued, and tonight she refused to eat any dinner. When I took her a tray I found her sobbing her heart out. Oh, I shouldn't tell you all this!" she interrupted herself contritely. "Probably she is in some secret trouble which has nothing to do with you—"

"Don't do that!" Cherry's voice came sharp and shrill from the living room, followed by the unmistakable sound of a slap.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1927.

Again the clergy are subject to planetary influences making for much activity in unusual fields.

Campaigns in which leading ministers and priests will be prominent are foretold.

Marriage is to be widely discussed in churches as well as in legislative halls, it is prognosticated.

Warning is given that there may be dissensions in the churches as well as between religious organizations and outside groups.

Questions that bring out frequent clashes between mystics and scientists will be the cause of hard feeling, it is forecast.

Today should be favorable for bishops and churchmen in high place, for they will be heard with unusual attention.

In the evening association with prominent persons should bring benefits. The sway is encouraging for political conferences.

Church schools are to multiply in the next few years, if the stars are read aright and retreats where it is possible to escape from the turmoil of the world will multiply.

All the signs point to progress, which will be peculiarly disturbing to the aged who should know that the seers prophesy a healthy reaction from extreme license of speech and action.

For the British government this month may record events of much moment in history, astrologers announce.

Persons whose birthdate it is should have a year of steady progress. Study should be especially helpful.

Children born on this day should succeed in intellectual work. They may be especially liable to accidents and should beware of thieves.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1927

This is not an important day in planetary direction, according to astrology which finds minor aspects active.

The morning hours should be favorable to investigating new projects and outlining new fields of action.

The sway is most favorable to oil interests and seems to foreshadow expanding needs for by-products.

Fuel now comes under a sway making for rise in prices and in certain places a coal famine.

The latter part of the winter is to be severe, marked by unusual storms and likely to cause much suffering.

The seers declare that the period of upheaval marked by the World War will continue to be reflected in many physical conditions.

There is again a sign of promise for builders, architects and engineers.

Immense structures will rise in many cities and artistic bridges will add to the beauty of many centers of population.

Even though there will be a widespread awakening to the importance of civic art, new monstrosities in the way of advertising will appear to prove that in America the people are not yet truly loyal to the finer things, astrologers foretell.

Saturn and Mars are in a place supposed to be unfavorable for fire insurance companies.

Robberies will be even more numerous than in previous winters, it is foretold, for there is a sway supposed to protect evildoers.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a quiet year. Loss through a letter or document may be sustained.

Children born on this day usually prosper through their own talents. They are lovers of the sea which brings them good fortune.

IF I WERE SANTA CLAUS.

Peterborough Men and Women Tell What They Would Do If They Had the Power of Saint Nicholas.

The following ladies' opinions on what they would do if they were Santa Claus were inadvertently left out of Wednesday's edition:

Mrs. H. E Connolly, 585 King Street: "I would try to do something for the men who are out of work and who have no money coming in for Christmas. There are many with large families who have no way of getting money ahead, and then when they are without work at this season, it means a lean holiday for themselves and their children. I know it is nice to help old people at Christmas time, but many of them have lived happy lives and they have pleasant old thoughts to look back on. But, oh, those poor children!"

Mrs. H. Beal, 317 Frederick Avenue. —"I would give to the poor, and especially to the children, everything that would ensure them a happy Christmas.

Mrs. D. Carmichael, 132 Brock Street: "I would try and make everyone happy, especially the children and the old people. I would go to the homes and to places where there are children who are not looked after well by their parents, and I would try and give them a pleasant Christmas."

Mrs. F. C. Neal, 314 Rubidge Street. "If I had a lot of money, I would like to hunt out the children who have ambitions and can't do anything with them; the boys and girls who would like to go to college and have to work instead in factories; those who are denied a career because of lack of means. Little boys and girls are pleased with small things at Christmas time. A few bright toys will make them happy. I would like to spend the year in searching out the older ones who lack a few hundred dollars to help them to an education ,and then give them the money at Christmas time."

FOUND HIS MONEY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—After driving from Union City, N.J., to West New York, Grant Saddlemin discovered that he had lost somewhere along the route a handkerchief in which was rolled $470. He went to bed, but not to sleep. After midnight, he dressed and retraced his course on foot. In the gutter of a busy street intersection he found the handkerchief—and the money.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

If it's badger it is up-to-date. This navy-blue cloth coat has generous collar and cuffs of this most favored of all the season's furs.

The various weasel cousins undoubtedly belong to one of the very first families of fur-bearing animals, and there is never a season when one weasel or another is not in high repute. Mink, ermine and sable are the most aristocratic members of the weasel connection. Otter, baum and stone marten, civet cat, fisher, fitch, sea otter, skunk, wolverine and pahmi are other distinguished members. And now badger, which is usually regarded as one of the substantial, but not especially fashionable cousins has suddenly come into prominence and is ranked with mink, ermine and sable, if not in costliness at least in smartness.

As a trimming for coats badger takes a prominent place this season, but the honors are in a measure divided with lynx which, as you know, is a member of the cat family and one of the silkiest of all furs.

There is great variety in fur styles this season. Any fur of really good quality is in fashion and the most noteworthy style trend so far as I can see is the trend toward furs of better quality. This tendency away from cheap imitations is as apparent in furs as it is in jewelry. Obviously cheap imitation pearls no longer pass muster as they once did, and coney or rabbit, ingeniously dyed and shorn pluck and otherwise disguised, no longer takes the place in the well dressed woman's wardrobe of mink and sable, ermine and seal.

Pigeon gray is a color that has been much affected by well-dressed women recently. Pale pink has been worn a good deal for evening also. Mrs. George T. Brokaw wearing an evening gown of this tone embellished with emerald ornaments recently called forth much admiration.

"DEACON DUBBS"

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 16.—The Sewing Circle of Knox United Church, Peterborough, presented their three-act comedy-drama, "Deacon Dubbs" in the Lakefield Memorial Hall on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of Knox United Church, Lakefield.

The attendance was not as large as was hoped for but there was a fair sized crowd which would have been larger had the weather been more propitious.

The play was amusing with several good comedy parts and it was as a comedy that it scored, as the heavier parts were not so well sustained and the big moments, from the dramatic point of view, fell rather flat.

Deacon Dubbs was a scream and, although his accent was more reminiscent of old Erin than of West Virginia, he played up well throughout, playing his part with a lack of affectation and a spontaneous gaiety which held the audience. The part of Major McNutt, the auctioneer, although small, was well played and a real dramatic ability was shown in the last act when he gravely announced the death of Rawdon Crawley to the group of merrymakers at the husking bee.

The part of the dumb (?) hired man, Deuteronomy Jones, was well taken by Mr. J. Lancashire, who scored a success from the first and sustained his part well throughout. Miss Philipena Popover was a difficult part well played by Mrs. Laing, who kept the audience in roars of laughter as she ran the gamut of human emotions. She never overdid her part and was one of the outstanding characters. Trixie, the "cut-up" did well and made a good foil for the more sedate young ladies of the cast. The handsome, vain Miss Dale was a well taken part, also the Swedish maid who kept the ball rolling, never lacking pep and never losing track of her object, the persistent pursuit of the reluctant Deuteronomy. The parts of Amos Coleman, Rawdon Crawley and Rose Rawleigh were good but one felt that they could have been stronger in the dramatic climax at the end of the second and in the third act.

However the play was amusing and ended happily and provided entertainment well worth a large audience.

The musical numbers were particularly good especially the male quartette composed of Messrs. Stanley Willis, A. Pitchford, Hughes and Gerard who rendered "The Minstrel Boy" in rousing style responding to a well merited encore with "The Harp that once Thro' Tara's Halls," which they sang equally well, the voices being well balanced and sympathetic. Miss Black sang "Moonlight and Roses" sweetly. Mr. Willis sang a solo also between the first and second act and responded to an encore.

Mr. Pitchford rendered the "Old Fashioned Town" in excellent voice, responding to an encore with "Life is What You Make It."

Mr. Hughes sang the old favorite "I'm Off to Philadelphia in the Morning."

The cast of characters of the play was as follows:

Deacon Dubbs—Mr. C. M. Watson.
Amos Coleman, a lawyer, the Deacon's nephew—Mr. Bob Allen.
Rawdon Crawley, "a wolf in sheep's clothing"—Mr. D. Gillespie.

Reports from the Bay of Quinte Conference Committee in connection with the United Church's Maintainence and Extension Fund cover a number of presbyteries. Rev. G. A. Williams, conference organizer, states that canvasses are still in progress in many circuits, with a number seeking to raise the amount of their twelve months' allocation in the present short year of nine months.

In Kingston Presbytery, with the city churches giving a good lead in missionary givings, the expectation is that several town and village charges will go well beyond the three-quarter mark toward meeting the twelve month allocation. Elginburg is sure of the nine months' amount and is aiming at the twelve month total in order to help offset any shortcomings elsewhere and to assist in stabilizing missionary finance.

Wiping Out Deficit

Cobourg is completing the canvass, with likelihood of going slightly over the three-quarter mark. Port Hope is believed to be sure of contributing on a similar scale before the year is out. As there remained a shortage of $215,000 on the 1926 objective for the whole United Church of Canada, these strong town churches are being asked to take care of a portion of the deficit by giving more than the three-quarters of the 1927 allocation.

With the present year running only from April 1 to December 31, a shorter period than usual has been available for active campaigning for the Maintenance and Extension Fund. As a result, a number of speakers have been visiting the circuits in the Bay of Quinte Conference, urging a higher standard of weekly offerings for the current year as a means of wiping out the deficit and opening up 1928 with a balanced budget.

Began at Whitby

At the famous laymen's conference held in Whitby College early this fall, it was decided to recommend to the pastoral charges that twelve months' offerings be given before the nine months ended. This slogan has since been heard and responded to at numerous banquets and group meetings in the presbyteries of this conference, with the result that the historic Bay of Quinte district is out to set a new record for Maintenance and Extension Fund givings.

Organization has been highly effective in Renfrew Presbytery, when Rev. J. A. Macdonald of Korea, and Rev. H. D. Taylor, of China, have been special speakers. Wesley Church, Pembroke, and the Bathurst, Althorpe and Dalhousie churches are expected now to be in the van with payment in full of the year's allocation within the shortened period. The Presbytery as a whole will, it is estimated, raise almost 84 per cent of its annual allocation in nine months, ending December 31.

Must Register.

SHANGHAI, China, Dec. 17.—(A. P.)— That the Nanking Nationalist government has launched a campaign throughout its territory to round up Soviet subjects, forcing their registration was revealed last night by Que Tai Chi, Nationalist vice minister of foreign affairs.

"Soviet subjects must register with the Nationalist authorities by December 23," he said, "otherwise they will be arrested."

The Nationalist bureau for foreign affairs in Shanghai last night issued a proclamation calling upon Soviet subjetcs in Shanghai to apply to the bureau for registration or reception of passports.

Que Tai-Chi stated in this connection: "I do not expect many reds to remain. If they do and agitations continue, we will establish a detention cam pand force them to live in it."

Que Tai-Chi revealed also last night that a raid made yesterday upon Hankow was ordered by the Nanking Nationalists.

HUMANE SOCIETY PLANNING MEETING

Will Ask Magistrate Brown of Toronto To Give Address.

The regular meeting of the Peterborough Humane Society was held last night in the Chamber of Commerce. The president Dr Thomas Johnston presided. The treasurer reported a cash balance of $94.96. The treasurer also presented a cheque for $20 from the ex-president, C. H. Ackerman, for the small animal home, which is to be soon completed. F. Goodfellow was then appointed as a member of the executive. After some discussion regarding arangements for the annual meeting, it was decided to ask Magistrate R. P. Brown, of Toronto, to address the meeting. Mr. Brown is a real humanitarian and delighted the audience when he addressed the last annual meeting.

CHURCH THROWN INTO CHAOS

charity "in this time of confusion and anxiety."

"Everyone will recognize the gravity of the situation which has arisen with regard to the life, the work and the worship of the Church of England," the Archbishop's statement read. "The Archbishops of Canterbury and York will issue a statement next week, after consultation with other bishops, which may help to guide the clergy and the laity of the church in this time of confusion and anxiety.

"The Archbishops feel assured of prayers on their behalf, and, pending the issue of such statement, ask that patience and charity be exercised and precipitate words and acts avoided."

Opposed Measure

Sir William Joynson - Hicks, the Home Secretary, who is credited with delivering one of the best speeches of his career in opposing the revised prayer book in the House of Commons, is quoted by The Evening Standard as saying, "I have always been convinced that the great mass of English people were Protestant to the core. The bishops have completely mistaken the view of the ordinary man in the church.

"The decision is now clear," Sir William continues, "and it is time for us all to work together to consolidate the church on old lines, putting away the new doctrines of Anglo-Catholicism and working wholeheartedly with the great non-conformist church for the good of the whole land. The book is dead now."

It was brought out yesterday that an error had been made in the official tabulation of the vote, which was originally announced as 247 to 205. The actual vote was 238 to 205, leaving a majority against the revised book of 33 votes.

Although Premier Baldwin recommended its adoption, the issue was not political, and members of rival political parties found themselves on common ground when the vote on this question was taken.

A very large congregation was present at George Street United Church on Sunday evening and listened with rapt attention to Rev. J. E. Todd's eloquent and thoughful sermon. The reading lesson was taken from the 14th chapter of St. Luke, and the theme was "Service.

Mr. Todd spoke of the privilege the disciples had of being with the Master when He was in the flesh and of listening to His teachings. Jesus was always projecting Himself in terms of someone else. Most people lay out a program in terms of themselves for this week, next week, next year.

"Emotional religion, not all," said the pastor. "It is not enough to get right with God. You must also establish right relationship with your fellow-men and follow it up with service for the Master. Christianity to be lived out in all its grandeur must express itself in the form of service. To be a patriot you cannot be judged by the cheering and flag-waving you do on July 1st or 24th of May or on the amount of money spent in fire-crackers. The time comes to every man and woman when we must prove our patriotism. At the time of the Great war, when conscription was brought into force, the country placed its hand upon a man's shoulders and said, 'You are not your own; you belong to me.' Men and women, the day is dawning when a hand will be laid on your shoulders, saying, 'You are not your own.' What are you going to do about it?

"After professing religion for years and after enjoying all the luxuries and advantages of the church, are you going to repudiate it or acknowledge its right for your best service? Have we taken this matter seriously? If not, let us do so.

"One of the special things that Jesus denounced was a man who was useless. A useless man is an out and out opponent of God."

Mr. Todd quoted parables from the Scriptures, in which God condemned the useless person. The Levite, who came down from Jerusalem and passed by on the other side. Lazarus and the rich man who was sent to hell because he was useless. The rich young ruler who was not active in the upbuilding of the kingdom. The sheep and the goats. The goats were consigned to everlasting punishment because they were useless. Others were the father with two sons, the men with the talents, the three kinds of soil, salt that lost its savor, people like the barren fig tree, light under a bushel. As Christ spoke of the condemnation of individuals He also referred to institutions in the same way.

The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath, as many people of to-day seem to think. The reason for not observing the Sabbath is often given as money needed; must have our fun. "Men and women, can we do without our Sabbath?" he asked.

The church—if the church of today is not serving a definite purpose in the lives of men and women, it is useless.

The home — Jesus was always thinking about the home life and anything that brings suffering and desolation into homes strikes a blow at the heart of a nation. "Let us protect and guard our homes so that they do not become useless," urged Mr. Todd.

In conclusion the pastor said: This is not a day to be neutral in things that count for the Master. Let us catch the Master's vision of true service and go out and give ourselves to the very end.

LADIES LODGE HOLDS ELECTION

Campbellford L.O.T.B. 429 Re-elects Last Year's Officers.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 17.—The local ladies' lodge of the L.O.T.B., No. 429, spent a very pleasant evening when they met in their lodge rooms for the purpose of electing their officers for the coming year. After the usual ceremonial opening, Worshipful Mistress Ayrhart thanked the ladies for the very great assistance in the affairs of the Lodge during the year and expressed a sincere wish that they would continue to be successful under the new officers which they would presently elect. The results of the voting follow:

Sister Ayrhart was re-elected for the Mistress' chair, as was also her deputy, Sister Tripp. Sister Mary Phillips will again be recording secretary; Sister Carter is finance secretary. Sister Phillips was re-elected treasurer, as was Sister (Mrs.) John Ivey, chaplain; Sister (Mrs.) Ben Ivey, director of ceremonies; Sister Scott (J. Scott), conductor; and Sister Scott, inside tyler. The outside tyler will be Sister Clarke. The committee will consist of Sisters Potts, McArthur, Blakeley, Samson and Ivey. The social committee will be Sisters Clarke and Nichols. Sister Dulce Carter will be pianist and the auditors for the coming year are Sisters Carter and Sampson.

After the election had been completed the gentlemen of the Order entertained the ladies at a banquet. Their generosity was duly repaid by the sincere expressions of gratitude from the ladies. During the banquet, Brothers Long, Ivey and Adams spoke briefly.

As a very enjoyable feature of the program, the presentation to Worshipful Mistress Ayrhart deserves special mention. The address was read by Sister Tripp:

Dear Sister Ayrhart: We, the officers and members of L.O.T.B., 429, desire to in some way show our appreciation of your untiring effort to promote the welfare of this Lodge. We ask you to accept this small token of remembrance.

Signed on behalf of the Lodge members,

Sister B. Ibey and Sister A. Tripp.

Although Sister Ayrhart was very much surprised and embarrassed, she managed to reply briefly but fittingly. The evening closed with the singing of "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow."

CAMPBELLFORD MUST VOTE FOR BREWERS STORE

Association Points Out That It Was Local Option Town.

WAREHOUSE NOT LEGAL.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 17. — All members of the council were present at the final meeting of the year. There were no important matters to be discussed and the session was much shorter than usual. After the customary opening formalities, a letter from Susan Watters was read. It referred to an account which she had paid for repairs to a broken water pipe and which she had since been led to believe would be paid by the council. After a brief discussion, the letter was laid on the table.

A second communication was from the Liqour Control Board. This was in reply to a communication sent from the town asking for information regarding the establishing of a brewery warehouse here. The letter stated that the matter had been placed in the hands of the proper authorities and that the town would hear from them direct. It was also pointed out that the board did not establish the warehouses. The brewers themselves selected the locations and the board merely sanctioned or disapproved the locality. A letter from the brewers' association pointed out that a warehouse in Campbellford was not permissable since the town had been a local option town before the O.T.A. Until such time as this measure was done away with by the vote of the citizens, no warehouse could be located here. Upon motion, the letters were received and filed.

There were only two tenders for the public weigh scales. These were from George Third and Harold Jones. After a brief discussion the matter was voted on and the scales will be operated by Third. Councillor O'Sullivan was authorized to collect the amount due the town from the market scales last year and to attend to the matter of an operator for the scales for next year.

The necessary bylaw for the coming municipal election was brought in by Deputy Reeve Davidson and passed. By this by-law, the polling places are set for ward one, in the town hall, for ward two in the Herald Printing Office, for ward three in the armouries, and for ward four in Ed. Henson's shoe shop. The deputy returning officers for ward one will be M. Mulhearn and P. J. Kelly, with W. I. Stillman and Ernest Bayes as poll clerks. In ward two J. D. Cumming and Jack Allan will be in charge. In ward three the returning officers will be Charles McGrath and John Arnold, with W. O. Dorie and Walter Lowe as poll clerks. In ward four George Whitlaw and Levy Witcher will be the officers. The usual rental of four dollars will be paid for the polling booths and the deputy returning officers and poll clerks will receive five and four dollars respectively.

Deputy-Reeve Davidson then took occasion to remind the council of the condition of the windows in the town hall and jail building. These were mostly broken and a vagrant applying for a night's lodging in the police station had been nearly frozen to death in spite of the amount of fuel that had been burned in an attempt to heat the building. In view of the coming election Mr. Davidson thought the matter should receive immediate attention. The Police committee was authorized to attend to this matter and were given the option of replacing the windows with ordinary glass or some of the unbreakable variety.

The accounts and pay sheets were passed on motion of Councillor Wiggins and Reeve Bygott.

Councillor Stone opened a discussion on the matter of applications for charity which he was receiving daily. He said that he had been criticized from certain quarters for being too liberal. In the opinion of the council Mr. Stone was considered to be doing his work very satisfactorily. The discussion drifted to the possible ways and means of providing employment for people who were able to work and several ideas were submitted. While none of these were officially accepted, it is expected that when they are put into force there will be a very small number of charity cases in Campbellford. In the opinion of the council a considerable percentage of those applying for assistance could find employment if they wished. In one case, an applicant had refused to work when a job was offered him. He thought he was too good for it. It was such cases that the councillors believed should be otherwise dealt with. They realized that there were certain cases very deserving of assistance from the town, and were of the opinion that these would be a sufficiently heavy drain on municipal funds without including many others.

BANQUET HELD.

On Friday, Dec. 9th, in the Agricultural Office, Port Hope, a most enthusiastic and successful annual meeting of the Durham County Holstein Breeders' Association was held. About thirty-five members were present and following the business of the meeting, election of officers was held. These resulted as follows:

President—H. Seymour, Cavan.

Vice-Pres.—A. J. Runnals, R.R. 1, Port Hope.

Sec.-Treas.—H. Jose, Newcastle.

Directors and Sales committee were appointed.

At one o'clock the members of the Association met in the Queen's Hotel and enjoyed a splendid banquet. Prof. Wade Toole, O. A. C., Guelph, in a comprehensive address gave the breeders encouragement and some good suggestions for more effectively carrying on their work. R. M. Holtby, Port Perry, Canadian Holstein fieldman, told of the rapid strides that this breed had made in Canada and of the bright future for dairying in Ontario. J. Y. Kellough, Agricultural Representative, complimented the Association on their banquet and enthusiastic meeting and stated that the Department of Agriculture were trying to inaugurate a better live stock campaign and a better seed campaign. He also asked that the Association take an interest in the junior farmers of the county. The next annual meeting of the Association is to be held in Newcastle, December, 1928.

MAN IDENTIFIED.

Young Man From Selkirk Found in Belleville Had Lost Memory.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—The young man found wandering about the city two days ago suffering from loss of memory was identified last evening as Harry Siple, a married man with two children, of Selkirk, a village in Haldimand County, near Hamilton, Ontario. His wife recognized the description of him sent by the Canadian Press, and last night his father, with a son-in-law, arrived and immediately identified him.

Siple had been taken to the hospital and at first did not recognize his father. The party to-day left for their home. It is believed Siple had been missing since he went to Hamilton from Selkirk on Monday. How he reached here is not known.

GOLDEN TEXT—God, having of old time spoken unto the fathers in the prophets by divers manners, hath at the end of these days spoken unto us in his Son.—Heb. 1:1, 2.

The eleven lessons of this quarter have dealt with six of the early prophets of Israel and Judah whose work covered a period of about two hundred years, roughly speaking from about 900 B.C. to 700 B.C. Who, and what, were these prophets? Were they strange magical preachers who came from another realm with uncanny powers of foreseeing events that were to befall the nations and with remarkable powers of performing miraculous deeds?

It is largely the magical and foretelling aspect of the prophet that has gained attention in history and in the study of the Bible until comparatively recent times. In these latter days it is the forthtelling aspect of the prophet that has been profoundly emphasized.

The prophet may have had unusual gifts of foresight; he may have had in strange ways premonitions of impending happiness or doom. One would be indeed full of temerity were he to say that in history there have been no such justifiable premonitions. But the more one considers these lessons with care the more strongly there is enforced upon one's mind the fact that the prophet was primarily a great preacher to his age. Nor was he even a preacher in the sense of being different from his fellows.

Called From Daily Work.

One thing that has been strongly emphasized has been the way in which the call to the prophetic office came to men in the ordinary pursuit of their daily work. It is to Amos, the herdsman, attending to his duties, that the call comes. It is to Hosea, the husbandman, concerned with his fruit growing, that the call comes to seek higher fruits in the life of the nation.

It was not because these men were inherently different from their fellows that God called them, but because as men among men they had discovered in their daily lives the plain truth of God and given it divine application.

In an age of much outward prosperity they penetrated with critical judgment into the underlying facts and forces of the nation. They faced the problem of poverty and they found that at the heart of it there was much injustice and social wrong.

They asked with pointedness how a nation could really have any permanence in its prosperity while the poor were disregarded and the righteous sold for a pair of shoes. They brought the plumbline of elemental right to bear upon relationships man with man, and in an age when religion was still largely formal, a matter of sacrifice and ritual, these clear visioned men had the spiritual power to see that it is the sacrifices of the heart, a man's real attitude toward God and his fellowmen, that constitute the reality of true religion.

In indelible words for all time Micah defined the ultimate elements of true religion as doing justice, loving mercy, walking humbly with one's God.

Isaiah's Warning.

In the later phase of this prophetic period Isaiah in some measure takes up all that has gone before and applies it to the nation in a time of crucial need and peril.

Here is Israel, a little buffer state in danger from surrounding warring empires. How can it preserve the integrity of its own soul? How can it hope to maintain its place and influence in the world? There is but one hope—it is the hope of a clear unswerving fidelity to God and to the things of righteousness and honor. Will the nation go down that puts its faith and its trust in these things, that leaves its destiny in the hands of God?

There is no assurance of absolute external safety, but this is the profound truth that the history of Israel revealed—that a nation or an individual, living for God in safety or in danger, in success or in defeat, will inevitably fulfill its highest mission. Do we doubt this? Think of the nations that have been swept away that put all their reliance upon force!

What today are the influences of these great empires and their military leaders? Even out of that very age the world derives its greatest boon from the teaching of these Hebrew prophets unknown or despised in their own day. How utterly regardless of them the monarchs and military commanders of that age must have been!

How little they realized that in centuries to come they would themselves be well-nigh forgotten while the world, with increasing intensity and devotion, would be studying the teachings of those who had profoundly placed national life and national influence within the realm of devotion to God!

DISTRICT CHURCHES

ST. JOHN'S, HAVELOCK

HAVELOCK, Dec. 17.—On Sunday, December 11, anniversary services were held in St. John's Anglican Church in celebration of its 38th anniversary. Rev. C. W. Holdsworth of Islington, a former incumbent, was the special preacher and delivered thoughtful and inspiring addresses at both services. The altar was decorated with flowers sent by Mrs. Baker of Kingston, in memory of her father, the late James Scott.

The morning subject was "What lies at the bottom of true membership in the Christian Church," based on the 5th verse of the 15th chapter of St. John, "I am the Vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in me and I in him the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing."

"The church has many branches which contribute to its success," Mr. Holdsworth said. "Banish failure from your minds and always think of success because there is no absolute failure in connection with the church. Christ 'Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it' The members are the main factor which makes for success in the church and when we consider the church, not as a building of brick, stone and mortar, but as a congregation of human souls, we are then in a position to discuss what true membership means.

"If the church is to prosper, the members must have a due responsibility and proper appreciation of the duties of their membership. A member that does not function automatically becomes a liability. Three ways are recorded," he said. "In the New Testament, in which Christ was related to the church; first the Vine and the branches; all branches draw life from the vine: second, St. Paul likened the church to the human body with Christ as its head, the guiding mind of the church and third, to a foundation, and the fundamental question was—am I united to Him? Because, apart from Christ there is no life, no mind, no foundation. Life does not depend on rites and ceremonies, but upon being grafted into the body of Christ. It is the business of the branch first to stay on the vine and, secondly, to bear fruit. Branches that would not bear fruit were cut off, but the fruit-bearing branches were cared for. Addition, not subtraction," Mr. Holdsworth said in closing was the principle on which we want to proceed with in the Christian Church and the secret of power was prayer.

At the evening service the text was 1 Corinthians 12-12—"For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ. Many gifts, the speaker said, were bestowed on the early church, according to the wisdom of God: words of wisdom, faith, gifts of healing, working of miracles, divers kinds of tongue and interpretation of tongues, and these gifts bestowed by the same spirit instead of being regarded as parts of one whole body by the Corinthian Church because the object of strife and contempt because they lost sight of the oneness of the church, and that there should be no division, no matter how varied the gifts to the members. St. Paul wanted them to understand that the distribution of these gifts should form a unity with Christ, the head of the Church, and in the church today some points that really do not matter assume a matter of tremendous importance and thus destroy harmony. The need of the church is a spirit of democracy, love and sacrifice, which is in accordance to Christ's teachings because He came to minister and there was nothing He would not do except sin. In closing, Mr. Holdsworth pointed out that as all members are one body, people of varied talents, the minister, teacher, scholar, business man, philanthropist and those from the most humble walks of life, were all essential to make up the church, Christ's body, each member not to shirk the responsibility of their gifts, but to use them and work harmoniously in a spirit of love and sacrifice.

Holy Communion was Celebrated at the morning service and special music was rendered at the evening service which included an anthem by the choir, "Ascribe Ye The Power" and a vocal solo by Mrs. Bacchus.

GIL MOUR MEMORIAL

The Caledonian Choir, led by Mr. Alex. Clark, attended the Gilmour Memorial Church on Sunday morning and supplied the musical part of the service. They sang as their opening piece, "Awake, The Morning Bells Are Ringing," by Veazie. Mrs. Jackson sang "I Heard The Voice of Jesus Say;" the choir sang "The Long Day Closes," by Sir Arthur Sullivan, and "The Angelus" by Vincent Wallace. Mr. Wm. Greaves sang "Flee As a Bird To The Mountains," and Mr. Cooper sang a solo.

The pastor, the Rev. W. S. Edgar, preached on John Knox, taking as his text John 1-6—"There was a man sent from God, whose name was John."

"The reference in this text, as we all know," said Mr. Edgar, "is to John the Baptist, the forerunner of Christ, the fearless preacher of righteousness, the man who dared to rebuke a wicked king, and who spoke the truth even though it cost him his life. While thinking on this subject, my mind went back over the past, and I conjured up before me a number of illustrious Johns, who have been connected with Christianity and the church, all of whom it may be said were sent from God. First there was the Apostle John, the writer of this gospel, the beloved disciple of Christ, then there was John the Baptist to whom reference has already been made, then there was John Wycliff, one of the first to give us the Bible in English language, also John Bunyan, the immortal dreamer of Bedford, the author of Pilgrim's Progress; John Calvin, the great Protestant reformer, John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, John Milton, the Christian poet and John Bright, the Christian statesman. But I want this morning to speak of another John, who is not unworthy to be ranked with those already mentioned. I refer to John Knox, the great Scottish Reformer, the man who saved Scotland from the blight of ignorance and superstition and brought the light of the knowledge of the gory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

"John Knox was born in Scotland, about 1515, of humble origin. As a young man we find him as a tutor to a gentleman's family, and in 1540 he was a Roman Catholic priest, but one whose mind was gradually turning toward the teachings and doctrines of the New Testament. In 1545-46 he followed George Wishart that noble Scottish martyr, who was burned at the stake by Cardinal Beaton for reaching the truth of the New Testament, which you and I listen to every Sunday. Wishart's death seemed to fire Knox with a holy fervor, so that he became a flaming witness for the truth and seemed determined to preach it even though it meant treading in the footsteps of John the Baptist, and George Wishart and meeting a similar fate. He became chaplain to the garrison that held St. Andrew's castle, after Cardinal Beaton's death. Cardinal Beaton was slain by the friends of the Reformation for his part in the martyrdom of George Wishart. Thus Knox received his inspiration and his call to the task of reformer from the death of George Wishart, much the same as the Apostle Paul received his first impulse towards becoming the apostle to the Gentiles from the death of Stephen, the Christian martyr.

"The preaching of Knox in St. Andrew's castle, added fuel to the fires of the Reformation; this so exasperated his enemies that they secured a French army, took the town of St. Andrew's put the garrison to the sword, made Knox a prisoner, and for the next two years he was a galley slave. He was released at the intercession of the English government, by whom he was employed for five years in Berwick, Newcastle and London, helping forward the Reformation under Edward the Sixth.

"He was offered a bishopric, but declined to accept it. When the king died and Mary Tudor ("bloody Mary") came to the throne and persecution broke out once more against the Reformers, Knox had to flee the country. He escaped to the continent of Europe, and for some years he was minister to the English congregation at Geneva. Here he was brought into touch with the great John Calvin, and worked in full harmony with him. He was a disciple of Calvin and his doctrines were Calvinistic, and varied little from Presbyterian doctrine as we know it to-day.

"In 1555 Knox returned to Scotland and set out on a preaching tour through the country, everywhere winning people by the hundreds to the new cause. Bent on staying the triumphs of Knox, and putting out the fires of truth which he was kindling everywhere, his enemies summoned him to meet them at Blackfriars church, Edinburgh. He obeyed the summons, accompanied by several gentlemen, and at his appearance, the court dissolved. They were afraid to meet him or try to answer his arguments. Knox then preached openly and powerfully in the city, and soon after, yielding to the earnest entreaties of his former flock in Geneva, he returned to them for a season. As soon as he was known to be beyond reach the summons was repeated, and Knox, not appearing, was burnt in effigy by his 'heroic' persecutors.

"During the absence of Knox, the opposition party, being filled with the spirit of persecution and revenge, left no stone unturned to crush the reform movement, and it seemed at times as if the cause were doomed; but when the worst had come and the new movement seemed tottering to its fall having the throne and most of the nobility against it, John Knox returned from Geneva, and his presence put new life into the noble little band who had been bravely holding the fort, and soon the war was carried into the enemies territory. Mary of Guise, who was queen regent, denounced Knox as a outlaw and a rebel, but he did not heed her. He went on with his preaching, winning the people by the hundreds to his cause.

"After the death of Mary of Guise, her daughter, the beautiful ill-fated Mary, Queen of Scots, returned from France and occupied the throne. She and John Knox had many stormy interviews. The words of Knox always cut like a sword, the interviews almost invariably ended in Mary finding refuge in tears. The struggle between the two parties grew fiercer as time went on, until civil war broke out in the nation, which resulted in Mary losing her throne and eventually, her life.

"John Knox, worn out before his time by his early struggles and hard work, died at the age of sixty. Looking into the grave the Earl of Morton said, 'Here lies one who never feared the face of man.'

"There is no doubt but that John Knox made possible Scotland's after-greatness. He established in every parish in Scotland a church and a school, thus emphasizing the two things without which no nation can possibly become great, religion and education, two things that have been prominent in the national life of Scotland. Scotland has been essentially a religious country, the Bible, the church and the Sabbath occupying a large place, and if Scotland be noted for religion, she has also been noted for education. Her people have been an educated people. Next to the church the school and university have been highly prized by Scottish men and women, there is a very small percentage of illiteracy to be found among the native Scots in Scotland, and a very high percentage of university trained men and women.

"It is a great privilege to us Scots in Canada to know that the things we prize so highly in Scotland are also prized here, and that the spirit of John Knox is manifested to a large degree in this, the land of our adoption; and his influence felt here almost as much as in Scotland itself. This, no doubt, is due to the fact that the early settlers in Canada were mostly Scottish Presbyterians, and English Puritans. They have stamped their genius on this new land, and have moulded its institutions on the pattern they found at home. Let us see to it that the spirit and principle of Knox and the other Reformers are maintained and strengthened, so that this fair land of Canada, maybe a land where liberty and tolerance shall be found, where religion and education shall flourish, where justice and righteousness shall prevail, where peace and plenty shall be found."

Mrs. Louise Raglin, Golden Lake, Ont., writes:—"For several years I was greatly troubled with my heart. I was so nervous and short of breath I could hardly sleep at night, and if I did sleep for a while I had bad dreams.

"I managed to keep at my work, somehow, until I began to have dizzy spells which got so bad I had to give up. Army and Navy to Terminate Athletic Relations

BREAK OVER 3-YEAR RULE

38 YEARS IN FORCE.

WEST POINT, December 17. Canadian Press. — The annual football classic of the Army and Navy, most colorful of the seasonal pigskin dramas over a period of 38 years, apparently came to an end yesterday.

The definite break in athletic relations, considered inevitable now by army men, appeared in publication of correspondence between Admiral L. M. Hulton, superintendent of the Royal Academy at Annapolis, and Major-General Edwin B. Winans, the head of the military institute, concerning the three year eligibility rule adopted by the middies, but scorned at West Point.

Although a four year contract for annual football clashes entered into October, 1926, still has three years to run, Admiral Hulton requested on December 3 that the Army add to the individual contract for 1928 a clause stipulating that "no contestant shall take part in this game on either team who has had three years experience in intercollegiate football."

"Refusal to accede to this request would be considered 'rejection of the contract' and the naval academy will consider itself free to schedule another game on November 24, 1928."

In his reply, published to-day, Major-General Winans refused the eligibility clause "for reasons fully covered in previous correspondence between the authorities of the two academies," and returned the contract unsigned. He added that it was the army conclusion that "authorities of the United States Naval Academy wish to be released from the (four year contract) entered into in 1926. I wish to assure you that under the circumstances the authorities of the Military Academy will not oppose your wishes in this respect."

BELANGER IN HARD TRAINING

Canadian's Stock Takes Upward Trend as Bout Draws Nearer.

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—Every day and every way the impression is gaining ground that something like a battle will be staked at the Coliseum on Monday night. The strenuous whole-souled manner in which Ernie Jarvis of England and Frenchy Belanger, the Canadian entry in the flyweight championship affair, are preparing themselves for the midget melee is extremely convincing.

Neither aspirant to Jimmy Wilde's crown is overlooking any bets. Jarvis is virtually down to weight now and Dave Garrity's candidate will be when the hour comes to step on the scales, you can lay to that.

And you can also make a little wager, if you are so inclined, on the office of the self-same Garrity that if there is any back pedalling on Monday's 12-rounder that Frenchy will be doing the charging. Mr. Jarvis had better not come wading into the conqueror of Newsboy Brown and Frankie Genaro wide open or he will get "wot for" right on the ear, is the advice that a disinterested party proffers free of charge.

Belanger in his workouts is tearing the old sand bag right from its moorings with his powerful punches and the British invader will think that he has hooked up with a miniature cyclone or a junior tornado if he doesn't minds his P's and Q's. His condition is perfectly satisfactory to all concerned in his welfare, and it will be a different Belanger from the lackadaisical youth who fought Genaro who will be seen in action on Monday night. He was slow getting under way on that occasion and only a grandstand finish gave him the edge right on end. He won't make the same mistake against Jarvis.

Taking one thing into consideration with another Belanger on all the dope is in for the toughest tussle of his short, but glorious career. Jarvis, unlike most Old Country boxers, like the rough work, and fans who have seen him doing his stuff describe him as a "battling fool." His record would indicate that. In his bout with Manny Wexler he had his jaw broken in the second round, but he kept on fighting and eventually outgamed the New Yorker. He has whipped Harry Goldstein of Boston, Black Bill of Cuba, Young Dencie, the Filipino title holder, and drawn with Izzy Schwartz. His European fights comprise wins over the best in England, Belgium and France.

Playfair Brown has received requests from New York, Boston and virtually every daily paper in Ontario for accommodation, which shows the widespread interest in the impending title bout. The advance sale has reached the $10,000 mark, and is still growing. Three thousand seats at 90 cents, plus ten cents tax, will be placed on sale the night of the fight.

Rickard's announcement that he will send the winner of the Schwartz-Brown bout in New York against Monday night's here drew a laugh from Brown, who says that if Belanger is the victor he will defend his title in Toronto or not at all.

Do Not Want Cash For Boston Players

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 17. Canadian Press. — Five of the eight clubs on the National Hockey League Circuit, have sought to purchase members of the Boston Bruins' team, President Charles F. Adams said yesterday, but no Boston players are out for sale, although the club would listen to trade overtures.

"The Bruins apparently have the players that the other clubs want but all offers made to us have been in cash and we have refused to do business along such lines, the club owner commented.

"Naturally we will try to better ourselves if we can put through a suitable trade, but we must obtain playing strength in return for any member of the present Bruins squad."

He indicated that the Bruins line-up might present one or two new faces before the hockey trading season closed in January.

TIGERS PLAY LEAFS TO-NIGHT

Jack Adams Will Lead His Fast Crew Against Toronto.

BOTH NEED VICTORY.

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—Fresh from their victory over the New York Rangers which puts them within two points of the leadership of the American group of the N.H.L., the Detroit Cougars arrived in Toronto yesterday for their battle with the Maple Leafs at the Arena tonight. The Cougars have been showing a lot of class in their last few games and outside of their defeat at the hands of the Canadiens they have been enjoying marked success. They defeated the Maroons last Saturday night in Montreal and then they met defeat from Boston in Detroit on Sunday after overtime. They lost to the Frenchmen on Tuesday night but they regained their form when they handed Lester Patrick's clan a setback in the Madison Square Gardens. Led by Jack Adams and Reg. Noble, two old Toronto favorites, they will try their best to take a fall out of Conny Smythe's hired help tonight.

The Cougars have a task on their hands. The Maple Leafs have not been doing so badly of late. The only defeat they have suffered in their last four games was the 2 to 1 overtime struggle that the Canadiens took from them in Montreal. They played great hockey in Chicago to defeat the Black Hawks and they are all in fine fettle.

Dr. Bill Carson broke out in the goal scoring column on Wednesday and this Detroit gang will have to keep their eyes on him. Both he and Bailey are liable to break out with an epidemic of goals. Last year they were up among the league leaders and so far this year they have not been very active in the scoring.

A glance at the goal scoring records of the league shows that the Leafs have scored 16 goals and they have had 15 scored against them. Ottawa is the only club outside of the leading Canadiens ahead of them in goals scored against them of any of the clubs with the exception of the Frenchmen.

Another things makes it necessary for the Leafs to win the game, they are in the last place tied with the Americans and Maroons and a victory is needed to keep them up in the hunt.

Next week they play three games, here on Tuesday against the Americans and on Thursday against Pittsburg. They are away at Ottawa on Saturday.

The other league games scheduled for tonight are: Montreal Maroons at Ottawa, Boston at Canadiens, and Chicago at Pittsburg.

INSIDE SPORTIN' DOPE

By A WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

These here pro. hockey experts what are kicking about not enough gools being scored remind me of the bird what bought a bird-dog, and crabbed because the darned thing couldn't sing. They can't expect no gools under them rules with the boys able to pass the old piece of rubber forward most of the way down the rink, because any coach that has any brains under his hat knows that it is a sucker play to send 3 forwards into a huddle around the other fellow's net when they're libel to get left flat-footed by a pass out to the blue line. The result is the teams is all learning the old army game—fire and fall back—and goolkeepers will soon have to pay their way into the rink because they won't be getting enough to do out there. The O.H.A. rule of no offside for the defenders inside their own blue line ain't going to work out no better neither when the teams really begin to take advantage of it. Let them all use the forward pass in their defence area like the Varsity Grads did last winter and the customers'll see darned little scoring, for the simple reason that no team is going to stage 3-man attacks when they is a chance of them getting left 40 feet behind when the defenders slip the rubber out to the blue line.

If gools is what they want the rule-makers ought to cut out the forward pass in any part of the rink. Then the attackers would pile in on top of the gool like they used to do it, because they would know that even if they lost the puck they'd have a chance to check back with the other fellows on even terms.

As it is the wise teams will lay back with a 6-man defence and only attack when they got to. The customers don't like that kinds hockey, and sooner or later they're going to get fed up with this old stuff of 1 forward going down and cutting loose a long shot. What the guys in the pews want when they go to a hockey game is action and nothing else but, and they can't get near enough of it under the present code.

The friends of the O.H.A. is patting themselves on the back and telling the world that the pros.'d be all O.K. if they adopted the amateur rules. Thev say they's lots of scoring in the O.H.A., and so far they're right, but it's only because they's not enough brainy coaches working to take advantage of the long forward pass. When they all start cashing in on it you can bet your 1st deposit on your new car that any time 2 well matched teams clash gools is going to be scarcer than city aldermen was the other night when someone hung up a new school on the city's sewerage system. Just now most of the teams is not hep to what advantage the rule gives the defenders, but when they get wise, Mac, they is dull times ahead of the hockey customers. What's needed is rules that will encourage all hands and the cook to pile in on the attack, instead of this safety first hockey that is developing.

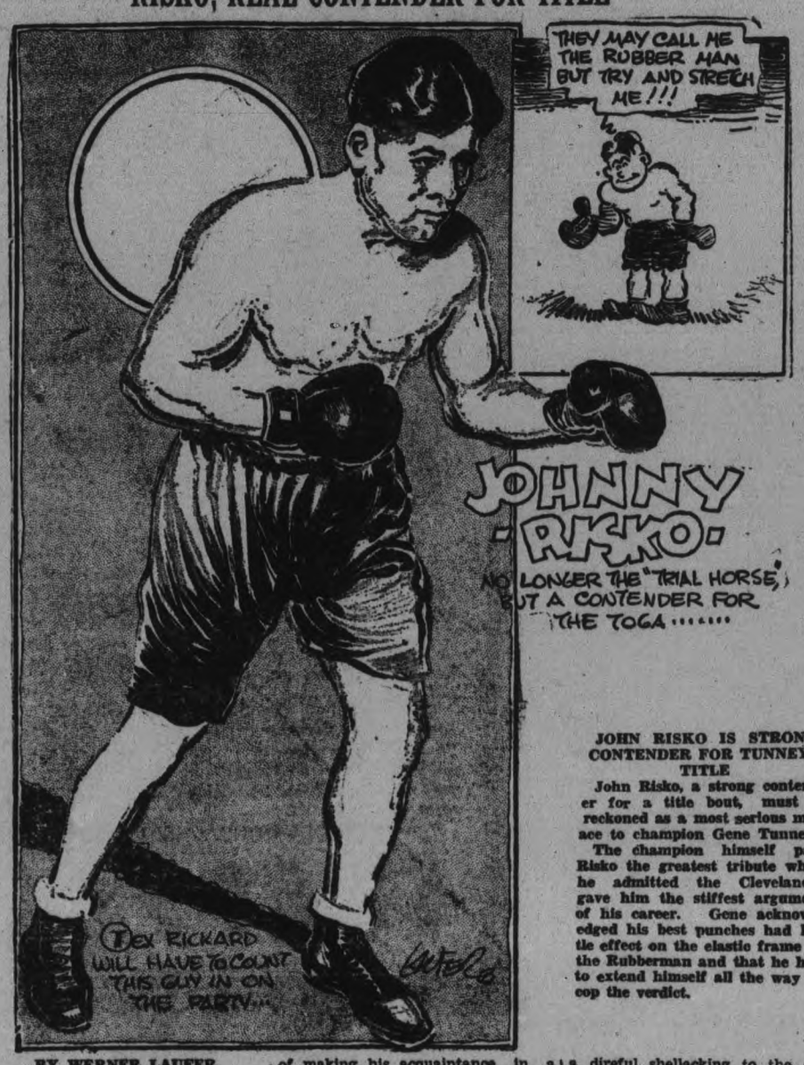
Well, Mac, I feel better now I got rid of all them brain waves. By the look of the schedule for next month some hockey fans is going to need a introduction to their families the end of January. If they try to see all the games they'll run the risk of being pointed out by some of their young hopeful as "There's the guy that comes to our house Sundays."

By the way, Mister Sporting Editor, I hope the quality'll be a good as the quantity, not like the old story about the fellow that tried out a new boarding house. Asked by a friend about the grub, he replied: "Oh, the chuck's not bad, what there is of it." "Why," sez his buddie, "don't you get enough?" "Oh," sez he, "we get enough, such as it is." We don't exactly like to feel that we're going to get enough hockey, such as it is.

Well, Mac, I gotta figger how to split a buck, four bits and a nickel into 12 Christmas presents and leave everybody happy, so toodle-loo now, old thing.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

RISKO, REAL CONTENDER FOR TITLE



JOHN RISKO IS STRONG CONTENDER FOR TUNNEY'S TITLE

John Risko, a strong contender for a title bout, must be reckoned as a most serious menace to champion Gene Tunney.

The champion himself paid Risko the greatest tribute when he admitted the Clevelander gave him the stiffest argument of his career. Gene acknowledged his best punches had little effect on the elastic frame of the Rubberman and that he had to extend himself all the way to cop the verdict.

BY WERNER LAUFER

Make way for the Rubberman!

Just a tip from Mr. Danny Dunn, manager of John "Rockem" Risko, to Dempsey, Sharkey, Heeney and the powers that are handling the annual elimination tournament in New York these days.

By virtue of his slashing win over Paulino Uzcudum, just the other night, the Cleveland baker boy has wedged himself firmly into the mad scramble for the chance to meet Gene Tunney.

Risko has been a long time getting there, having threatened to enter the first ranks of the colossal nose-busters several times only to be temporarily sidetracked. John would run up a string of victories and just when recognition seemed around the corner, up would pop the bad fight that would curb his climb to the heftier currency.

But at last the Rubberman has arrived and from all indications this news should not be so welcome to the erudite Tunney, maharajah of all the big fellows. Back in 1925, when John was just a "palooka", the present champ had the "pleasure" of making his acquaintance in a Cleveland ring.

Although Gene copped the final nod, the big Austrian had his moments. The Rubberman put up a great battle, never asking quarter and dealing out an occasional thump that would send Mr. Tunney's eyes blinking. No doubt the memories of that fight are still with the champ and should Johnny be eliminated without further ado in the coming series of brawls, there should be few tears for him from the present titleholder.

The Clevelander began his pro career in 1924 and rapidly came to the front by punching the big fellows, good and bad, all over the ring. Twenty-two wins, twelve of them knockouts and then a win over Paul Berlenbach and John seemed ready for the big shot. But the two defeats by Young Stribling and Mike McTigue, boxers who figured to beat John's slugging style, put him back in his place.

But the Rubberman wouldn't stay put and started another winning streak that has finally thrown him right in the midst of the boys with title aspirations. By handing out a direful shellacking to the classy Jack Delaney and fighting Tom Heeney to a standstill in Detroit recently, John got his big chance with Paulino. What he did to the famous woodsman was quite enough.

The Cleveland Austrian is primarily an "abysmal brute" of the ring, rough and tough and willing to take one on the whiskers in order to hand one back with accrued interest. Skillful boxers bothered John for a while, but he seems to have overcome even that, proof of which is his outboxing so crafty a veteran as Delaney and his systematic win over the tough woodchopper. Risko has unusually short arms for a big fellow, but one forgets all about that after the bell rings.

It is said John has annexed over $150,000 in the ring, which seems to be a tidy sum even in these golden days of giddy gate receipts.

Nevertheless, the way our John is going, he should annex many more frogskins and with what championship matches are bringing these days, who knows how high the Clevelander will run his string.

WANT CUP RACES HELD BI-ENNIALLY

Britain and Italy Say Year Too Short For Aircraft Development.

LONDON, Eng., December 17. — Canadian Press. — The British and Italian governments have decided to support a project of the amendment of the Schneider cup rules to make future races biennially instead of annually. In making this announcement the air ministry stated that the present interval of one year between races was not enough to allow adequate progress in the technical design of marine aircraft, the development of which was the object of the trophy's donor.

The two governments have agreed not to support an Italian or British entry in 1928 provided that other competing countries agree to follow the same course. The United States, French and German authorities have been informally consulted and are understood to concur in this proposal.

RAVINAS WIN IN HAMILTON

McDougall Good For Winners—Stratford Loses To Detroit.

CAN. PRO. RESULTS.

STRATFORD, Ont., Dec. 17.—Stratford Nationals tossed away a chance to head the Canpro loop when they were defeatd here last night by Frank Foyston's Detroit Olympics by a score of 2 to 1, while London was beating the league-leading Kitchener team. The home team gave a poor exhibition of hockey before one of the largest crowds of the season. In order to give the staffs of the stores, which are open every evening for the Christmas season an opportunity to see the contest, the game did not commence until after 9 o'clock. The match was by no means the best seen here this season.

HAMILTON, Dec. 17. — Topping Hamilton at the Arena last night, Toronto Ravinas stepped into second place in the Canpro Hockey League. The Queen City stick-handlers won 4 to 1, and the exhibition of the visiting team was the fastest seen in the league engagements here this season. The Toronto team started at a dizzy pace, and carried the fight through to the last minute. Hamilton's only counter was a fluke shot, and the failure of the locals to take advantage of wide-open opportunities cost them three tallies.

Lowrey, Smith and Gross were outstanding for the winners, and Taugher had plenty of shots to stop. McDougall filled in for Lowrey, and proved a capable relief man, giving a good account of himself throughout. His shooting was not as effective as that of Lowrey, but his stick-handling had the Hams baffled. Smith and Gross each had a pair of counters to compile the Toronto total, and Roth was the only man to tally for Hamilton.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 17.— Teddy Oke, owner of the Kitchener Club, presented the London Panthers with the Oke Trophy, emblematic of the championship of the Canadian professional circuit last night and the unsentimental and uncouth Panthers turned right around and handed Mr. Oke's highly touted millionaires their third defeat of the season by the count of 3 to 1.

The game turned into a hectic encounter after the first period which was orthodox hockey in which the visitors had a silght edge but no goals. Starkings, in the minute of the second period, after a fine bit of stick-handling in mid-ice, shot from the blue line for London's first goal. It was a drive on which the puck never left the ice but went under Fisher's skate as the Kitchener net minder went to step on it and then the rout of the Millionaires and their near collapse, commenced.

Niagara Falls 2, Windsor 1.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 17.— Outplayed and outscored in the final period, the one that settled it all, Windsor Hornets remain in the cellar of the Canadian Hockey League as a result of their 2-1 licking at the hands of the Niagara Falls Cataracts here last night.

Two rather mediocre sessions of scoreless hockey were followed by a third canto loaded with action. The invaders had the better of the going and fairly rained shots at the Hornet cage. But it was not until four minutes of the end that they scored the winning goal.

HOCKEY LEAGUE PLANS SEASON

Committee Named To Get Two More Teams at Campbellford.

USE 12 INCH PADS.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 17.—In order that several members might be free to attend other metings, th hockey executive at 6.30 on Thursday at the residence of J. H. Bell, the president. The members present were J. H .Bell, W. Sarginson, G. A. Ironsides, Hilton Beatty, Thornton Ibey, Rev. C. D. Daniels, Nadoo Reynolds, and Harry Atkinson.

There was a lengthy discussion as to the number of teams to be entered in the League. Generally the idea of a four-team league was favored, but some of the members thought that only one team could be mustered which would be capable of giving the Hydro and Grads teams an even battle. But it is expected that there will be a four-team league.

The matter of pads was broached by Mr. Sarginson. It was decided to use the twelve-inch pads of last year in order to save the expense of purchasing a new outfit. As a committee to form two teams from the available players outside the Hydro and Grads teams, Messrs. Atkinson, Bell, and Sarginson were appointed, but an amendment to the motion removed Mr. Atkinson and substituted Mr. Daniels. Later this was again altered and the committee now stands: Ibey, Sarginson, and Bell. This committee is also appointed to interview Mr. Covert regarding terms for the league games.

It is expected that there will be some really fast hockey here this season ,and the fans are waiting patiently for the first try-outs in order that they may look over the material and pick their favorite team right at the start. There has always been keen local interest in hockey, and with two modern rinks and four local teams ,the fans will have plenty of games to attend.

GLASGOW RANGERS MAY TOUR ONTARIO

Directors of Club Have the Matter Under Consideration.

There is more than an outside chance that Glasgow Rangers will tour Ontario next year. The authority is none other than Ivanhoe, of the Glasgow Weekly Record, who is usually well informed on such matters. Several Rangers' players were on the Scottish team that toured Canada this year, and they returned home with glowing accounts of the hospitality they received while in the Dominion.

There would be no danger of such a tour proving other than a financial success. Seven Scottish touring games last season brought in $27,462, which was more than half the net profits for the whole of Canada, and does not include the gate taken at Fort William or the $2,387 taken at the game with Ulsters.

The proposal at present is for two games to be played in Montreal, two in Toronto, two in Hamilton, and one each in Windsor, London and St. Catharines, with probably a side trip across the border for a couple of games with American league teams.

It is to be hoped that if the Rangers decide to make the trip that they will include in the party Andy Cunningham. Cunningham is the most picturesque figure in Scotland to-day, and while in Hamilton this year expressed a desire to settle in this ambitious city.

A definite decision in regard to the tour will be made in the next few weeks.

Commenting further on the proposed tour, the same paper says:

"Prior to the S.F.A. tour last summer several wiseacres on this side tearfully predicted that the players making such an arduous trip would be played out and useless when the present season opened. So they groaned, with the whites of their eyes upturned to the skies. And a few believed! The exact opposite has been the case. Every mother's son who made that never-to-be-forgotten Canadan tour is playing better than ever. From Tom Hamilton to 'Wee' Cookie all the lads Toronto saw are going great guns. Daddy Blair and W. Cook have been capped since their return. Tom Muirhead was selected to play against Wales, but could not owing to injury. Willie McStey captained the Scottish team at Wrexham. Tommy Craig was within a few votes of getting a place on the same team. Cunningham, as you know, was first reserve. McLean lost his 'cap' and no more, and Alan Morton had a vote to the good. The tourists stale? Not a bit of it. Every man is on the top of his form."

LEGION HELPS RETURNED MEN

Finds Jobs For Two Members of the Campbellford Branch.

REGULAR MEETING.

Campbellford, December 17. — There was the usual one application for membership submitted when the local branch of the Canadian legion met in their club rooms in the armouries last night . This was from Jas. Redden and the application was accepted by a unanimous vote. Since it was necessary for the president, Major J. M. Bygott, to attend the council meeting which was held at the same hour the chair at the legion meeting was occupied by Vice-President Ray Connor. There was little business to be transacted. Only one letter was read. It was from the Provincial Command and and a reply to the inquiry made re the dismissal of Comrade MacLeod from the department of organization. This department has been entirely done away with. The letter read stated that there was no further information available on the matter. All the details had been included in the original letter.

Due in a measure to the efforts of the employment committee two members who had been for some time unemployed were found positions. This is the first official work of the committee and they were given due credit for the work they had accomplished. The finances again showed an increase, this time not as substantial as the one immediately preceding it.

Nor were the members of the legion exempted from an appeal for financial assistance. This came from a comrade in straitened circumstances and was referred to the executive committee. At the next meeting Thursday, January 12, 1928, the officers for the year will be officially installed.

TWO BARNS ARE BURNED

Hastings Fire Brigade Works Six Hours To Prevent Spread.

CONTENTS SAVED.

HASTINGS, Dec. 17.—On Thursday evening about 10 o'clock the barns of Mrs. Edward Wilcox and James Stenson, Bridge Street, were completely gutted by fire. The fire started in the stable part of Mrs. Wilcox's barn of unknown origin. It was no time until all was a mass of flames. Adjoining this was Mr. Stenson's barn, which was also completely destroyed. A car was in the former barn and also some chickens, but these were saved. In the latter barn was a horse and cow, which were also got out in time. The easterly winds were blowing directly from the fire against Walter Fowlds' barn, but through the efforts of a volunteer bucket brigade, it was saved from destruction. The building was on fire many times, and Mr. Fowlds' herd of cattle, horses and hogs were turned out, with the thought that there was no saving the bars.

The fire brigade remained on duty until about 4 a.m. Friday.

The burned buildings were partially covered by insurance.

ORANGE BOX SOCIAL IS WELL ATTENDED

Dance Follows Short Program and Auctioning of Baskets.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 17. — On Thursday night at the Community Hall, Rear Street, L.O.L. 36 held a box social and dance. The first part of the evening was devoted to a program entertainment which was thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Meyers, as chairman, introduced the artists as their names appeared. Perhaps the highlight of the program was the two numbers given by Miss Laura Arkles, elocutionist from Castleton. Both these sketches were of the humorous variety and took very well indeed. They were "Betty at the Baseball" and "Si and I." Two orchestra numbers were played by Crowe's orchestra from Roseneath.

The cedar chest and contents, which had been raffled, were won by Marshall Keir. The boxes which the ladies had prepared contained some very dainty and choice lunches. After these had been sold and their contents disposed of in the usual manner, dancing became the order of the evening and continued uninterrupted till a late hour.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

CHRISTMAS MUSIC PROGRAM IS GIVEN AT CONSERVATORY

Women's Music Club Hears Appropriate Address at Meeting.

FESTIVE ATMOSPHERE.

Music Decorations, Refreshments and Address All of Seasonable Nature.

An ambitious program of Christmas music was presented in the hall of the Conservatory of Music yesterday afternoon by the Women's Music Club, under direction of the president, Mrs. J. Forbes Allan. There was a large audience for the occasion. The Yuletide atmosphere permeated the entire performance, with Christmas carols in the community singing led by Miss M. Clarry; a Christmas message given by Rev. J. E. Todd of George Street United Church; Christmas refreshments that included Christmas cake and shortbreads, and Christmas decorations of the big hall, which was arranged in a very attractive manner. Several trees decorated with tinsel ropes, red bells and lighted novelties, were placed at various points, and the walls and windows were festooned by streamers of red and green, evergreens, wreaths of scarlet immortelles and holly and flaming poinsettias. From the big electroliers depended long tassels of red chenille streamers, with silver ends. The stage was also very effectively arranged with a setting of black and silver, alternated by two cathedral windows whose blue panes were illuminated from the rear, and topped by a huge lighted star. Mrs. Allan, Mrs. N. D. Buchanan, and Mrs. T. H. Gillesple were responsible for the decorations.

"Hark, the Herald Angels Sing" was the opening carol, sung in unison by the large number of people in attendance, who sang later the old favorite, "O Come, All Ye Faithful," led by Miss Clarry.

Various little scenes were presented with musical accompaniment of songs and piano, the latter being played by Miss Agnes Logan, with Mrs. Park also playing for several vocal numbers. The episodes were appropriately gowned and staged, with an evident minute degree of attention given to all details. A distribution of gifts to a group of small children on the stage, from a gaily-decorated tree, was the first presentation, with Mrs. H. E. Connolly, in old-fashioned gown, reciting a charming Christmas message. Mrs. Ford Turner sang "The Christmas Tree" and "Holy Night" for this scene, which was followed by a representation of the Nativity, the role of the Madonna being taken by Mrs. J. E. R. Munro, with Miss May Jory as Saint Joseph, and attendant seraphim in Miss Cora Smith and Miss Stella Shearer. The Magi were Miss S. A. Tomkins, Miss C. Littlefield and Mrs. W. F. Nelson, and shepherds were Mrs. P. P. Westbye, Mrs. F. Saltman and Mrs. C. H. Crowe.

For this scene, with an accompanying chorus in an invisible choir, Miss Bertha Hill and Miss Helen Lamb sang appropriate numbers, "The Three Kings" and an old sacred lullaby.

Rev. J. E. Todd, pastor of George Street United Church, in his usual eloquent, pleasing fashion, gave a brief Christmas message, which was based mainly on the famous Christmas Carol of Charles Dickens, the reverend speaker emphasizing the good which might have been done by Scrooge during a long life if he had been converted to the true spirit of Christmas charity and giving earlier in his existence. The eagerness with which Scrooge seized on his opportunity for a second chance, when he awoke and realized that he was not compelled to spend the rest of eternity in company with Marley's ghost, was an example that might be followed by many. Rev. Mr. Todd concluded his interesting discourse by a recital of a little poem by Edgar Guest, finished with the words: "The finest gifts of life are friends."

With Miss May Jory singing the accompanying music, a scene depicting the arrival of a sinner at Heaven's gate was then enacted, other vocal solos for this episode being a splendid rendition of "Come Unto Him." The sinner at the gate was enacted by Miss Helen Lamb.

Maurice H. Park's attractive tenor voice was heard to wonderful advantage in an excerpt from "The Messiah," "Comfort Ye, My People," which was warmly applauded.

The last scene was a reproduction of the story surrounding the old legend of "Good King Wenceslas," an old-time carol that has attained much prominence this year, and is melodious and effective in the extreme. A table with lighted candles set by the good king to provide a meal for wayfarers at Christmas time, with the king and queen as hosts, and an attendant page, provided the setting for the singing of the carol by Mrs. H. F. Doig, assisted by Mrs. Hazel. McClelland and Miss Bertha Hill. Mrs. Doig's clear, sweet voice was also very effective in the concluding numbers: "God Rest Ye, Merry Gentlemen," and "Ring Out, Wild Bells."

The part of the king was taken in this scene by Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland; Mrs. W. R. Widdess was the queen; Miss Bertha Hill, the page, and the role of the weary wayfarer was given Mrs. C. H. Crowe.

The children who assisted in several of the scenes were little Margaret and Jimmy Hooper, Marilyn Munro, Eileen, Audrey and Harold Doig.

At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Allan thanked all who had taken part in the production, especially Rev. Mr. Todd, who took the place of Judge Huycke owing the latter's absence on business; to Miss Logan; to the Heintzman Company, for previous loan of a piano, and to gentlemen assisting with decorations, Messrs. C. Lapp of the Canadian Department Stores; H. Fiske, and W. Padget.

Afternoon tea was then served.

Scout News and Notices

4TH PETERBOROUGH TROOP.

The meeting of the 4th Peterborough troop on Thursday opened with flag break and then inspection. The Owls had to think up a physical training stunt that the Kangaroos could not do. Their stunt was one Scout standing on two other Scouts' shoulders and being carried about five feet. The Kangaroos beat the Owls in this, but the Owls copied the Kangaroos' stunt to perfection. Then Carlos Routley of the Crows stood on his hands against the wall and walked about ten feet from the wall on his hands backwards. Nobody could copy this exactly, although P. L. Taylor tried hard. There were then two ten minute instruction periods. Four Scouts tried to pass the second class semaphore signalling test. For this test the Scout must be able to send and receive group letters at a moderate rate of speed and receive a few short words. Archie Dryland was the only one to pass the test successfully.

Boxes, chairs, stools, etc., were scattered around the centre of the room. Two Scouts were blindfolded and had to go among the obstacles without touching any of them. Scout Ronald Asquith was the only one to get through. Scouts Routley and Hefternan were blindfolded the second time to try to go through. They started through and seemed to be going to get through under the directions of the troop but when they took off the bandages they found the floor was clear.

An artificial council fire was then made. The session opened with the singing of "Oh Canada," followed by a few lively songs. The Scoutmaster then thought about a tree. Twenty questions were asked by the troop about the tree. The tree then had to be named.

A story was read by Mr. Corbett from the Scout Leader about the toy shops that were held throughout Canada last year. Some letters were reproduced that the shops had received from children.

The competition is running closer than ever now. The Owls are leading with 177½, the Kangaroos second with 177 ,and the Crows third with 174½ points.

The Crows hold the flag this week.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir—At the morning service on Sunday, Nov. 27th, two weeks before the vote was taken on the location of our proposed new church building, and four days before the meeting of the church building committee, I said: "Park Street congregation needs all its members; we are sorry that any should have gone; we want you all to stay; but if there are those who just can't work in harmony with the regularly constituted action of a large majority and persist in working against such action, it would be better both for them and the work of the congregation that they quietly get their certificates of church membership and go elsewhere, and may God's blessing go with them.

Previous to the vote of the congregation I had not committed myself or used my influence in favor of any particular phase of the solution of our church building problem. What I said on Nov. 27th has evidently been misquoted, misconstrued and misunderstood, therefore I write this public statement.

CAMPBELLFORD NEWS.

Campbellford Dec. 17. — The entertainment put on in Havelock by the Canadian Legion there was a complete success. Capt. Hyland, manager of the Regent theatre here, states that people were turned away before the show started. The program consisted of a short play by local artists, entitled, Fragments from France. This was augmented by the government film of the unveiling of the Brighton War Memorial and the militia camp at Cobourg last year. As a feature picture, Behind the Front was used, and thus the entire program was of a military nature.

The regular Friday night dance at the Community Hall, Rear street, is gaining popularity weekly. The idea seems to be to increase local interest in the old time quadrille and is apparently meeting with considerable success.

The stormy weather of the last two days has made the roads particularly dangerous for vehicular traffic, and several merchants report that their sales have fallen off considerably during this time.

AS SHOWN IN PHOTOPLAY "HIS DOG."

Devotion of Animal to Master Results in Regeneration of Social Outcast.

"The best friend a man has in the world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter may prove ungrateful. The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog."

This is the central theme of "His Dog," a Karl Brown production, in which Joseph Schildkraut and Julia Faye are featured and which will be on view at the Regent theatre on Monday next. Unique in plot, "His Dog," as prepared for the screen by Olga Printzau from Albert Payson Terhune's story, pictures the regeneration of a social outcast by reason of the devotion of his dog.

Down and out tired of life, Peter Olsen, played by Mr. Schildkraut, is about to give up the fight when he finds a dog with a broken leg lying by the roadside. He takes the dog to his shack, mends the hurt and calling him Chum, becomes devoted to the dog, and the dog in turn devoted to him.

The dog shows his master the way to a new happiness in life. Through this change in character Olsen becomes a valued citizen of his community and a romance between him and Dorcas, a wealthy girl portrayed by Julia Faye, brings the picture to an altogether happy finale.

Walter Woods, who supervised the production of "Old Ironsides," supervised the production of "His Dog." Prominent in the supporting cast are Sally Rand, Robert Edeson and Fred Walton.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beauteous orphan, who is coveted by hideous Count Ravoir. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoir. She rejoins Fabien, and they live so extravagantly that Fabien is forced to capitalize a genius for cards. The King plays Fabien at cards for Manon, accuses him of cheating. Manon is deported. Fabien, held by guards, helplessly watches her ship leave. The King's guards arrive.

Fabien was the only one who knew why they were there. The Comte's murder had been discovered and they had tracked him to Le Havre to answer for the crime. It meant that he would be thrown into prison and eventually consigned to the guillotine.

When the soldiers dismounted and hurried out on the pier scanning every face for the man they had been ordered to capture, Fabien felt trapped. There was no possible chance to elude the soldiers and get off of the wharf, besides he had no desire to take another step away from Manon—What could he do? The boat was carrying her away, out toward the miles and miles of ocean that would separate them for the rest of their lives.

A plan came to him so quickly that there did not seem time for it to be his own. It was inspirational and from the moment of its conception until he rushed to the end of the wharf and dove into the water, not a second had elapsed. He was not even conscious of the fact that he had knocked flown two women, who stood in his path, and pushed a man in the water as he cleared a place to dive.

When Fabien emerged from his long plunge, he caught a glimpse of the commotion he had caused. The end of the dock was crowded with uniformed soldiers, guards and people who shouted excitedly when he came up for air. A volley of shots peppered the water about his head and one strong armed soldier set a musket hurling through the air with deadly aim. Fabien saw it all at a glance, then both arms went up out of the water and with a defiant laugh he sank back—and disappeared!

Soldiers and guards peered intently they waited in vain for their man to reappear. Apparently he had been hit by their fire, or the musket, and gone to the bottom of the ocean. Justice had been meted out, although they were cheated of the satisfaction of delivering the murderer to their King.

CHAPTER XXII.

As the ship put out to sea, Manon was among the privileged few who remained on deck, consequently it was her misfortune to witness her lover's tragic apparent death. She longed to end her own thoroughly miserable existence by leaping into the sea and sinking to a watery grave as near to Fabien as possible. It was cruel to be sent to an unknown land where life would be prolonged only to encounter further pain and heartache. Utterly overcome by melancholy thoughts of death and despair, Manon fell upon the deck in a dead faint.

The weight of her body, pulling on the chain, attracted the attention of the hard-faced woman who after looking curiously at the pitiful, unconscious little figure, knelt down and pillowed Manon's head in her lap. She rubbed the pallid forehead with uncertain fingers and spoke in a gentler tone than she had used in years. Apparently Manon would never lose her power to arouse commendable emotions in other women.

When the Governor noticed that his nephew's "choice" was in trouble he ordered the bonds removed so that she could have more freedom and ease. This meant that eight of the other women were also released, because one long chain had served to fasten them together. They endeavored to express their appreciation of this temporary freedom by gathering around Manon and offering suggestions. They carried her to the bow and propped her against a huge coil of rope close to the rail. They were prevented from giving further aid by an order to go below where it was their lot to remain for the greater part of the voyage. An amazing incident saved Manon from similar treatment.

Everyone on board was busy tending to duties involved in getting under way.

Manon thought it would have been so sweet to stay asleep, always. Now that Fabien was dead she had no desire to live. Her heart was burdened with sorrow and she prayed that death might seal her tormenting thoughts forever.

As she looked tearfully over the ship's rail, she suddenly gasped in amazement. Her eyes stared in wonder, "Dear God, am I dead that I see a thing like this? . . . No! He is real! He is alive! Fabien!" She leaned far over the rail and whispered her lover's name.

Clutching frantically to a small rope ladder that hung from the ship's side, Fabien was pulling himself out of the water!

With the agility of a trapeze performer he quickly climbed the swaying ladder and gathered Manon into his arms.

Unmindful of cold drenched clothing she clung to him as though she never could and never would let him go again.

"Oh, my darling!" she cried happily, I thought you were drowned."

"That is what I wanted the soldiers to think—but not you," he paused and smothered her face with kisses. "My sweet dear, were you worried?"

"Worried?—I thought I was dying—I wanted to die. But not now, not with you here again." Manon's arms crept around Fabien and he held her close.

"I couldn't see you sail away without me—that is why I am here." A smile of peace suffused Fabien's face.

"Darling, I forgot—where did the soldiers wound you?" Manon pulled away and carefully looked Fabien over, fully expecting to see blood.

"Every shot missed, but I pretended to be hit and swam under water around the keel of the boat and came up down there when you saw me."

"I didn't even know that you could swim!" Manon's tone was a bit reproachful. She was so much a part of Fabien's life that she wanted a knowledge of his past as well as the right to share his future. There was no doubt about enjoying the present. They stood on the forward deck, with arms about each other, looking ahead out toward the open sea while a warm breeze made hopeless tangles of Manon's curls.

In the happiness of being reunited all thought of danger faded away. In the sweet oblivion of their love Manon and Fabien were still able to forget that she was being deported and that he had no right to be aboard.

By this time the ship was well under way and the Governor had leisure to come for'ard with Synnelet for a talk with "the pretty little wench who had fainted." They expected to find her still reclining on the coil of rope and very grateful and agreeable to them for her freedom. Instead they saw a vital and radiantly animated young girl in the arms of a stranger, enjoying the voyage as though there were privileged guests rather than prisoners.

Striding up to Fabien the Governor demanded, "Be good enough to explain, sir, how you happened to get aboard!"

"By the ship's ladder, sir. Your sailors neglected to pull it up. You see I am not yet dry from my swim." Fabien brushed water from his wet clothing and smiled whimsically.

Synnelet always got what he wanted, without any effort on his own part. If he had been a general in the army he would have been most successful because he had a wonderful ability to make other's fight his battles. The sight of Manon in another man's arms aroused his fury and set his brain to working. "In a situation like this," he reasoned, "the Captain is the boss—not the Governor." Immediately Synnelet turned on his heel and solicited the Captain's aid. In a very short time they returned fortified by two strapping sailors, and confronted Fabien.

"Stand aside there—release the jade" thundered the Captain.

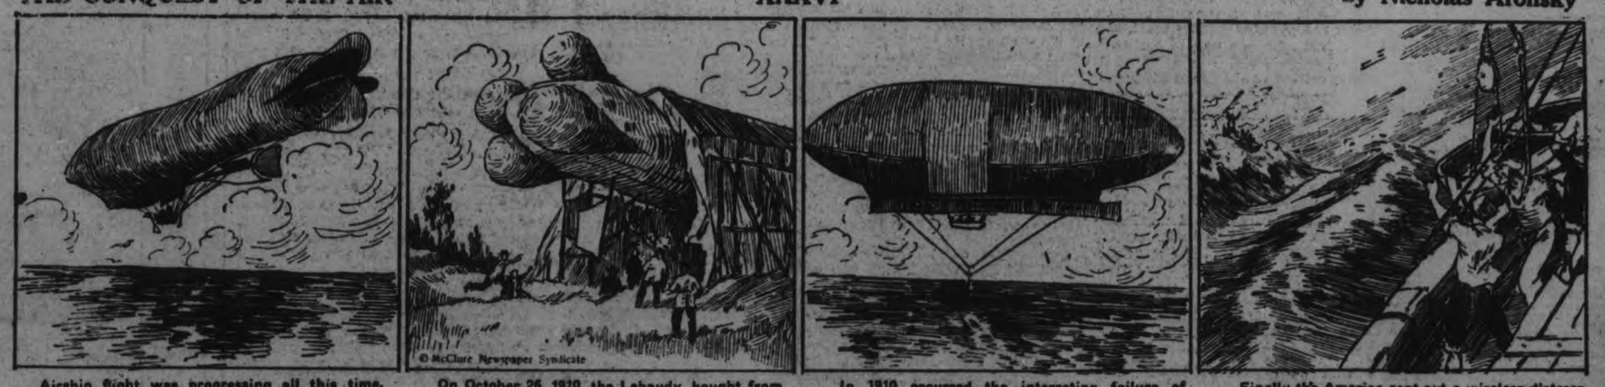
THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR — XXXVI — by Nicholas Afonsky



Airship flight was progressing all this time. In 1907 the Patria, a dirigible, had drifted from her moorings in France and, without pilot or passenger, had crossed the Channel and come down in Ireland. Before she could be secured, however, she drifted out over the Atlantic and was lost.

On October 26, 1910, the Lebaudy, bought from France by England, crossed the Channel safely with a crew of eight men. A little later another dirigible crossed the Channel successfully from France, but her top was ripped off when she was being pulled into the too-small shed provided for her.

In 1910 occurred the interesting failure of Walter Wellman with a crew of four to cross the Atlantic. He had previously tried—but failed—to fly to the North Pole. His ship, the America, carried a new sort of guide rope, an equilibrator, which from the start tended to pull it down.

Finally the America sent out a wireless distress signal, and a nearby steamer, the Trent, went to her aid. After maneuvering for several hours the crew of the America—and their black cat—let loose their lifeboat from the airship, and were picked up from the sea by the crew of the Trent.

Gangster Particular About Cell Mates

CHICAGO, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press).—Al. Capone, a fastidious dresser and inclined to be particular in his choice of associates, was somewhat put out at Joliet Jail yesterday because he had been placed in a cell with two men whose general appearance and demeanor were not to his liking.

"Why are you in here," Capone asked. They explained they were unable to pay fines, whereupon Capone told the police to take the necessary $22 from his own bankroll of more than two thousand dollars and pay fines.

The men were released and Capone had the cell to himself.

CUTS TEETH—AND LINE.

LYNN, Mass. Dec. 17.—Calls from several persons on a party line here sent telephone service men searching for the trouble. Tracing the short circuit to one of the houses on the line, they discovered a baby sitting in a corner and busily chewing the receiver cord. Moisture penetrating the insulation had caused the line to go dead.

Wheat Prices Lower Argentina Crop Is Large

CHICAGO, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press).—Influenced by a larger official estimate of wheat production in Argentina than was looked for, wheat prices averaged lower today in the early dealings. The Argentine crop indicated was in excess both of yield in 1926 and in 1925. Starting unchanged to ¾c higher, Chicago wheat market underwent a moderate general setback but later rallied. Corn developed strength, showing fractional advances all around after an irregular start. Oats were firm. Provisions held steady.

Wheat opened: December 125⅞; March 128¾. Corn, December 86⅛, March 90⅝. Oats, December 51½, March 55.

International Nickel Leads In Strength and Activity

TORONTO, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel was the leader both in strength and activity during the week's closing session of the Toronto Stock Exchange today. It touched 76¼ and closed with a gain of 1⅞ at 75⅞. Brazilian climbed 1¼ at 222½ but in much lighter dealings. Consumers Gas, Pacific Grain, Arnolds, Canners and City Dairy gained moderately. Bell Telephone softened a point at 155. Liquor mostly gained slightly, with Carlings leading with a gain of more than a point at ⅝. Seagrams, Canadian Brewing and Canadian Malting firmed while Walkers was slightly easier. Oils were mostly steady with British American unchanged at 36¼ and International Petroleum a half better at 36⅝.

Buying Orders Distributed Trading Was Heavy

NEW YORK, Dec. 17. Canadian Press. — Constructive forces were again at work in to-day's stock market, which gave another impressive demonstration of strength in the face of rather heavy week end realizing. Buying orders were distributed over a broad list, but copper, public utilities, tobacco and merchandising issues made the best group showings. Trading was in unusually heavy volume for the half holiday session. A steady improvement in the copper industry was reflected in heavy accumulation of those shares. General Motors and United States Steel common, leaders in the up swing yesterday ran into a lot of profit taking and could make little headway; public utilities moved forward under the leadership of western company stocks, particularly Pacific coast and Southern California Edison. Consolidated Cigar led the advance, tobaccos which were also featured by brisk recovery, and Porto Rican B, which slumped badly earlier in the week The closing was strong. The total sales approximated 1,400,000 shares.

Noranda Strong Leader Other Issues Make Gains

TORONTO, December 17 (Canadian Press).—A slightly heavier trading number of firm spots developed on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning. Noranda was the strong leader with a gain of 55 cents at 23.05. Capitol Rouyn which had the largest turnover, gained a point at 115, and Teck Hughes advanced 38 at 10.50. Crown Reserve and Berry Hollinger also firmed. Sudbury Basin lost 20 cents of yesterday's advance when it recided to 10.30, and Treadwell eased 25 cents at 25.75. Amulet, Kirkland Lake, Potter Doal and Laval Quebec lost a little.

FOWL PLENTIFUL ON LOCAL MARKET

A real jam of people marked the holding of the farmers' market in the basket section this morning. Plenty of fowl was on view, in a range of prices that went from 45 to 50 cents a pound for turkeys, 22 to 25 cents for chickens, 28 to 30 cents for ducks, and 25 to 30 cents a dozen for geese.

Cream was 30 cents a pint, eggs 58 and 60 cents a dozen and butter 40 cents a pound. Honey was 15 cents a pound.

There were several sales of Christmas cake, one society holding a sale on the market this morning disposing of nearly one hundred and ten pounds, at 65c. a pound, with late quotations down to 50 cents for rich-looking cake. The same price was asked by another regular vendor whose product had almond icing. Sixty cents was the quotation for a three pound carrot pudding. Devonshire cream was 50 cents in little bowls. Bunches of everlasting, "straw flowers" were 50 cents, and other artificial blooms were offered, in rosebuds and California poppies.

A lady whose utterance had a George Washington flavor was engaged in conversation with the Sanitary Inspector. "I can prove that I was never found out in a lie," she declared triumphantly. Whether this was a triumph of virtue or of care was not indicated. "You can see inside an egg," she asserted, however, with extreme truth, in answer to the charge advanced by a customer that a dozen eggs "had stuck to the shell."

On the open market, potatoes were quoted at 30 cents a peck and $1.50 a bag. Pork ranged from 14 to 18 cents a pound and veal from 20 to 26 cents a pound. Christmas trees were priced from 25 to 50 cents each and waited for purchasers, their friendly branches prostrate in the snow.

Spy apples, Number One, were $6.50 a barrel and Talman Sweets were $5.50. Russets were 50 cents a peck and Peewaukees 40 and 45 cents. Green pears were 60 cents a peck in small sizes and $1.10 a basket for the larger specimens.

Big Barred Rock fowl were $2.00 apiece.

There will be an extra market next Wednesday morning.

SECOND CATHOLIC SCHOOL BURNED

have been aroused by the fire at the Hospice St. Charles.

The St. John Berchman's Academy burned last night, had a central heating plant outside the structure, and the theory of defective wiring is not entertained.

Outgoing trains were being carefully scanned by the detectives, but no arrests were made.

Body Identified.

Except for the fact that one more body has been identified, the casualty list of the Hospice St. Charles fire of Wednesday night remains the same, that is thirty-six bodies have already been discovered ,and fourteen children are still missing. The search among the debris has not been continued on account of the difficulties caused by the stormy weather

House Burned

Fire of undetermined origin early this morning destroyed "Bagatelle," a ten roomed house just beyond the entrance to Spencerwood, on the St. Louis Road. This house was at one time occupied by the late Sir William Price, and was the property of Mrs. Frank Rhodes. It has been untenanted for some time during remodelling operations, preparatory to its being taken over by a relative of Mrs. Rhodes.

The fire which completely destroyed the house, gave rise to several rumors, chief of them that a fire was raging at Spencerwood and at Sillery convent. Both of these rumors were without foundation ory, or he might misinterpret what had been said, but when it is down in black and white, it is there for all time." So far, Dr. Godfrey added, he had received no written communication.

MINISTER ASKS

Irrespective of the ultimate fate of the laboratory, the Venereal Disease Clinic will remain in Peterborough, said Dr. Godfrey, adding that its removal was not contemplated when the decision affecting the laboratory was taken. The grant of $500 each per annum towards the salaries of the physician and the nurse at the V.D. Clinic and the allowance of 50 cents per treatment would also remain unchanged. Every form of medication required by the V.D. Clinic was supplied free of charge by the Department of Health," said Dr. Godfrey.

Dr. Godfrey also mentioned the following as typical of the assistance given by the Department over which he presides; supplying of anti-toxin absolutely free, free supplies of insulin to those unable to afford the expense, free supplies of anti-tetanic serum and typhoid serum, free supplies of Dick serum for scarlet fever, of the Schick, correct test for diphtheria and immunization and of nitrate of silver to prevent gonorrheal ophthalmia.

"The Department of Health spent, and spent gladly, $35,000 on the health of the Province during the month of November. All these sera were from the Connaught Laboratories maintained here in Toronto by the Government. They are recognized as the best in North America, so that we are sure of our product," said the Minister.

The intention of the Department was simply to spend this money to the best advantage, continued Dr. Godfrey He had merely been trying to apply the most effective business methods. In Norham, he said, there was an outbreak of diphtheria about two weeks ago. Three died as a result of failure to call the doctor in time. When called into the others, did the doctor take a swab? No, he gave the patients anti-toxin and he did not obtain that in Peterborough. He got it in Warkworth. The Laboratory in Peterborough had been costing the province $5,200. Some of that money could be spent even more efficiently if made use of under the new arangement contemplated by the Department.

He wished to point out that it was not the function of the Provincial Laboratory to examine milk and water in Peterborough. That was the duty of the municipality. It was worthy of note that the province was proposing to hand over to the city of Peterborough a first class equipwithout any charge whatever.

"As the affair stands at present," said Dr. Godfrey, "the next move lies with the city of Peterborough, and it is up to it to act quickly if it wishes to have this thing settled amicably."

COUNCIL ASKED FOR AGREEMENT

MEETING CONCILIATORY.

Reeve R. T. Lillico and Councillor W. Waterman of North Monaghan composed the delegation that was present at the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council, held last night. There was a spirit of conciliation shown between the representatives of the two municipalities. Monaghan's representatives claimed that they had nothing to do with the making of the sewer connection from the new Confederation school to the city outfall sewer. The delegation agreed that it was a most unfortunate happening but since their council meeting on Thursday they have been notified by the School Board to go ahead and complete an agreement for sewer connection. The committee agreed to extend the time limit to one year as at the coming meeting of the Legislature, North Monaghan intends to apply for legislation whereby the Council can assess the property-holders for sewer connection.

The committee was unable to see its way clear to reduce the amount that will be charged for the sewer privilege.

A meeting of the North Monaghan Council has been called for this afternoon to consider whether it will confirm the action of the School Board and a report is to be made to the City Council for Monday night's meeting.

If the agreement is signed, City Engineer Parsons will be instructed to see if the connection is a proper one. The work was done by city employees in record time, so Councillor Waterman suggested that it might be advisable for the city to hire a township foreman.

It was decided to deduct from the North Monaghan fire account the service of the local brigade to two trucks that were burned while using the highways of that township this year.

A report was received from Manager R. L. Dobbin of the Utilities Commission, saying that it would cost $650 to put in a hydrant on the C.P.R. property back of the Peterborough Canoe Company, or $800 if the work was done under winter conditions.

The citizens living near the C.N.R. crossing on Reid Street at the William Hamilton Foundry, complained about freight trains stopping near that intersection at night and causing the bell to ring while the engine was down at the station taking on water and coal.

The chairman was instructed to try and come to some arrangement with A. McNabb, whereby the trains would stop a little farther back.

Permission will be granted the Border Transit Company to erect a temporary galvanized iron garage west of their permanent building on Hunter Streets, as the company expects to add two more buses to the city's fleet, and it has no storage accommodation for them.

SPEAKER READS HIS OWN POEMS

Professor Pratt Delights Audience With Program By Request.

MUSICAL PROGRAM.

Professor E. J. Pratt of Victoria University, delighted a good sized audience in the green room of the Y. W.C.A. last evening, with a recital of some of his own poetical compositions, giving by request a number of the shorter pieces which he read last year. The meeting was presided over by the president of the Y.W.C.A., Miss Margaret Hamilton, and was made very pleasing by a musical interlude, with vocal solos and instrumental numbers by Mr. G. D. Carlisle and Mr. G. F. Liddle. Mr. Carlisle, whose fine baritone voice is always effective, was at his best last night. His superb rendition of Tennyson's famous composition, "Crossing the Bar," sung by special request of Dr. Pratt, with a wealth of rich, resonant tone and admirable depth of expression in its moving stanzas, was repeatedly encored, as was his second number, sung at the conclusion of the lecture, in John Ireland's "Sea Fever," with an encore in the rippling music of an Italian Boat Song, sung in English. Mr. Liddle, who played Mr. Carlisle's accompaniments, gave a solo pianoforte number, the dainty selection, "Sprites of the Glen."

Profesor Pratt repeated last night the story and poem of his own composition, woven around the exploits of the hero dog, Carlo, the big Newfoundland that saved ninety-three people from a wrecked ship by taking a line to the reef on which the boat was stranded, after all human efforts had failed.

A reading from his late work, "The Iron Door," was especially dramatic and spiritual in its essence, with a wealth of descriptive words and imagery in the strange vision of this door of death, an iron door placed in a granite cliff, without knocker and without latch, surmounted by the crest of Death, cruciform in construction, and beat upon in turn by the varying anguished blows of many pilgrims to this mystic portal. Opening finally, it left the dream-bound visitor with only a spectral glimpse of what lay beyond, and closed after the importunate demands of peace-seekers had died away. In the strange company of death before this door the author included his own mother, who died last Christmas and whose serene faith brought her to this portal with undimmed belief in its eventual surrender.

"The Sea Cathedral," a bit of reverbrating word painting based upon the sudden appearance at night of an iceberg, close to the steamer on which the composer was a voyager, and "The Shark," an ironical cameo of humor in "The Big Fellow," and a bit of caustic reproach in the recital by the infuriated angler, discoursing with his companion over a lost bite, in "Overheard by a Stream," were followed by the nonsense verses of the whimsical "House that Jack Built," in a progression of natural tragedies beginning with the demise of a caterpillar and ending with the forcible exit from this world of Farmer Bill. "Cherries" was a little thing of similar nature to the popular song favorite, "Perspicacity," and one of the most effective examples of the work of the composer, in a forty-line effort filled with characteristic atmosphere, was "The History of John Jones."

Wedding Bells

LANG—COMRIE.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at 12.30 on Thursday at George Street United Church Parsonage, when Bertha Margaret, youngest daughter of Mr. James Comrie, of Cobourg, was united in marriage to Mr. James T. Lang, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Lang, Perry Street, Peterborough. Rev. J. E. Todd officiated.

The bride wore a French frock of powder blue and salmon blush crepe romaine with hand painted and silver trimmings, large black picture hat, and silver kid slippers, with hose to match. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaid, Miss Jean Wheeler, niece of the bride, wore a lovely gown of pink taffeta, with black and silver trimming, and hat to match, and wore a corsage bouquet of pink roses and fern. Mr. Jack Stuart assisted the groom.

A buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. Wheeler, Stewart Street, to the immediate friends of the contracting parties.

The young couple received many useful and beautiful gifts. The groom's gift to the bride was a brown leather hat box, to the bridesmaid a green gold bracelet with pearl setting, and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links.

On their return they will reside in Peterborough.

TWO MACDONALDS SENTENCED TO DEATH ON MURDER CHARGE

Jury Returns Verdict of Guilty Against Both Man and Woman.

PAY PENALTY MARCH 23RD.

Woman Collapses in the Court Room as Sentence is Pronounced.

VALLEYFIELD, Que., Dec. 19 (Canadian Press).—George Macdonald and his 20-year-old wife, Doris, were sentenced late Saturday to pay with their lives for the murder of Adelard Bouchard, a Lachine, Que., taxi driver, last July 17. Sentence was pronounced by Mr. Justice Walsh after the jury had deliberated but 25 minutes before returning a verdict of guilty against both the man and the woman. The jury recommended mercy for Doris.

Doris, a former movie actress, had shown but scant interest in the trial up to the final day, but she collapsed as sentence was pronounced. Tears streamed down her face, she moaned and going suddenly limp, threw her arms about her husband's neck and pulled him to the floor with her. Attendants revived her and tenderly assisted by her husband she was half carried from the courtroom to her cell.

As the trial had drawn to a close both prisoners showed notable changes in demeanor. George, who had sat during the hearing of evidence, with his head resting in his hands, brightened perceptibly Saturday, apparently steeling himself for any result. Doris whose fresh appearance and light-hearted manner had caused comment, wilted throughout the day.

While taking the verdict and sentence calmly, the man showed the effect of the shock after being returned to his cell, and fainted suddenly. It was some time before he could be revived.

The man and the woman were returned to Montreal later in the evening and will be held in the Bordeaux Jail there.

Did Not Intend to Kill

During his charge to the jury Saturday, Mr. Justice Walsh had stated

Thousands Attend Funeral Services

QUEBEC, Que., December. 19.—Canadian Press. — Thousands of sorrowing people, among them relatives of the little girl victims of the Hospice St. Charles fire, attended the funeral services for the thirty six whose bodies were recovered and followed an almost unending procession as the bodies were transported to the St. Charles cemetery.

The funeral was given at the expense of the city and provincial government and all of the little victims were buried in the same plot, which was also provided by the authorities.

The service at the St. Roch church was impressive in its solemnity and dignity. The edifice was filled to overflowing, it being estimated that five thousand persons managed to enter the church. Outside thousands of others stood bareheaded.

GASOLINE FIRE BURNS STATION

WIND SPREADS FLAMES.

J. J. Duffus Ltd., automobile dealers, suffered their first loss by fire on Saturday when the Snappy Service Filling Station, in connection with the larger plant on South Water street, was seriously damaged, about four o'clock in the afternoon.

The cause of the blaze has not as yet been determined though several conflicting stories have been told. However the most probable one is that owing to the overflowing of the gasoline pump, operated automatically, the fumes were ignited by the hot exhaust pipe or a car which had just driven in. The owner avoided its destruction by driving it to a safe distance when the blaze was first seen while several other cars, waiting in line, were also removed.

The building was almost entirely of fire proof construction, otherwise the entire station might have been wiped out. At present Mr. Duffus is not in a position to give an estimate of the damage.

One thing he is prepared to express is his appreciation of the capable manner in which the firemen went about their work. "To them, and to the police department which rendered valuable assistance, I am extremely grateful," said he in discussing the fire this morning.

BENNETT DENIES USING INCOGNITO

Used His Own Name at All Times During Trip To England.

BAGGAGE MARKED.

MONTREAL, December 19 (Canadian Press). — "It is entirely a manufactured report. There was a man named R. B. Parker on the steamship Ausonia, but he went on to New York and I came to Montreal on the regular steamship special from Halifax. I travelled all the way under my own name, with my baggabe plainly marked 'R. B. Bennett.' It was an unfortunate error that my name was omitted from the passenger list, and I suppose someone noticed the name R. B. Parker on the list and jumped to conclusions."

This was the statement made by the Hon. R. B. Bennett, M.P., Federal leader of the Conservative Party of Canada, to the Canadian Press here in absolute contradiction of the widely published report that he had arrived at Halifax yesterday travelling under an incognito. Mr. Bennett caught the steamer in England at the last minute, and his name did not appear on the passenger list.

SUBMARINE DISASTERS OF PAST DECADE

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (Canadian Press).—Submersible fighting craft, while forming a comparatively small part of the world's great navies, have furnished some of the outstanding marine disasters of the past decade.

The last great submarine disaster was the loss of the S-51 off Block Island, R.I., when 34 men were killed in the sinking of the submarine in a collision with the City of Rome, September, 1925.

Other accidents to underseas craft, as shown by the Associated Press records were:

In December, 1922, forty-two men were trapped eight hours under water when the S-48 went to the bottom with an open hatch. All were rescued. The accident happened on a trial cruise off Bridgeport, Conn.

In August, 1923, a new unnamed Japanese undersea boat sank on its first trial trip at Kobe, with the largest recorded loss in submarine history. Eighty-five men were killed when the craft listed and sank.

March 19, 1924, forty-nine lives were lost on the Japanese submarine No. 42 in collision with the Japanese battleship Tatsuta off Susebo.

January 10, 1924, forty-three officers and men of the British submarine L-24 were lost off Portland, England, in a collision with the British dreadnought Resolution.

On March 23, 1922, during war games off Gibraltar, a British submarine with twenty-three men aboard was rammed and sunk by a British destroyer.

In 1918 a British submarine sank in the English Channel, and during the war numerous German undersea boats were lost and never recovered.

On January 30, 1925, the American S-48 grounded off Portsmouth, N.H., in a snowstorm, but was floated the next day, and during the same month the S-19 grounded for a short time off Cape Cod.

An accident at the Brooklyn Navy Yard in 1916 caused four deaths and many injuries to members of the crew on board the U.S. Navy E-7. The accident was caused by an explosion.

The explosion of gas in the storage battery compartment of the U.S.N. submarine S-49 at New London, Conn., killed three men and injured nine others April 4, 1926.

THREE PERSONS ARE ARRESTED IN LOS ANGELES

Held as Suspects For Murder and Mutilation of Little Girl.

ONE WOMAN HELD.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19. Canadian Press. — Three more suspects, two men and a woman, were arrested here to-day near the place where the kidnapper on Saturday exchanged the mutilated body of little Marian Parker for fifteen hundred dollars in currency presented by her father.

One man who answered in a general way the description of "George Fox," who took the 12 year old girl from her school, was first found He was booked under the name of Geo Barnaman and gave his age as 24.

A woman who said she was Lillian Padley, 23, was then arrested together with another man who gave been the site of the killing of the were found at a mysterious house, which the police believe may have been the site of the killing of the girl, and the dismembering of her body. The house was raided after the police had been told that the woman had been running up and down the street shouting "I didn't kill her—I didn't kill her They did it."

The police said the woman was intoxicated. Long was hazy in his answers to the police questions, the officers said. He could not remember to whom he paid the rent for the house, whose window overlooks the spot where Perry M. Parker on Saturday night paid over $1500 to the kidnapper who returned his daughter's mutilated body. When pressed for the name of his landlady Long answered "Mrs Parker."

Within the house the raiding officers found heel prints sharply etched in what appeared to be blood stains, blood stained towels and towels which had been freshly washed in an attempt to remove similar stains ,and a piece of men's clothing which still bore a large stain, although freshly washed.

Several razor blades were found which the police believed may have been used in the atrocious crime.

Long was released by the police after questioning. The police explained that while Barnaman was arrested at actually the same time Long and the woman were found, he was not in the immediate vicinity of the mysterius house.

The early morning raid was one of

KIWANIS CLUB IS CRITICIZED FOR DECORATING OF STREETS

REEVE RETIRING.

REEVE R. T. LILLICO
Of North Monaghan, who after eight years in active service on the North Monaghan Council, announces that he is retiring from public life for the time being. Mr. Lillico has had an unusual record in the council of that township, as the ratepayers have accorded him six acclamations. He was a councillor for two years, Deputy-Reeve five, and Reeve one. He consistently fought for six years in the County Council to have the pupils surrounding the city of Peterborough put on equal rights with those in the rest of the county, and last midsummer it was accomplished when the Collegiate was thrown open to county pupils, the county bearing its share of the cost.

President McNabb Explains That This Work Will Not Curtail Relief.

COMMUNITY EFFORT

Work Was Done by Members Without Charge in Kiwanis Manner.

Criticism has been made of the decorating of the business streets of the city by Kiwanis Club, on the ground that the money so expended should have been used in relief work. In an interview with The Examiner today, President Isaac McNabb explained the project, but expressed the opinion that the work of Kiwanis Club is too well known in Peterborough to leave room for much adverse criticism.

"The work was done by our own Club members, assisted by several members of the Friday Night Club," Mr. McNabb said, "and did not cost anything in cash. It is a principle of Kiwanis Club that all possible work on projects sponsored by the Club should be done by Club members, and this is well carried out by the Peterborough Club.

"The idea behind the decorating of the streets is to continue the good community work started in the united celebration of the Diamond Jubilee, and so well sponsored last year and this by The Examiner through its Hallowe'en Party. The decorating of the streets for Christmas adds a holiday air unsurpassed anywhere, and is a direct contribution to the merchants who have so willingly aided Kiwanis Club in its work."

Mr. McNabb told of a traveller who remarked, on approaching the decorated portion of George Street from the direction of the C.P.R. station, that in all his travels he had never seen anything to compare with this for beauty or for the evidence it gave of community spirit.

The statement said to have been made by some, that Kiwanis Club was asked to organize a community tree from which gifts and candies would be distributed to the poor, and that the Club rejected the suggestion, is incorrect, President McNabb said. This plan was not brought to the Club by any non-member, but was proposed at a Board of Directors' meeting some weeks ago, and not approved. The reason for this disapproval is the opinion of Kiwanis Club that Christmas cheer should be dispensed quietly, without drawing attention to those to whom it is given. The usual Christmas cheer will be given by Kiwanis Club this year. Last year, 53 baskets were distributed, containing besides staple groceries such dainties as oranges, raisin bread, cake, candies, and nuts. The decorating of the streets will not in any way diminish the extent of this work.

"Kiwanis Club in all its activities is endeavorng to serve the community," Mr. McNabb concluded. "We believe that the citizens generally will approve this Christmas endeavour."

ALL RESOURCES OF NAVY IN USE TO RESCUE MEN

Fight Against Time Still Proceeding Off Provincetown Harbor.

HOPES GROW DIM.

Imprisoned Men Send Out Call For Help—Six Known To Be Alive.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 19. —(Canadian Press.)— The Atlantic coast resources of the United States Navy concentrated here to-day in a herculean effort to wrest from death the six of the forty entombed men aboard the Submarine S-5 who were known to be alive. For the thirty-four others on the ill-fated craft when the coast guard destroyer Paulding sent it hurtling to the bottom on Saturday, there was hope that some might survive but that hope was dim.

It was a fight against time today, in which every minute was precious ,and the odds were admittedly agains tthe slowly suffocating survivors in an almost impossible ratio.

In the ears of every officer and man of the rescue fleet from the Rear Admiral down to the rawest recruit, rang the desperate cry of the Rear Admiral down to the rawest reunfortunate men, laboriously pounded out by a hammer in metallic dots and dashes of the Morse code to a diver alongside on the sandy bottom.

'How long will you be now?" and then ,"Please hurry."

The message that told the fleet that men still lived on the S-5 came from the torpedo room. From the other compartments there was no encouraging word.

Two determined attempts by newspapermen to reach the rescue flotilla were frustrated when heavy seas broke over their launches and drenched the reporters. One boat succeeded in reaching the outer harbour but was forced to turn back to avoid being swamped by the waves. No communication from the fleet to shore was attempted and as far as could be observed there was a complete suspension of activity aboard the craft there. It was generally believed that until the sea subsided the work of rescue would be held up indefinitely.

Storm Hinders Rescue

Rescue operations at the scene of the sinking of the submarine S-5 were virtually at a standstill this morning as a 45-mile northwest gale whipped the harbor into a rough sea. The temperature was twenty degrees above zero. It was reported that the naval tugs Sagamore and Iuka, bringing pontbons from Brooklyn

Divers Attempting To Rescue Sailors From Sunken Craft

S-4 Sinks With Crew When Rammed Outside Provincetown, Mass., By Coast Guard Destroyer, Paulding—Entombed Men Send Out Appeal For Aid, Tapped With Hammer on Steel Casing To Rescuers.

NAVY EXPERT BELIEVES PART OF CREW IN BATTERY ROOM KILLED BY CRUSH

Diver Tells of Battle With Turbulent Waters Far Beneath the Surface To Find Way To Gain Freedom For Helpless Men—Air Becoming Bad, Message Sent Out By Code Signal.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., December 19. — At least six men were alive last night in the sunken hull of the submarine S-4, which was rammed outside the harbor here on Saturday by a coastguard boat ,and went to the bottom with some forty-odd men aboard.

The announcement was made last night by Rear-Admiral Frank Brumby, directing the efforts to bring the disabled craft to the surface and save the lives of the members of the crew.

Report From Diver.

Admiral Brumby based his statement on a report received from a diver who went down 101 feet to the mud bank on which the submarine rests to converse in code with those inside a forward compartment by hammering on the side of the steel hull.

"How long will you be?" was the pathetic message tapped out by the imprisoned men. The diver answered that everything possible was being done. The air was bad, said the code reply, tapped out from inside the hull.

Far Beneath Surface.

It was just about 24 hours after the S-4 was rammed and sunk by the coastguard destroyer Paulding a mile outside the harbor that the diver, a crack navy expert, working far beneath the surface of a turbulent sea, caught the signals from inside the forward compartment.

In Forward Section.

The diver reported to Admiral Brumby that the men who responded to his signals were in the forward part of the submerged vessel. He also brought up an account of heavy damage to the battery room and to the stern of the ship.

This report of the damage to the S-4, which went down after a collision with the coastguard boat while running submerged, caused Captain Ernest L. King, submarine rescue specialist, to declare that at least three or four of the crew had been killed in the battery room, which was crushed. There might have been a dozen or more men there, he said.

Some Surely Alive.

But with Rear-Admiral Brumby affirming that some men were surely alive in the torpedo room forward, Captain King joined him in declaring he would do everything possible with the fleet of rescue ships here to save the lives of all who might be still fighting for existence.

Thomas Eadie, a diver whose rank is that of chief torpedo-man, went down at 3.13 p.m. He did not come up until 4.30 o'clock, when he made a hurried report to Captain King and Rear-Admiral Bsumby.

Eadie said he was certain that the men alive were in the forward torpedo room. He told of his hammer signals and of receiving signals in reply.

Severe Damage.

Heartened by what he heard, he said, he began to explore. As he made his way carefully toward the stern he saw the signs of the severe damage done to the submarine in the crash. The conning tower, he declared, was ripped apart.

Closer examination revealed that a hole had been pierced in the battery chamber . Eadie said that this hole had apparently been opened by the prow of the Paulding. Further toward the stern the damage seemed worse.

The diver told of getting tangled in the wreckage of the superstructure that cluttered the muddy water and of finding it hazardous to proceed. Despite the danger, he pushed his way around the craft resuming his hammering and his listening.

UNION LEADERS ASKED TO MEET FOR DISCUSSION

Peace In Industry Principle Subject of British Conference.

INVITED BY EMPLOYERS.

Unions Likely To Ask For Consideration of Other Industrial Problems.

LONDON, Dec. 19. — Within the next few days the General Council of the Trades Union Congress will have to decide whether it is going to accept an invitation from a body of employers to a meeting at which the problem of how to attain peace in industry will be discussed.

A special meeting of Labor leaders has been summoned to discuss the proposal and in spite of the opposition of a very active minority it is believed some approach will be made towards accepting the invitation.

Although peace in industry is the primary goal, commentators understand that the Labor representatives will want to review the whole position of industry including managerial efficiency, the meeting of foreign competition, and overhead charges, and in this connection it is believed that employers will be willing to make the scope of the inquiry wide enough to embrace all the problems.

A definite tendency has been revealed recently for far-sighted employers to take their men into greater confidence and also to enlist the support of workers of experience and outlook to help run the industries. The old idea that it is natural for antagonism to exist between Capital and Labor and in the relation between master and man is disappearing in the stress of Britain's industrial problems, and if it actually does disappear something valuable will have been extracted from post-war losses.

LEADERS TO ACCEPT ISSUE

Diocesan Synod To Consider Position of Church Affairs at Next Session.

THREE COURSES OPEN.

LONDON, Dec. 19 (Canadian Press Cable).—All other prominent leaders of the Church of England are apparently accepting the joint exhortation of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, issued following the unexpected rejection of the revised prayer book in the British House of Commons last Thursday, for "patience and charity in this time of confusion and anxiety" and have determined for the time being to remain silent.

The Archbishop of York's monthly letter to the diocese, which happens to be published this week-end, reveals that he had the possibility of the rejection of the prayer book by Parliament in mind previously, as he appeals to the clergy not to make any changes in the conduct of the church service until after the sitting of the Diocesan Synod, which he proposes to summon early in the new year to consider the position of Church affairs.

The Bishop of Ripon has sent a message to his flock urging remembrance that the spiritual facts have not been altered by the merely political happenings of the past week.

Three Courses Open.

At least three courses are open. The Church Assembly next year could re-approve the prayer book and send it back to Parliament. The Assembly could also send it back with the deletion of the new Communion service. There is also some talk of the propriety of all church people, including the Church Assembly, straightway embarking upon a campaign for disestablishment of the Church of England as a protest against the considered judgment of the Church Assembly being nullified by the action of Parliamentarians who are not churchmen. This latter course is most unlikely to be adopted.

Probably no developments of a decided character will occur immediately, but meanwhile the position of the bishops will be difficult in the extreme. Some of the clergy, for instance, have already begun to use the new prayer book. What is a bishop to say to them when he has declared himself whole-heartedly in favor of the revised prayer book?

Live Topic In Australia.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press Cable, via Reuter's).—The rejection of the revised Church of England prayer book by the British House of Commons last Thursday is a live topic in Australia, where a new church constitution shortly comes into force.

The Melbourne newspaper Argus says that this action by the House of Commons is the price of establishment and the Church of England now asks whether the price is not too great.

Archbishop Lees of Melbourne says that when the new Australian church constitution becomes effective "we shall have the legal right to revise our prayer book for ourselves if we desire. Meantime our obligations, freedoms and restrictions are unchanged and are not very arduous in these modern days."

Who hath not followed all the way
By alders green and sedges gray and blossoms blue?

Where runs the river? Hill and wood

Or rocks or waterfalls it strains,
At last the Vast the stream attains;

C.N.R. STATION IS DEMOLISHED

Eight Freight Cars Leave the Track at Stirling, Wrecking Building.

LOSS ABOUT $3,000.

STIRLING, Dec. 19.—The Canadian National Railways Station here was almost totally demolished yesterday morning, when eight freight cars left the rails and crashed into the building. The cars were badly damaged, as well as two work cars standing on the station siding.

The accident, which occurred at about 6 o'clock, is attributed to a broken wheel. The last cars of the eastbound train were thrown from the track, splintering the frame building. Three cars, used by painters, who have been at work on the station, were in the path of the derailed cars, and only one of them escaped damage.

No one was in the station at the time of the accident. Until recently the agent's living quarters were in the building. It will take about $3,000 to replace the station.

C.P.R. VESSEL BREAKS RECORD

Amount of Mail Brought To Canadian Port By One Vessel.

AHEAD OF SCHEDULE.

SAINT JOHN, N.B., December 19.—Canadian Press. — Breaking all records for the amount of mail brought to a Canadian port by one vessel, the Canadian Pacific Str. Melita, from Liverpool via Greenock, arrived in port here on Saturday evening. The vessel was a day ahead of her schedule, having had favorable weather and a calm and uneventful trip.

She brought out 79 cabin, 30 tourists and 205 third class passengers, as well as 2300 tons of general cargo.

It required 16 cars to handle the large amount of Christmas mail matter brought out by the Melita, breaking all records for the amount of mail received a this port from one vessel and also for Canada. This was exclusive of a large amount of mail for the maritime provinces.

Prominent among returning Canadians on the vessel was Sir Charles Tupper Bart., who was returning from a short trip to Edinburgh, where he had been on private business.

Other Canadians included Miss S. Belcourt of Ottawa; B. Patenaude, of Montreal and Miss E. M. Corss, Winnipeg. Another passenger was Herrich Lenzen, German consul at Winnipeg

LAKE VESSEL STILL MISSING

MADE THOROUGH SEARCH.

PORT ARTHUR, December 19 (Canadian Press). — The coastal steamer Islet Prince, which left on Monday morning last for a search of the north shore of Lake Superior for the missing Canada Steamships freighter Kamloops, returned to port at six o'clock last evening. Capt. A. E Fader reported no sign of anything that would indicate the fate of the missing freighter. He covered 120 miles of the shore line thoroughly from here to the Slate Islands, and called at four lighthouse keepers. They had heard boats during the storm but knew nothing of their identity.

The Islet Prince was out two days longer than expected, but Captain Fader says he never was in any trouble, and could have found absolutely safe shelter at any time within an hour. Shelter he did take on Thursday and Friday near Nipigon because of a strong north-east gale with snow. Captain Sam Wright, local tug captain, came out on Saturday in support of a statement made on Friday by Captain Henry Gehl, of the tug Champlain, who declared his belief in the possibility of the Kamloops being on Isle Royale, and expressing the wish that a more thorough search be made of its shore lines.

The Midland Prince visited Isle Royale on Monday, but was out only a few hours. These tug captains and other local vesselmen are very strong in their opinion that all the possibilities of search for the Kamloops have not yet been exhausted, but no announcement has been forthcoming as yet of any further move.

None of the 27 steamers tied up here have made any attempt to force a passage through the ice-blocked river, and they will all go into winter quarters here.

The steamer J. B. Eades, which is fast in the ice in the middle Neebish Channel 20 miles below the Soo, will remain there for the winter, it is reported to-day, the efforts of the tugs to free her having been without success. The Eades has been in the ice for a week.

HEAVY STORM HALTS TRAFFIC

TRAINS OFF SCHEDULE.

BUFFALO, N.Y., December 19. — Canadian Press. — Buffalo lies under a mantle of 13 inches of snow, last night. Saturday's storm was over. All trains were behind schedule on Saturday; street car traffic was slow and irregular, and automobiles were abandoned in snowbanks in every street The city has a force of 500 men at work endeavoring to open the principal thoroughfares. Many automobile accidents resulted from the storm and at least one is likely to result fatally. Driving is the more hazardous because of a layer of ice which formed just before the snow began falling at 4 o'clock on Saturday morning.

The New York Central yards here were blocked by drifts. Mail trains from the east and west were arriving two to four hours late. Lake men took extra precautions and moored vessels were secured extra well.

TWO MACDONALDS SENTENCED, ETC.

that he would grant that the accused "did not intend to kill" but that the evidence made it clear that a plan existed to knock Bouchard out and steal his automobile. He reminded the jury that defence had confined itself to a reconstruction of the crime, admitting all the circumstantial evidence connecting the accused with the victim. The defence had blamed the murder on Palmer, the missing companion of the Macdonalds, he observed.

The judge spoke of the part played by the woman in the crime. "You can take it as you like," he said, "but she certainly fired her pistol in that car, and she got her dress all spattered with blood." He went on to refer to the finding of the blood-stained clothing of the accused near the scene of the crime, the appearance of the accused at the border near Malone, N.Y., an hour after the crime; the recovery of blood-stained money they had spent, and the evidence pointing to the need of the accused for haste in getting out of Canada after forging cheques at a Montreal hotel.

"It doesn't matter who fired at Bouchard," the judge continued. "The offence occurred while they were on an unlawful expedition and therefore they are responsible before the law equally."

Owing to the fact that the jury was composed equally of French and English-speaking jurors ,the charge was repeated in both languages.

Out Twenty-Five Minutes

The case was given to the jury at 5 p.m., and twenty-five minutes later the court was notified that a verdict had been reached. The prisoners were led to their seats. Doris' lips were trembling and her brown hair fell over one side of her face, emphasizing her ghastly pallor. Her teeth chattered as the jury filed in.

Stephen Wilkins, the foreman, began: "We find Mr. Macdonald guilty of murder"; before the juryman got any further Doris slumped and her head fell against her husband's side. —"And we find Mrs. Macdonald guilty of murder with recommandation of mercy," the foreman continued. The woman buried her head on her husband's lap and sobbed pitifully.

The judge ordered an adjournment and the prisoners were led out; Doris walking with difficulty ,assisted by her husband and guards.

Courtroom Crowded

The court was jammed with spectators, mostly women, when the convicted murderers returned to hear the death sentence. Mrs. Macdonald swayed in with her arms thrown about her husband's neck. She kept her arm tight about his waist as they stood to hear the sentence.

Doris' complete collapse followed the pronouncement of the death sentence. She was revived in a few minutes. She sobbed convulsively and buried her head in her husband's lap again. He stroked her arm tenderly and assisted her on her way from the court room.

George and Doris Macdonald were charged with the murder of Adelard Bouchard, Lachine, Que., taxi driver, when his body was found in a muddy ditch on the Malone-Caughnawaga Highway near Huntingdon, Que., July 17. Bouchard's limousine in which he had started out to drive the couple from a Montreal hotel across the United States border was missing. The pair were arrested at Butte, Montana, after an extensive search by police of both the United States and Canada. Bouchard's limousine, blood-spattered and with several bullet holes was recovered by the police, and articles of clothing, identified during the trial as belonging to the Macdonald's were found near the scene of the crime. Witness testified as to attempts by the accused to cross the border at various points with the male accused inpersonating Bouchard. A considerable sum of money was missing when the taxi-driver's body was recovered, and evidence at the trial included some blood-stained bills which, it was testified, the accused had spent at border points an hour after the murder.

PLAINTIFFS LOSE IN TWO ACTIONS

Jury Finds For Defence in Both Cases in County Court—One Appealed.

The sittings of the County Court of the County of Peterborough with a jury before His Honor Judge Huycke, concluded its sittings at the late hour of 10 o'clock Saturday night.

Owing to Judge Huycke having to preside at the Court at Cobourg on account of the illness of Judge McGlade, the Court at Peterborough was only formally opened on Tuesday afternoon, and the trial of cases commenced on Wednesday morning. Two cases were tried by jury, and in each case the verdict was rendered in favor of the defendant, the action brought by the plaintiffs being dismissed with costs.

Shook vs. Marshal.

This was an action brought by Mrs. J. C. Shook, formerly of Peterborough, and now of Toronto, against James Marshall, of Peterborough, for $500.00 damages claimed to have arisen through Marshall's alleged breach of contract.

The evidence given on behalf of the plaintiff and her witnesses was in effect that Mrs. Shook had engaged Marshall as a furnace man to attend to the furnace in her apartments at 176 McDonnel Street, in the City of Peterborough, for the winter of 1925-1926, at a wage of $10.00 per month.

On December 27th, 1925, in the absence of Marshall, through illness, and when the furnace was being attended to by one King (who was doing the work without plaintiff's knowledge), the pipes leading to the radiators and expansion tank and the expansion tank became frozen, resulting in a break or crack developing in the furnace, involving considerable outlay in connection with the repair of same. The plaintiff claimed that the injury to the furnace and consequent damage to the house was caused by failure on the part of King to properly maintain the fire in the furnace having regard to weather conditions.

The defendant Marshall, who, although a returned soldier, is a man well advanced in years, gave evidence that he was ordered to go to the Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, for treatment for injuries received while on active service, and as Mrs Shook was residing in Toronto, he reported his condition to the tenants occupying one of the apartments, only one of the apartments being occupied at that time, and recommended King as a suitable man, in his opinion, to take charge of the furnace while he was in hospital, and King accordingly took over the work and, according to evidence, performed same satisfactorily from November 16 to December 27, when the damage to the furnace occurred. The evidence, which was concurred in by the witnesses on both sides, was to the effect that the weather conditions on the night of December 27 were very unusual, with the result that in other portions of the city frozen pipes were so numerous that, as one plumber of the city testified, he and ten men under him were engaged in attending to frozen pipes and furnaces all day, notwithstanding that it was Sunday. King testified, and in this he was corroborated by other defence witnesses, that the fire in the furnace had been properly attended to, claiming that the position of the expansion tank in the garret of the building and the unusual and abnormal weather conditions had produced the result. During the progress of the case the defendant was overcome with a severe return of his illness, and after medical treatment from Dr. Edward Wood, was taken to his home.

After the hearing of evidence and the addresses of counsel and the charge of Judge Huycke, the jury, after consideration, brought in a unanimous verdict in favor of the defendant, and the Judge accordingly dismissed the plaintiff's action, awarding the costs of the action to the successful defendant.

Joseph A. O'Brien represented Mrs. Shook, the plaintiff, and F. D. Kerr, K.C., conducted the case on behalf of the defendant Marshall.

Griffith vs. Breckenridge.

This was an action for alleged slander brought by W. E. Griffith, of Belmont Township, at one time Reeve of the Township of Belmont, and Warden of the County of Peterborough, in the year 1921, against J. Franklin Breckenridge, of the Township of Belmont, the defendant Breckenridge being the Reeve of the Township of Belmont since the retirement of the plaintiff Griffith some six years ago.

A large number of witnesses were called by the plaintiff and a larger number were called by the defendant. The plaintiff and his witnesses affirming that at the municipal nomination meeting in Belmont on December 27, 1926, that the defendant Breckenridge had in the course of a discussion on municipal matters in which he and Griffith were engaged grossly slandered the plaintiff in connection with the plaintiff's municipal management of one of the matters occupying municipal attention in the year 1920. This was expressly denied by the defendant and his witnesses, the defendant and his witnesses testifying that nothing of a slanderous nature had been said, and on the other hand affirming that the defendant had not nor did he intend in any way whatever to impute any wrong-doing on the part of the plaintiff Griffith. Every step in the taking of the evidence was strenuously contested by the opposing counsel, resulting very frequently in sharp clashes, which in turn called forth many rebukes from the Judge.

The taking of evidence and the addresses of the counsel and Judge occupied the attention of the court from Thursday afternoon until 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, when the case was given to the jury. At 10 o'clock, after being out five hours, the jury returned with a verdict in favor of the defendant, the foreman reporting two two held out for the plaintiff and ten in favor of the defendant. The Judge then entered up a verdict dismissing the plaintiff Griffith's action, awarding the costs of the action to the successful defendant.

Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., conducted the case for ex-Warden Griffith, the plaintiff, and F. D. Kerr, K.C., conducted the case on behalf of Reeve Breckenridge, the defendant.

Take notice that the plaintiff appeals to a Divisional Court, from the judgment pronounced by His Honor Judge Huycke, upon the issues tried by a jury herein, on Saturday, the 17th day of Dec. 1927, to set aside the judgment directed to be entered herein, dismissing the plaintiff's action, and for an order directing a new trial, upon the following, among other grounds:

1.—That the findings of the jury are contrary to law and evidence, and the weight of evidence.

2.—That the learned Trial Judge failed to direct the jury, as to the law respecting privileges, and that the defendant had exceeded any right of privilege, in speaking of the plaintiff, as in the statement of claim alleged, causing a mistrial.

3.—That the said learned Trial Judge failed to direct the jury, that the defendant's failure to investigate and enquire as to the payment of the Fry check, affected his right of claiming privilege, and that the failure to so enquire and investigate, by the defendant, was evidence of malice.

4.—That the counsel for the defendant was permitted to give and submit evidence, that was irrevelant, which misled, and confused the jury, as to the real issues to be tried, causing a mistrial.

5.—That the defendant's counsel was permitted to give evidence from newspapers ,a previous Division Court action, and the judgment therefrom, and irrevelant evidence, which misled the jury and obscured the issue, causing a mistrial.

6.—That the defendant's counsel made a virulent attack upon one Fry, a witness of the plaintiff, pointing him out in court as an evil genius, and declaring that he was a conspirator, and the cause of the proceedings taken by the plaintiff, and by an inflammatory address, attacking said Fry and the plaintiff's counsel, obscured the issues to be tried, and inflamed the minds of the jury and as a result a mistrial took place.

7.—The jury was allowed to disperse during the three days of the trial and travelled to their homes in various parts of the county and by representations, concerning the action, made by others than the court and counsel, the jury was misled, as to the issues before them for trial.

8.—That at the trial, the counsel for the defendant, stated, and the jury accepted it as a fact, that the reason that the trial was not heard until the present time, was for the purpose of influencing a municipal election, in which it was anticipated, that the defendant and plaintiff would be candidates, and by inflammatory comment, injected partizan feeling and excitement, into the minds of the jury, causing the issues to be obscured and confused, and caused a mistrial.

9.—The counsel for the defendant exceeded his rights of cross-examination, and by insinuation, innuendoes and the introduction of irrevelant, partizan and inflammatory questions, comments and references, during his examinations, created prejudice and inflamed the minds of the jury, and obscured the issues before the jury, causing, in effect, a mistrial.

10.—That the learned Trial Judge failed to properly direct the jury, as to the right of privilege of communication of the defendant, under the circumstances disclosed in the action, the defendant's failure to investigate the circumstances under which the Fry check was paid, as affecting his privilege, and that the comments of the plaintiff, did not justify the defendant, in charging the plaintiff with a criminal offence, and by reason of such non-direction and misdirection, a mistrial took place.

11.—That the Court reporter was not sworn to take the evidence in shorthand at the trial of this action, and had never been sworn, in, as a Court reporter, causing a mistrial.

Dated this 19th day of December, A.D. 1927.

Tom Cat Annoyed When Taken As Skunk

Mistaking a big tom cat for a skunk was an unfortunate occurrence for a resident in the west-end of the city. Recently a skunk has been visiting the hennery at Mount St. Joseph, and while 'Captain' Peterson, an old salt water sailor, was on his rounds one night he thought he saw the skunk in the snow. He secured a gun and fired at the animal . No sooner had he shot than the cat, which has been prowling around the grove for some time, and is very wild, jumped at him, and in the scrap which followed, Mr. Peterson had both his hands badly scratched.

General Trend Lower On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Dec. 19. — (Canadian Press.)—A few moderately substantial gains were prominent against an otherwise depressive tendency on the Toronto stock exchange this morning. Shredded Wheat advanced more than a point at 73¼ and Bell Telephone gained 1½ at 156½, while Alberta Pacific Grain was more than a point better at 54. Canners Preferred, Muirheads, Seagram, Canada Cement and Northern Bakeries also sold higher. Brazilian, losing a point, was one of the chief weak spots. Industrial Alcohol and Consumers Gas also sold lower ,while International Nickel, the active leader, lost ¾ at 75¼. The liquors tended slightly lower, though Carlings was fractionally higher at 38¾. The oils were all unchanged except for Imperial, which eased a quarter at 59½.

Leading Stocks Gain While Others Lose

TORONTO, Dec. 19 (Canadian Press).—A sensational climb in Sudbury Basin was the feature of active dealing on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning. Sudbury advanced 1.55 at 11.85 and was at the high mark at the noon close. Noranda, in company with Sudbury, advanced 45 at 23.50, but Treadwell recovered only 15 at 23.15. Despite these advances the general tendency was to slightly lower price levels, and losses of a fraction to two points were shown in Tough Oaks, Vipond, Stadacona, Laval Quebec, Granada Rouyn, and Area, while Amulet lost eight. Barry Hollinger eased five, and Bidgood sold down four. Teck Hughes firmed five at 10.55.

Wheat Prices Go Up Before Report Appears

CHICAGO. Dec. 19. Canadian Press. — With the government final crop report due from Washington this afternoon, wheat scored an early advance to-day. It was generally expected the offical estimate of the 1927 wheat yield would exhibit a reduction of 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels, starting at 1-4c decline to a shade advance. Wheat later showed a moderate upturn all around Corn, oats and provisions likewise developed firmness. Corn opened unchanged to 1-4c off and subsequently made slight gains.

Opening prices were: Wheat Dec., 126 1-2; March, 128 7-8c; corn, Dec. 84 7-8; March, 89 7-8; oats, Dec., unquoted, March, 54 5-8c.

Demand For Food Shares Is Feature In New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press.)— Active bidding for a wide assortment of food specialties, more than a score of which were elevated to record high levels, more than offset the development of weak spots in to-day's stock market. The publication of another series of optimistic business forecasts, coupled with the continuance of easy money rates, stimulated bullish enthusiasm. Professional traders sold stocks freely on the theory that the market was entitled to at least a technical reaction, but the offerings were well absorbed, suggesting a strong underlying investment demand. Rider-City Southern Railroad, the first to report its November earnings, showed a small increase in net operating income as compared with the same month last year.

Nickel Stocks Draw Much Interest Now

Much new interest has been evinced of late in the Nickel Stocks and International Nickel climbed above the high of last June when it touched 74. At that time Mond Nickel was selling around 37 shillings per share. This week the stock reached the record price of 105 shillings on the London Stock Exchange and a great deal of gossip is going the rounds about these two companies. Six months ago when International was brought up to 74 mostly on Montreal buying, with New York on the selling end it was generally accepted that interests associated with the C. P.R. were the purchasers. It was said that the railway wanted to secure a voice in the company's affairs to the end that it might once again count "Nickel" as one of its biggest customers. Now the rumor is that Mond Nickel people were the buyers through Montreal the idea being to get control of the whole of the Frood Copper body. Mond owns a portion out of the centre of the body and as it goes to depth it dips further into Mond ground. International Nickel owns both ends of the ore body estimated at 100,000,000 tons of $50 ore. "Nickel" has announced its decision to erect a $10,000,000 electrolytic smelter. Mond, whose ore body is more developed than the other, has not announced how it will treat its ore, If it got control of "Nickel" it would mean the whole of the ore body would be under one operation and the new smelter could handle it all. Incidentally, such a coup on the part of Mond would place 90 p.c. of the world's nickel supply under the British Company. Though this is only gossip, it is a situation fraught with much interest.

Nipissing Mining Co. has announced that it will complete the payments on its Mountbray Quebec property as was forecast in these columns some time ago. A subsidiary will be organized and certain stock rights in the new venture will be passed on to shareholders.

The Hollinger situation in Kirkland is being watched with a great deal of interest as it is expected an official announcement will be forthcoming from the company as to results obtained in its exploration campaign. Some say the big surprise is to be expected. It is reported that Hollinger is acquiring additional claims and that the new N. O. railway is planning to extend its branch in from Timmins, a distance of about 12 miles.

What is wrong with Wright Hargreaves one of the three premier producers of Kirkland Lake, is a question frequently asked. The shares have dropped materially in value the last month or so. One broker says he marketed a large block of shares for a holder who decided to take his profit. This also is the report that quite a number of Buffalo holders have been selling and buying Bidgood, may explain the weakness in part. In addition to this interest in the issue has narrowed the last few years by a group of men in Buffalo accumulating the stock and taking it off the market. It is noted that Buffalo holdings in the good shares now total about 1,000,000 shares.

It is announced that Sylvanite is joining Wright Hargreaves on the east will sink its shaft an additional 500 ft. to 2,000 ft. It seems that the real rich ore of the camp depends on the ends. On the west Kirkland Lake Gold had to go to $1,600 ft. to pick it up. Teck Hughes got the ore at 1,300 ft. It evidently reaches its apex on Lake Shore in the east got it at 1,500 ft., but a sufficient distance east of its west boundary to leave room for cutting it higher up on some of the other levels. Wright Hargreaves has well over 4,000 ft. on the zone. It is therefore difficult to estimate how deep Sylvanite will have to go to pick it up. This operation has, however, some very rich ore.

Noranda's large smelter is belching smoke from its stacks and in a week or so actual products should be under way. The mine is in excellent shape to feed the smelter for a considerable period before any ore need be drawn from the other properties Noranda has acquired.

The stream of good news from Rouyn regarding Amulet seems to have been released again indicating that, perhaps the public can be fished into buying this stock again until it reaches $7. Northern Ontario and the Quebec investers were hit hard by the slump in Amulet and it would be a difficult task to convince them that production of over $5 ing has put a valuation than a week previously had sold less freely below $4. information had become available when no further The weakness developed when directors refused to give any estimate of ore reserves and as yet no figures have been forthcoming.

North-western Quebec has two gold operations that have come into considerable prominence lately, Granada rocketed in the body of sediment-attracting south of Rouyn, which first attracted prospectors to the area, Tow Malartic Mines, in Fournier Rolnship, about 45 miles east of Rouyn. Granada has carried out extended lateral work on the 125-ft. level with encouraging results. Malartic is sinking a 500-ft. shaft and it is now down 150 ft. Spectacular free gold has been found and diamond drilling has revealed good values to 1,200 ft. This property was first diamond drilled by Porcupine Goldfields and is now operated by Lindsley interests.

Young Diver Narrowly Escapes Death When Lines Tangle During Rescue Work

BOSTON, December 19 (Canadian Press). — The experience of a young diver, Michael, who is in the hospital here to-day after an accident while exploring the wreck of the submarine S-5 ,is told by his rescuer, Eady.

Michael went down from the Falcon about eight o'clock last night to connect an air line to the submarine. He made the 102-foot descent safely, but after getting on top of the sunken ship, his lines became tangled, supposedly in the wreckage. Eady followed him down, and on reaching the submarine found Michael there, unable to free himself.

Eady sent word to the surface for a hack saw, and it was lowered to him. Using this he cut the lines holding the other diver who, in the meantime, had become unconscious from the excessive air pressure which resulted from the tie-up in the air lines connecting his diving suit with the pumping apparatus.

As soon as Michael was released, the excess of air in his suit sent him floating towards the surface like a cork. When pulled aboard the Falcon he was unconscious, and it was feared he would die. He was placed in the decompression chamber, and kept there during the night. He regained consciousness, and when taken to the hospital to-day had improved so that his recovery was predicted by the physicians.

70 Bobbed Haired Girls Executed

HONG KONG, Dec. 19 (United Press).—Reports from Canton today said 700 executions had taken place there since the Nationalists gained control of the city last week from the Communists. Among those executed were 70 bobbed-haired girls, who had taken up advanced ideas of dress as well as government. They represent the "modern women" in China.

During the Red rule early last week, 1,500 business establishments were destroyed and 2,000 Chinese were killed.

SPECIAL MUSIC GIVEN AT TRINITY

First Programs of Christmas Season Are of Much Interest.

PARTS FROM MESSIAH.

The music at Trinity Church yesterday was exceptionally good, and was presented with fine effect by a choir of about forty voices. Excerpts from "The Messiah" were given during the evening, with soloists in Mrs. W. H. Hohner, Miss Alma Blanchard, and Mr. M. H. Park. The Processional in the evening, with the choir singing, "O Come, All Ye Faithful," was a unique portion of the service, and the Choral Symphony, played by Miss Clarry, was finely rendered. Other solo parts during morning and evening services were taken by Mrs. A. Barton, Miss Fern Stenton, and Mr. N. Staples, Miss Blanchard's rendition of "O Thou That Tellest" being especially attractive.

The program for the day was as follows:

Morning:

Anthem—"Christmas" (Shelley).
Solo—"The Holy Child" (Easthope Martin).
Carol—"Good King Wencelas."
Anthem—"The Birthday of a King" (Neidlinger).

Evening:

Processional—"O Come, All Ye Faithful."
Carol—"Floria in Excelsis Deo" (Old English), arr. by Knight.

And the following music from Handel's "Messiah":

Tenor—"Comfort ye, my people"
"Every Valley shall be exalted."
Chorus—"And the glory of the Lord."
Contralto—"Behold a virgin can conceive."
Aria and chorus—"O Thou that tellest good tidings."
Soprano—"Rejoice greatly, O Daughter of Zion."
Contralto—"Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened." "He shall feed His flock."
Soprano—"Come unto Him."
Chorus—"Hallelujah."

CHILDREN HOLD YULETIDE PARTY

TOYS FOR ORPHANS.

About two hundred children had a very jolly Christmas party in the big gymnasium of the Young Women's Christian Association on Saturday morning. They were members of the Junior gymnasium classes, the Babies' Classes and the Junior Dancing class. Members of the Saturday afternoon clubs were entertained also children from the Shelter. The children from St. Vincent's Orphanage, also invited to the party, were unable to attend, and a basket of toys was sent to them as a gift of their small friends. The gymnasium was decorated with spruce boughs and several representations of Santa Claus.

The big Christmas tree held toys for every child, distributed by Santa Claus himself, and presents were donated by members of the senior clubs. A special program of dances and recitations was given by the children and Miss Bertha Hill contributed two very much enjoyed children's songs from A. A. Milne's collection. Assistants to Santa were Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Mrs. R. M. Waddell and Mrs. H. Wightman.

PROTECTING THE CHILDREN.

Fire and police protection were arranged for in connection with the I.O.O.F. annual Christmas tree entertainment on Saturday when several hundred children were present, the desire of the committee being to avoid the least chance of danger from fire by which many young lives might be jeopardized.

Christmas decorations have been the cause of many fires, and naturally as such fires have taken place when numerous children were in attendance there has been a heavy toll of life.

Those in charge of Christmas entertainments for children are therefore asked to note that fire protection will be provided if Ald. R. S. Cotton, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, is notified.

Advantage should be taken of this opportunity to ensure the safety of young guests at entertainments of this kind; it is much safer to have a couple of firemen on duty equipped to deal with a small outbreak of fire than it is to take chances on a blaze starting that might endanger the lives of all present and at least would mean the calling out of the whole department.

The protection is available and should be used.

THE MAYOR'S POSITION.

The City Council is relieved of the duty of appointing a Mayor to act during the period between nomination day and the inauguration of next year's Council, and the race for the Utilities Commission is reduced to a two-man affair by the decision of Mayor Holloway to complete his term in the chief magistrate's chair rather than to resign in order to be a candidate for the Commission.

Had he decided to remain in the Utilities contest Mayor Holloway, in order to legally qualify, would have been forced to resign from his office as Mayor, and it would have been necessary for the Aldermen to select one of their number to take over the duties until January 9th when the 1928 Mayor, elected on New Year's Day, will assume office.

This aspect of the situation was unknown to Mayor Holloway when he announced his intention of being a candidate for the Commission, but when the difficulty was pointed out to him His Worship decided that as he had been returned by acclamation to serve this year as Mayor it was his duty to complete the task and not to desert the post until his successor had been named by the votes of the people.

This conception of duty on the part of Mayor Holloway will do him no harm should he on a future occasion appeal for the support of the electorate as a candidate for public office.

THOSE CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS.

The appearance of Peterborough's business streets with their rows of brightly coloured lights and trim Christmas trees has drawn many admiring remarks from visitors, and has been favourably commented upon by the majority of citizens.

There are those, however, who never overlook an opportunity to find fault, and they either complain that the money expended in these decorations might more usefully have been expended in providing Christmas cheer for the needy, or they lament the destruction of so many trees.

Neither of these criticisms will hold water.

So far as the expense involved in connection with the trees is concerned the small sum needed is being met by the Kiwanis Club, and will in no way interfere with that organization's usual Christmas relief activities.

The Kiwanians will carry out its programme of providing Christmas cheer on the same scale as ever.

The cost of the decorations was light as the work was done by Kiwanians and the Friday Night Club.

They were obtained from a woods that had to be thinned out in order to give the remaining trees a chance to grow; they would have been cut in any case, and they are serving a more useful purpose in giving a Christmas atmosphere to down-town Peterborough than if they had been cut down in the ordinary course of events.

AIMING AT THE WRONG TARGET.

A Toronto temperance organization has passed resolutions to the effect that D. B. Hanna, Chairman of the Liquor Control Board, does "too much talking," and that the Board is providing too many facilities for the sale of liquor by opening the Government stores for two nights a week during the two weeks before Christmas.

As to the "too much talking" charge those who passed the resolution did not stop to consider that Mr. Hanna is interviewed daily by the newspaper men who ask him all kinds of questions.

What the Chairman of the Liquor Control Board has to say is regarded as important news, and his statements are sought by, not pressed on, the newspapers.

There is no record of his having sought any publicity for his views; they appear in print because every day he is besieged by reporters who desire his opinions on various angles of the liquor problem.

And there is not much weight to the other charge.

The Province of Ontario is in the liquor business because the majority of voters ordered it to go into that business.

The Liquor Control Board was appointed to take charge of the sale of liquor, to give the people of Ontario a chance to buy what the majority of them said by their votes should be sold in this Province.

Why then complain that liquor is being sold?

That is a sheer waste of time and does nothing to promote the cause of temperance, which could be much more effectively helped if organizations such as this would devote their efforts to showing the folly of being intemperate and to educating the people to the uselessness and harmfulness of over-indulgence, rather than continue passing resolutions complaining about facilities for the sale of liquor that have been furnished at the request of the majority of the voters of Ontario.

BRITISH IMMIGRATION.

The space still being devoted in the newspapers and periodicals to the subject of immigration and the disparity between the number of arrivals from the British Isles and those from Continental Europe shows quite clearly that immigration is a live question and that exceptional interest is being taken in the effort which is being made to add to Canada's population from worthwhile sources.

Although the Minister of Immigration, the Hon. Robert Forke, has repeatedly stated that Canada is prepared to welcome and to assist as many immigrants from the British Isles as are ready to go upon the land or to engage in other occupations in which opportunity exists, and although he has recently amended the policy of the department in order that readier entry may be granted to such immigrants, through co-operation with the Provincial Governments and the various church settlement organizations, there is still a disposition to criticize him and the Government of which he is a member for its failure to secure a percentage of British immigrants equal to the percentage of newcomers from other non-British countries. For that failure a variety of reasons are assigned, and one of those most frequently advanced is an alleged lethargy and inactivity on the part of the agents which the Government has stationed in different English, Scottish and Irish centres, if not a deliberate desire to exclude persons of British stock from this country.

It is difficult to see what more the Government could do than it is now doing in this direction. Every effort has been made and is being made by Canadian representatives overseas, from the High Commissioner down, to induce more Britishers to emigrate to Canada. Apart altogether from the work being carried on by the immigration officers situated in all of the chief strategic centres of Great Britain and Ireland, the transportation companies are rendering marked service in recruiting settlers and the very low ocean fare of £2 to £3 granted individuals who are fitted for the land and willing to go upon it has proved of effect in promoting a larger flow of emigration to Canada. Provided the applicant possesses health, energy and limited resources, no obstacle is presented to his entry as a farmer or agricultural laborer; his path is made easy through low transportation rates, farms and implements which may be paid for upon very advantageous terms, co-operation from the Departments of Colonization and Agriculture. The man who comes to Canada as a settler is now upon "easy street" in comparison with his predecessors, the pioneers of the country. If he does not make good it is not the fault of the Government, for everything that it is possible for it to do is done for him.

Unfortunately, however, it is not now advisable to offer the same advantages to those who are equipped for other branches of industry and, equally unfortunately, the supply of immigrants trained for and adapted to agriculture is constantly upon the decline, due in part to the growing unpopularity of farming in the British Isles and in part to the drain being made upon their farming population by the various Dominions inviting settlement. If the bars should be let down to admit all those, whatever their occupation, who might be willing to remove to this country, the sole result would be congestion in the industrial centres, already taxed to accommodate and furnish employment to their present populations, and a serious unemployment situation.

Back of the whole situation, however, there lies the "dole" with its accompanying unwillingness on the part of a large section of British population to exchange a certainty for an uncertainty. As long as the British worker knows that, whenever he is unable to find work, he and the members of his family will be assured at least a livelihood under the "dole," just so long will there exist a great deal of difficulty in persuading persons belonging to this class that a removal to Canada will be to their advantage. The British worker knows that, should unemployment overtake him, he and those dependent upon him will be provided for, but, if he should encounter the same conditions after having reached Canada, there is no similar provision for his maintenance. He, therefore, prefers to remain in the Old Country, secure in the knowledge that he need never be in want, and such preference is exercised by those who have never had to draw the "dole" as well as by those actually in receipt of it.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press.)—The exoprt trade in Canadian grain here Saturday was extremely dull, there being no demand from any source.

A feature of the domestic grain trade was the stronger feeling that developed in oats and prices were marked up 1-2c per bushel.

The flour trade was without any new feature to note, prices for spring and winter wheat grades being well maintained under a fair inquiry.

The demand from the United States for all lines of mill feed continued good and a large volume of business was transacted. The feeling was firm. The undertone to the market for standard grades of rolled oats was firm with a good trade passing.

A fairly active business was done in all grades of eggs and prices ruled steady. The receipts Saturday were 182 cases.

The trade in butter was quiet, but values were unchanged. The receipts were 304 packages.

The cheese market was dull and featureless. The receipts were 327.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 19 (Canadian Press). — With the Washington final crop report on corn due late on Monday, the corn market on Saturday displayed much nervousness and finally underwent a sharp setback. Talk was current that contrary to recent somewhat general expectation the November official forecast of 1927 corn production in the United States as a whole would be reduced but slightly, if at all.

Closing quotations on corn were weak, ⅝c to ¾c to 1¼c net lower. Wheat finished firm at ¼c to ½c to 1c advance. Oats a shade to ¼c off, and provisions unchanged to 80 cents down.

Assertions that the forthcoming Government crop figures would be virtually unchanged as compared with a month ago, were based on a statement credited to official sources that the expected yield in Iowa is 5,000,000 bushels over the November estimate. Thus the Iowa production this season would be about 400,000,000 bushels. According to a prominent unofficial expert there, this would suggest that hardly any change would be made at Washington in the November estimate of a total yield of 2,753,000,000 bushels of corn this season throughout the entire United States.

Inasmuch as in some quarters a reduction of at least 50,000,000 bushels was expected to be shown by the December official corn crop report from Washington as compared with November, bearish sentiment relative to corn prices developed rapidly on Saturday toward the last. Earlier, the corn market had an upward trend, much of the time owing to scantiness of rural offerings and as a result of firmness of export corn bids at thte Gulf of Mexico with sellers asking 1c per bushel over the price of Chicago May delivery.

Wheat prices here averaged lower early. The Argentine Government crop report indicated a yield larger than was looked for. Unofficial advices, however, said the Argentine Government figures were too optimistic. Accordingly, firmness of Buenos Aires and Liverpool wheat quotations were reflected here as the day drew to an end.

GUILD HOLDS SALE OF WORK

Christ Church Ladies Offer Splendid Variety of Goods.

CHURCH SOCIETIES MEET.

OMEMEE, Dec. 17.—The Annual Bazaar held in the Sunday School room of Christ Church, on Thursday afternoon, under the auspices of the Women's Guild was a decided success. The day was anything but favorable for an affair of this sort and only prospective buyers braved the furious wind, to be present.

At the appointed hour of 3 o'clock, Rev. A. T. Weir offered a short prayer, after which he declared the bazaar open.

Christmas decorations of red and green tissue paper, and numerous sprigs of cedar adorned the basement and added colour to the booths.

On entering the Sunday school room, a cordial welcome was extended to each visitor by Mesdames Clarke, Hill and Weir, who composed the reception committee.

Situated near the entrance was the bran pie. This was the centre of attraction for the children and numerous nickels and dimes were received from the older folk, too, who drew from large dishes of bran such articles as hand lotion, vases, dolls and other novelties to the value of five and ten cents. Miss Marion Dickson was in charge, assisted by Misses Lenore Jamieson and Ethel Stephenson.

In a large booth white embroidery and colored embroidery were separated. Mrs. F. Bent and Misses A. Stephenson and Lila Fee were in charge of the white articles, and pillow-covers, daintily embroidered, towels, tray-cloths, plate doylies, serviettes, crocheting, etc., were much admired. Mrs. Vincent Jones and Mrs. F. Jamieson were the sales-ladies for the colored articles and pretty cushions, dressed dolls, knitted goods, linen towels and numerous other articles were displayed to good advantage.

Across the room was situated the apron booth, where Mrs. George Newman and Miss E. Robinson were the obliging sales-ladies and various styles and patterns were demonstrated.

Adjoining this booth was the home cooking and candy, where Mrs. George McQuade and Misses Essie Woods, and Mamie Lang did a flourishing business in delicious cakes and pies, tempting doughnuts and tea-biscuits, fresh eggs, vegetables, etc., and a choice array of home made candy.

The tea tables looked very attractive with their lighted candles and baby 'mums and drew a generous crowd for supper.

The ladies in charge of the kitchen and tea room were: Mrs. F. Clemett, Mrs. J. Bannon, Mrs. G. Fee, Mrs. M. Sherin, Mrs. R. J. Cornwall, Mrs. G. D. Gowans, Mrs. R. James and Mrs. D. Deyell, assisted by Misses Helen Johnston, Audrey Weir, May and Gertrude Fee, Ada Atwell, Hazel Thorn, Maggie McQuade and Phyllis Morton, all of whom spared no effort in catering to their guests. Miss C. Cornwall received the tickets. The president, Miss Irene Clemett, was general overseer, and gave a helping hand where needed.

The proceeds of the afternoon amounted to about $260.

A.Y.P.A. Meets.

The A.Y.P.A. meeting held on Monday evening was well attended. The evening was given to Literary topics and a few thoughts were put forward by the convenor, Mrs. F. Bent, concerning literature. Other numbers followed, making an interesting evening. A contest was staged in which six questions were asked and the group having the most correct answers was awarded one point in the auto contest.

Ladies Elect Officers.

The December meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity United Church, was held in the Sunday school room on Thursday afternoon, with a small attendance present. The president, Mrs. W. Henderson, occupied the chair, and after the devotional exercises were completed, a business session followed. The officers present expressed a desire to be relieved of office, but their resignations were not accepted and they were re-elected by acclamation as follows: President, Mrs. W. Henderson; First vice-President, Mrs. F. G. Sandy; Second vice-President, Mrs. D. Weir; Third vice-President, Mrs. J. Bushnell; Secretary, Mrs. L. A. Mahood; treasurer, Mrs. R. H. Williamson; flower committee—Mrs. Henderson, Miss L. Parsons; parsonage committee, Mrs. C. L. Morcombe, Mrs. E. Bradburn; pianist, Miss N. Rutherford.

The secretary was authorized to order three dozen communion glasses and also have the silver communion tray returned from the Le Page Individua Communion Cup Company, Toronto! where it was placed for sale when the wooden trays were purchased.

It was the decision of the ladies to remember the aged and shut-ins this Christmas with suitable cards.

By a unanimous decision the sum of $100 was voted to the Trustee Board of the church, the same to be given at the Sunday evening service.

Final arrangements were made for the annual Christmas tree and entertainment put on by the Society for the Sunday school, the date of which is Thursday evening, Dec. 22nd. The offer of a gift for the stockings from a friend of the Sunday school was accepted with thanks.

Band Entertains Ladies.

On Monday evening at the regular hour for the "Wide Awake" Mission Band, the members of the Women's Missionary Society and the mothers of the Band members accepted the invitation of the president to be present at their meeting, the program being out of the ordinary. Some time ago, a membership contest was put on. The band was divided into two groups, the blues and the reds and as the latter lost out, it was their privilege to entertain the winners. The program was arranged and given without the supervision of an adult and was a credit to the children. Miss Mildred Williamson acted as chairman and after the following program, lunch and candy were served by the older girls, the President, Mrs. Rowland and her assistants, Mrs. R. H. Williamson and Mrs. C. L. Morcombe:

Chorus—"O, Canada.
Prayer—Rev. F. W. Rowland.

Piano Duet—Doris and Howard Vaughan.

Piano Duet—Jean McGinness, Frances MacPherson.
Vocal Duet—Doris and Dick Vaughan.

Contest.

On behalf of the W.M.S., Mrs. R. Bradburn moved a hearty vote of thanks to those who had in any way helped to provide such a splendid entertainment. Mrs. Lamb seconded the motion, which was briefly replied to by Mrs. Rowland.

Anniversary services were observed in Trinity United Church on Sunday morning and evening. Two splendid sermons were delivered by the pastor, Rev. F. W. Rowland and special music was furnished by the choir. The thankoffering, toward the running expenses of the church was not as large as anticipated, but contributions have since been sent in and the Trustee Board is hopeful that the required amount may be reached.

An Attractive Dress for the Junior Miss

Exceedingly smart is this chic dress, suitable for all daytime wear. There is an inverted plait in each side seam to provide for the necessary skirt fulness, and the front is joined to side sections in an attractive manner, while the back is in one piece. Contrasting material may be effectively used for the becoming round collar, belt, and cuffs finishing the long tight-fitting sleeves. No. 1510 is in sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 12 years requires 2⅝ yards 36-inch material, or 2¼ yards 54-inch, and ⅝ yard contrasting. Price 25 cents the pattern.

The secret of distinctive dress lies in good taste rather than a lavish expenditure of money. Every woman should want to make her own clothes, and the home dressmaker will find the designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book to be practical and simple, yet maintaining the spirit of the mode of the moment. Price of the book, 10 cents the copy.

By ANNE AUSTIN

Probably if Faith had given herself time to think she would not have sprung so impulsively to Cherry's defense, reaching for Nils Jonson's hand and dragging him along with her, willy-nilly. Certainly, she told herself later, she had had enough experience with Cherry by this time to know that any "trouble" of this sort into which Cherry managed to implicate herself was cleverly stage-managed.

But she did rush from the sun-parlor, through the door which Cherry had purposely left open and into the living-room, her grasp still tight upon Nils' hand. Cherry was standing a few feet from Bruce Patton, whose left cheek bore a dark red imprint of Cherry's hand. The girl's body was tense, both small hands knotted into furious but unformidable-looking fists, golden eyes blazing in a dramatically pale face. Bruce Patton looked foolishly surprised and indignant as he retreated slowly from the small fury who had attacked him. Incongruously the dance music from the radio still poured invitingly into the room.

"What's the matter, Cherry?" Faith demanded sharply.

"I—I was dancing with Bruce, and he tried to kiss me," Cherry panted. "I told him to stop and he wouldn't. He—he kissed me anyway, and I—slapped him. And I'm glad I did!" Her voice rose, shrill and vindictive. Her blazing eyes swept from Bruce Patton to Nils Jonson, challengingly, and Faith felt quite ill with disgust.

It was very clear to Faith now. Cherry, unable to endure the thought of Nils devoting his attention to her sister, and, insatiably craving excitement, which was more necessary to her than food or drink, had provoked Bruce into attempting to kiss her, by flirting with him in her most irresistible manner.

"Nils!" Faith cried sharply. She would have to stop this silly affair before it went any further. But in what words could she tell Nils that Cherry had stage-managed the whole thing?

Nils' big body, looking suddenly queer in conventional dinner-clothes, moved slowly and steadily across the room. She could not see his face, but her agonized eyes caught the expression of abject, cringing fear in Bruce Patton's widening black eyes, saw the blood drain out of his good-looking swarthy face, leaving the print of Cherry's hand shamefully clear. Then her eyes flew to Cherry's face, saw the blazing triumph and excitement there, the intense enjoyment of a situation which she had created to satisfy her ego and her love of drama.

And Nils was moving on and on toward Bruce Patton, who was backing before that menacing approach—— Scarcely a minute had gone by since Faith and Nils had come running into the room—

"Don't you dare strike me!" Patton croaked hoarsely, the words jerking at his white lips. "How was I to know she didn't want me to kiss her? I've kissed her a dozen times before, and she didn't mind—— Don't you dare hit me!"

YOUNG PEOPLE STUDY POETRY

Learn of Life and Works of Robert W. Service.

The Poetical Meeting of the Springville-Fairmount Literary Society was held in the basement of Springville church on Friday evening, Dec. 9th. The attendance was exceptionally good despite the cold windy night, there being over thirty young people present. Before the close of the evening, several of these added their names to the Roll of Membership.

The members of the choir took advantage of the heated room and gathered at 7.30 p.m. for practise. This they anticipate will be a weekly event. Other interested ones who arrived during choir practise found ample means of amusement in the many games that are always in readiness at an early hour.

At eight the meeting was opened with the President, Miss C. McConnachie in the chair. As Rev. Mr. McConnachie is to have charge of the second meeting each month (the Poetical evening) he was called upon for a few opening remarks. He expressed his pleasure at the good attendance and spoke of the many advantages to be found in attending such meetings. He explained that besides the educational value received from a literary society there is also the good derived from the discipline and training involved. Emphasis was placed on the necessity of putting one's best efforts forward when taking part in a meeting in order that the educational value may be increased.

In the unavoidable absence of Miss Daisy Murray, the chairman called upon Miss H. Staples to tell of Miss Murray's plans for the next meeting, Friday, December 16th. Miss Staples had not been definitely informed as to the items on the program, but forwarded Miss Murray's assurance that she was making plans for a good musical evening. These musical evenings are mainly to take the form of Glee Club work and community singing, aided by the capable instructions and leadership of Miss Murray.

The Secretary and Treasurer were called upon for their reports and the business of the meeting proceeded to a discussion of the necessity of postponing the debate meeting of Friday, December 23, owing to that night being the night of the Fairmount Christmas Concert. A motion was moved by Mrs. S. Staples and seconded by Mr. George Whitfield to the effect that the debate be postponed until Friday, December 30th. This motion was unanimously carried.

The chairman announced the subject for the evening as being "A study of the life and poems of Robert Service (the Canadian Kipling.)

The first number on the program was a reading of "The Cremation of Sam McGee," an example of Robert Service's humor, by Miss Helen Staples.

Mr. McConnachie's address on the poet's life was next on the program. This he introduced by telling of the advantages of the formation of the reading habit especially to the youth of the country, who in the winter months, are more isolated than their city friends. By many readers the taste for poetry must be acquired. There are no major Canadian poets, as Canada is too young a country, but she has many notable minor poets that should be known to all. Several examples were given and Robert Service, who was the study for the evening was classified as being above the average. This is denoted by the title that is given him—the Canadian Kipling. In his poems he tells the truth, bluntly reminding one of Bret Harte of the United States and "Woodbine Willie"—Kennedy. He tells of the life in Dawson City and in the Yukon. He is still living and adding to his works.

He was born in 1876, in Preston, England, and was educated in Glasgow. There he became a bank clerk.

In 1897, at the age of 21 years, he came to Canada and started here as a farmer on Vancouver Island.

While located there he travelled the Pacific Coast and made several expeditions to the Yukon.

In 1905 he entered the Canadian Bank of Commerce and was sent by the bank to Dawson City. In a short time he resigned his work to write, as Mark Twain and many others have done.

During the war he enlisted and went to the front. He lost one brother in the war and has dedicated to him one of his books. His war poems are among his best.

This interesting address was followed by several poems written by Robert Service—"The Law of The Yukon" (1st verse), "The Song of The Wage Slave," "Grin," "Going Home," and "Fluerette."

The chairman brought the meeting to a close by asking for criticisms, contributions or questions about the meeting.

After the close of the meeting those present spent a social hour together before leaving for their respective homes.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

The black pajama set is chosen by the woman who travels. The one shown is of knit rayon. The coat trimmed with colored bands is worn over a sleeveless jacket.

Your comfort in traveling very much depends on the convenience of your travel kit. And though you may not be able to afford one of the up-to-date dressing cases in which all the necessaries for an overnight trip are conveniently assembled for you—you can at least provide yourself with a small bag or case of some sort in which you may carry in compact form just the things you need for the trip. Then when you have your berth in the sleeper made up you may have your larger bags conveniently tucked under the seat, knowing that all you will need is there in the small case that you take into the berth with you or carry to the dressing-room in preparing for the night or in dressing in the morning.

The dark-colored pajama suit has come to be the chosen sleeping garment of experienced travelers. It is best made of some sort of opaque black silk, with some bit of color by way of decoration.

Time comes for you to start on your trip, and having packed your various frocks, hats, shoes, etc., to be opened at your destination, you simply see that the various containers in your traveling case are filled, that you have fresh handkerchiefs, a fresh set of lingerie and stockings and your traveling pajamas and—your preparations are made. No frantic struggle to tuck this box of powder in that bag, brush, comb, manicure things in another and your sleeping garments somewhere else. Everything is neatly assembled in a small case. All liquids are carried in containers made with closely fitted toppers or tops.

It is convenient to have a fairly long jacket or dressing-gown to go with your sleeping pajamas so that if you do not have a compartment to yourself, you may go to the dressing-room in trim and inconspicuous manner, your little dressing case in one hand and your frock that has been hanging on its hanger by your berth all night over your arm.

BISHOP BARNES IN NEW QUARREL

TO CONTINUE FIGHT

LONDON, Dec. 19.—(United Press)—A lively battle between the modernist Bishop of Birmingham, Dr. Barnes, whose recent utterances supporting Darwin's theory of evolution and the scientific conception of creation caused a heated controversy and Rev. C. Fisher, Vicar of St. John's church in Harborne, Birmingham, may prevent the latter from leaving for Toronto as intended, early in January.

Rev. Mr. Fisher informed British United Press that he was going to join Dr. Shields at Jarvis Street Baptist Church in Toronto before going to the Fundamentalist University at Des Moines, Iowa.

"My dispute with the Bishop", said Mr. Fisher, "is due to his refusal to appoint any man as my successor at Harborne who declines, as I have always done, to contribute to diocesan funds. Definite evangelical churchmen are in a minority in the Birmingham diocese and they cannot have any confidence in putting money into a central fund, twenty four-twenty fifths of which are administered for a purpose with which they are not in sympathy.

"Dr. Barnes has not the right to decline to institute my successor and he is going beyond his powers in insisting that the parishes contribute to the diocesean funds. If the Bishop changes his attitude I shall sail for Canada on January 6. I am determined, however, not to leave my congregation in the lurch and I won't resign my benefice until I am assured that my successor will not contribute to the funds."

This fresh controversy has come at a moment when the whole church of England is wondering what the effect of the rejection of the revised prayer book will be. All the bishops, with the exception of Bishop Barnes, regret that the bill authorizing the new book went down to defeat in the Commons, some even arguing that it must mean the eventual disestablishment of the church.

Bishop Barnes, however, declares, "Representatives of the English people have saved the doctrines of the English Church. I am profoundly thankful."

HUGHES' CHARGE MUCH CRITICIZED

Former Premier of Australia Said British Evaded Tariff Laws.

LONDON, Dec. 10 (B.U.P.).—Rt. Hon. William Hughes, former Prime Minister of Australia, has incurred severe criticism at the hand of Britain's industrial leaders. He was reported as saying that British manufacturers were evading the spirit of the Australian tariff law by sending cheap foreign material to Australia.

The Federation of British industries describes this as "a grave accusation against their good faith without any evidence to support it.

Responsible British industrialists would be the first to denounce any such practice, the Federation says, although Australian tariff regulations are "onerous."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1927.

One of the rarely lucky days has come, according to astrology which finds that benefic aspects predominate strongly while the configuration prevails.

Women are especially fortunate under this sway, it is foretold, and they should make the most of every opportunity that comes to them.

The rule is fairly helpful to women who have political ambitions, but it is prophesied that with one or two brilliant exceptions the new year will be disappointing to them.

This is read as a rarely lucky wedding day, the stars presaging prosperity and progress.

Lovers are well directed under this planetary government, but they may easily quarrel.

Romance is to flourish in the new year in which there will be a revival of old-time reverence for women, it is foretold.

Theatres should profit from this rule which promises successful new plays and rising stars from the ranks of the younger actors and acrtesses.

The late hours of this day are supposed to be especially auspicious for the signing of contracts.

Advertising is subject to the most stimulating rule, which indicates tremendous expansion that will benefit many periodicals.

The seers prophesy that 1928 will be a banner year for writers. New American authors should gain international fame.

Epidemics of influenza may afflict many parts of the world and should be watched with a view of safeguarding the people.

A dictator is to rise in an unexpected quarter to rule a European country, it is prognosticated.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a great romance in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will achieve supreme success. Subjects of this sign are changeable and emotional.

British Expect White Christmas

LONDON, December 19 (Canadian Press). — The British Isles to-day were in the grip of one of the frostiest spells that they have experienced in decades, and with more snow in the offing, prospects for an old-fashioned Christmas of the Dickens order were declared quite favorable.

DIVERS ATTEMPTING

Answer To Signals.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec .19.—(A.P.)—Some of the 40 men trapped in the submarine S-4 were still alive yesterday afternoon. This was established by replies received from the vessel to signals sent by the submarine S-8 and by sounds heard within the S-4 by a navy diver.

The submarine still rested on the bottom in 102 feet of water, 18,800 yards off the Wood End coast guard station on the outer side of the tip of Cape Cod. It was there that she sank after colliding with the coast guard destroyer Paulding Saturday afternoon.

The S-8 sent word of its success in getting signals from the sunken vessel in a message from Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, in charge of the submarine control fleet, who was aboard the mine-layer Falson, nearby. The message added that it was trying to talk with those inside the S-4.

Before the S-8 sent the message which electrified the officers and men aboard the rescue fleet, navy and coast guard vessels had been vying with each other all the forenoon to do something to help the men imprisoned in the submarine. Early in the morning a small coast guard boat had dropped a line and grapnel and this had taken hold of what appeared to be a sunken boat.

In the rather rough sea it was impossible to confirm this for several hours. When it was definitely established that the S-4 had been located, the first thought was to try to find out whether anyone aboard her was alive. The submarine S-8, equipped with submarine signals, was the boat best fitted for this task.

Begin Rescue Work.

Her early efforts ,made with the submarine bell, were successful. Then it was determined to get divers to work as soon as possible. This was a slow progress, as the ships had to be manoeuvred into just the right positions and elaborate preparations made.

The mine layers Falcon, Lark and Hallard were finally tied together over the spot where the S-4 went down.

The Lark, with Rear Admiral Brumby aboard was in the centre. She had fifteen expert navy divers aboard and was fully equipped for diving operations.

When the word came from the S-8 that the S-4 had answered signals, the work of getting divers down was hastened. They were put on a platform and lowered into the water while air was pumped down to them from the Falcon. The Lark and the Mallard served the purpose of holding the Falcon steady for the operations.

Thomas Eadie and W. J. Carr were the first navy divers sent down. What should be done next depended upon the report of their inspection of the S-4. Should they find several compartments free of water, air could be pumped in through lines in undamaged compartments. This done, the submarine might rise to the surface.

On the other hand, if the submarine should appear to be filled with water and if no further signs of life should be heard ,it might be necessary to resort to pontoons and cables. Pontoons were on the way here in tow of two navy tugs. But with seas and wintry wether ahead, it was considered doubtful whether much progress could be made by this method before spring.

How Collision Occurred.

Just how the collision occurred was more fully described yesterday by Coast Guard officers .In was 3.37 p.m. Saturday when the periscope of the S-4 suddenly appeared in front of the destroyer as the Paulding was rounding a buoy to enter Provincetown harbor.

"The visibility was good and the weather was good," said a statement issued by the officers of the coast gaurd cutter Tampa through Captain Molley, senior coast guard officer. "The first intimation of the presence of a submarine was when her periscope emerged from the water directly in front, too close to avoid. Then the helm of the Paulding was shifted and full speed given. The Paulding struck the submarine forward of the conning tower, ripping a long hole in the underwater body of the submarine, which rolled over and sank within a few minutes. No one on board the Paulding saw anyone on the submarine at any time before or ofter the collision

"The Paulding lowered a lifeboat, which searched for any survivors from the submarine, but found none. The Paulding then dropped a buoy to mark the spot where the submarine sank. The Paulding was then filling with water, but managed to see into Provincetown Harbor."

The Paulding was beached in the harbor and yesterday the destroyer Tucker was pumping oil from her. Only one man aboard the Paulding was injured. He was Joseph MacMillan, the ship's cook, who was scalded when a steam pipe burst He was sent to the marine hospital at Chelsea.

After the Paulding flashed out word of the collision, the navy department at Washington and every navy yard and coast guard base long the Atlantic coast sprang into activity. Destroyers, mine layers, tugs and other vessels were ordered to proceed with all speed to the scene. By morning a good-sized fleet was assembled near Provincetown.

Village Excited.

Provincetown village was greatly excited over the disaster — in the churches yesterday morning ,all the pastors referred to it in their sermons, and prayers were offered for the safety of the men trapped in the submarine.

All day long the water front was crowded. A steady stream of automobiles poured over the winding roads of the cape, bringing newspapermen, photographers, motion picture camera men and hundreds of curious. Eyes were strained to watch the work of the rescue fleet, which could be seen from the vicinity of the Wood End coast guard station. Those who came ashore in small boats from the fleet occasionally were overwhelmed with questions.

In every mind was the recollection of the disaster to the submarine S-51 off Black Island in September, 1925. The boat, of the same class as the S-4 but somewhat larger, was sunk after collision with the steamer City of Rome. For days hope persisted that some of the men trapped in the submarine might be alive, but the only ones rescued were some of the crew who managed to get out through the conning tour. Thirty-three lives were lost.

Every section of the country was represented on the crew list of the S-4. There was even one native of the Philippines aboard. Their relatives were scattered all over the United States and some of them live in Canada.

The rescue workers yesterday were favored with one of the finest days of the season. The air was frosty but the sun shone from a clear sky all day. Saturday night's high wind had subsided considerably but the sea remained rather rough.

DISTRICT CHURCHES

TRENT RIVER UNITED CHURCH

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 17.—There was a large congregation present at the afternoon service Sunday, December 11th. The Rev. W. R. Archer's address was an illustrative one with Christ in the fellowship of service. The text was taken from Rom. I, 14 to 16 verses—"I am debtor, both to the Greeks and Barbarians;—both to the wise and to the unwise. So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also. For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ." The subject was given in three divisions, viz., "I am a debtor," "I am ready," and "I am not ashamed." The minister explained the obligation of a debtor—natural obligation. No man can live to himself. If he realizes his debt to others he is known in the community. Jesus bent low and washed the disciples' feet, giving the example of humiliation. Strength imposes obligation. A great man has power to be of service to others. Jesus had the healing power. It was lawful to do good on the Sabbath day. He continued, "Be sure your sin would find you out."

Many people were content to believe right and not do right. Fellowship with Christ was in serving Him. Paul was ready and willing to die for the cause of Christ. Mr. Archer referred to the missionaries who couldn't resist the call of the Master. Secondly, "I am ready—was, in Paul's time, a racing term as the foot race and relay race were common then, when they gave a laurel crown for reward. Paul was ready to haste at Christ's bidding. The minister related an incident of the City of Freeburg, where there was a great pipe organ in the Cathedral. One day, while the organist was playing, a man came into the cathedral with failing eyesight and struggled up to the organ and asked permission to play. The organist looked him over and very reluctantly gave his consent. When the stranger began to play, such melodies filled the cathedral seemed celestial, almost divine. The organist asked him who he was, and the stranger said he was Mendelssohn.

Jesus wants to play on the instrument of men's lives; wants to bring out chords and they have refused to let Him.

Thirdly, "I am not ashamed"—Paul was not ashamed of fellowship with Christ in service. All have a relationship.

The stewards were asked to distribute books, entitled "With Christ In the fellowship of Service," printed by the Maintenance and Extension Fund of the United Church of Canada, and the minister hoped that this little book would give a little glimpse of fellowship with Christ. In conclusion he repeated the following verses, "Thy Kingdom Come."

Lord, when we pray "Thy Kingdom come?"
Then fold our hands without a care
For souls whom Thou hast died to save,
We do but mock Thee with our prayer.

Thou couldst have sent an Angel band,
To call Thine erring children home;
And thus through heavenly ministries,
On earth Thy kingdom might have come.

But since to human hands like ours,
Thou hast committed work divine,
Shall not our eager hearts make haste,
To join their feeble powers with Thine.

To work and work shall not our hands,
Obedient Move, nor lips be dumb,
Lest through our sinful love of ease
Thy kingdom should delay to come?

SPRINGVILLE UNITED CHURCH

The pastor, Rev. A. H. McConnachie was in charge of the morning service. The short talk to the children on "The Lord's Prayer" was continued. Mr. McConnachie began by briefly reviewing the lessons of the two previous Sundays on "Our Father" and "Which art in heaven," linking these with the subject for the day—"Hallowed be Thy name."

He clearly and forcibly explained to the children that "hallowed" is a word that is correctly used only when in connection with sacred things, such as the church, communion table, etc., and in this sentence it is God's name that is expressed as Hallowed.

God's name is not like men's names, which are merely titles, but expresses His nature and character. His name is already sacred in heaven, threefore people should keep it holy in mind, thoughts and words. All words which refer to the Divine should be held in reverence. Examples were given of sacred words commonly used as mere exclamations without thought of doing wrong; using these words however is forgetting the third Commandment, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain."

In conclusion the pastor emphasized the fact that there should be no difficulty in keeping God's name sacred or "Hallowed" if the Holy Spirit is allowed to dwell in the heart.

The text for the regular morning's sermon was taken from James; the 4th chapter and the 14th verse—"Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away."

Mr. McConnachie began by asking again the words of the text, "What is your life?" Examples of other plain and pointed questions that may be found in the Bible were given, such as "What shall a man give for his soul." These questions are well worthy of consideration and are very profitable if faced humbly.

"It is not always wise to think we understand everything. Ignorance is often excusable when great Bible questions are being dealt with."

What is life?

"There is in the world a tendency to study life, yet many people do not fear life but they do fear death. Dying is not nearly as serious a matter as living for God will take care of death. The promise of life is not, in ourselves but in God. Our lives are not our own, but are bought with a price."

Dr. Mayo of Rochester was accosted one day by one of his numerous patients who had been aided on the road of recovery by the great physician. "Doctor," he said, "you saved my life." The doctor, who is a very busy man, passed on with the reply, "See that you use it well."

It is of the utmost importance that we heed this reply and try to use our lives well. To do this to the best advantage we must know the meaning of life.

Mr. McConnachie now defined life by means of a number of negative assertions.

Life is not work. Work has a large place in the scheme of life, and is a necessity, but work alone is not life.

It is not ambition, although ambition is closely related to the meaning of life.

It is not success or failure for success, in the eyes of man, usually consists of ability to accumulate earthly goods, while failure often means that although a man is poor in money, he is rich in faith. It is better to fail in a great way than to gain in a poor way.

Life is not found on the recreation ground. Time should be found in every well-ordered life for recreation but one's life should consist of more than this.

It is not reading and cannot be found in books or by education.

It is not joy or sorrow. We have a tendency to magnify our clouds of joy or sorrow until the face of God is hidden from our view.

Life is not formal religion, but formal religion has its place in the scheme of life.

All of these previously mentioned units enter into life, but life is greater than the sum total of all put together. Life is one great unity and may be likened unto a golden casket that contains all the essentials of life or as a costly bracelet that binds the units together.

God is the centre of life and is working out toward its circumference. The Christian religion unifies life as Jesus came to save, not one department of it, but all of it.

Love is the core of religion and a loveless religion is a denial of Christ, who died that we might be elevated and purified.

Reference was then made to the attraction of the thrilling adventures of the war, that drew the boys to enlist and proceeded to emphasize that the most thrilling adventure possible at all times is the great game of Life.

Jesus said, "I came that ye might have life," and again, "I am the way, the truth and the light," thus showing us the way to enter into life.

What is your life?

Our Life is life in Christ.

In concluding, Mr. McConnachie urged that the remaining day of the old year be used by all to build up Christ-like lives.

SPRINGVILLE W.M.S. SOCIETIES MERGED

Mrs. Melville Johnston Elected President For Ensuing Year.

SPRINGVILLE, December 17. — The W.M.S. (Junior and Senior) of Springville United Church met on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. S. Staples, Cavan, for their final meeting of the year, and the annual election of officers. The meeting was well attended, there being about twenty-five persons present.

Mrs. Johnson, the president, took charge of the meeting, which was opened by singing 'More love to Thee, O Christ," followed by prayer led by the president. The second hymn was "Jesus calls us o'er the tumult." The Scripture lesson from Luke 2, 7-20 was read by Rev. A. H. McConnachie. This was followed by the roll-call, each member answering the call by a verse of Scripture.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. A. Hunter, and were accepted as correct. The following officers were called upon for a detailed account of their year's work: Treasurer, Expense Fund Treasurer, Missionary Monthly Secretary, Strangers' Secretary, Supply Secretary, Home Helper Treasurer, Secretary of Literature, and Secretary of Finance.

Mrs. Hunter read to the societies a letter from Mrs. H. Morrison, corresponding secretary of the Lindsay Presbyterial, in which advice was given as to the advantage of all societies forming a prayer circle, circulating library, etc.

Mrs. M. Johnston followed this by reading a letter from the first vice-president of the Lindsay Presbyterial and took advantage of this opportunity to thank all those who put confidence in her and helped her in her work as president for the past year. She spoke of the necessity for self-denial and sacrifice in order to be present at all meetings to make each one a success. Mrs. Johnston also expressed her opinion that more might have been done by the society if prayer had played a more important part in its life. She asked to be relieved of her office in the coming year, so that others might learn as she had learned through experience the real aim and work of a Missionary Society. "As we learn, so we grow," said the president.

Rev. Mr. McConnachie was then called upon to take charge of the meeting and conduct the election of officers. He spoke briefly of his great interest in the welfare of the society and of his desire that each meeting should be spiritually profitable. He kindly offered the suggestion that when a book is being studied, greater interest will be created if one person studies the lesson at home and then imparts only the best, most interesting and most important facts at the meeting. Formalisms should be put aside and a homely, divine touch should be brought into the monthly gatherings. Money matters should not be stressed too heavily during the meetings so that the poorest and the humblest may feel welcome and at home. Money matters may be arranged successfully by private intercourse with the individuals. If the heart is right, giving will take care of itself.

The following were elected to office for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Melville Johnston.
Vice-President—Mrs. J. Grandy.
Secretary—Mrs. A. Hunter.
Treasurer—Mrs. R. Robertson.
Expense Fund Treasurer — Mrs. Owen Murray.
Secretary of Missionary Monthly—Mrs. H. Clark.
Supply Secretary—Mrs. D. Wood.
Strangers' Secretary—Mrs. William Whitfield.
Home Helpers' Treasurer—Mrs. E. Kelk.

The society expressed its high esteem and appreciation of Mrs. M. Johnston's work as president, and unanimously re-elected her to office.

Mrs. Johnston again in the chair, the advisability of the union of the Junior and Senior Societies was discussed, and it was decided that owing to the small membership of the Junior Society, more efficient work might be carried on by the union of the two societies. With this view in mind a committee of six was chosen from the junior society to act as group leaders and take charge in turn of the programs for the meetings in the coming year. The committee is to consist of Misses Helen Whittington, Daisy Murray, Mary Southam, Annie Brown, Miss H. Bothwell, and Mrs. George Whitfield.

Three delegates were then chosen to attend the Presbyterial in St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough, which meets next month. Mrs. M. Johnston, Miss A. Brown, and Miss Helen Whittington were those decided upon to attend the meetings and bring home reports to be read to the society.

A vote of thanks was moved and seconded to the ladies who entertained and provided the lunch for the Smith Dramatic Club on the night of their play at Springville.

A vote of thanks was also extended to Mrs. A. H. McConnachie for her work of making curtains for the same evening's performance.

Mr. McConnachie took this opportunity to announce the Springville Christmas concert on Wednesday evening, December 21st.

Miss Daisy Murray consented to favor the meeting with a solo, "Holy Night," which was greatly appeciated and heartily enjoyed by all.

A vote of thanks was then moved to Miss Murray for her assistance in the afternoon's programme.

The meeting was brought to a close by a vote of thanks to Mrs. Staples for her kind hospitality in opening her home for the gathering. This was followed by prayer led by Rev. A. H. McConnachie.

Mrs. Staples then served a most appetizing lunch, which called for another hearty vote of thanks. This given, the ladies departed for their homes carrying with them a "warm feeling" toward their host and hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray and Miss Daisy Murray motored to Lindsay last Wednesday.

Mrs. Murray, Sr., is visiting friends in Peterborough in order to be near her brother, Mr. B. Stacey, who is seriously ill in Nicholls Hospital.

Little Girls Have Life of Excitement; First to Be Saved From Both School Fires

QUEBEC, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press).—Life has been tragic and exciting during the past three days for Laure Marceau, seven, and Jeanne d'Arc Lefebvre, six, wards of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

On Wednesday night they were among the first children saved from the Hospice St. Charles where at least thirty-six of their young companions lost their lives in tragic fire. Last night they were again roused from slumber when fire destroyed the St. Jean Berchman School. The little girls, with a score of survivors of the hospice disaster, were being cared for just opposite the Berchman School. They were the first to be carried to safety when flames swept through the school across the way.

Little Jeanne boasted proudly: "We were the first to be saved from the Hospice St. Charles and the first to be saved tonight."

Her companion was more serious. "You know," she said, "There were forty girls burned to death at the Hospice St. Charles."

MILLBROOK UNITED W.M.S. ELECTION

Reports To Annual Meeting Show Allocation Almost Reached.

MILLBROOK, December 17. — The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. E. Burnham with 40 or more members in attendance.

Mrs. T. H. Aiken convenor of the group for the day, was in the cha'r, and the formal program was proceeded with before the election of officers. The hymns were of a Christmas character as was also the Scripture lesson from Luke the second chapter read by Mrs. H. A. Elson, and the solo, "Hark, What Mean those Holy Voices" by Mrs. H. W. Johnston. Mrs. H. E. Smith led in prayer.

A selection from Ben Hur, "The First Christmas," was read by Mrs. R. H. Edmunds, and the chapter, "A new Frontier in Christian Missions" from the study book ,was taken up in a very impressive manner by Mrs. M. E Hetherington.

On motion it was decided to send Christmas greetings from the Auxiliary to Miss E. C. Hawken, the missionary who is its representative on the home field, at Wahstao, Alberta, and to Miss Viola Cardwell, now on furlough from Korea, who is at present recuperating from ill health and at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Cardwell, Wallace's Point, Otonabee River. Miss Cardwell and her work at Hamheung, Korea, have been the subject of special prayer by the auxiliary for some months past, and the members whether personally acquainted with her or not have a very genuine interest in her welfare.

Pres.: Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard.
Vice-Pres.: Mrs H W. Johnston.
2nd Vice-Pres: Mrs. H. E. Smith.
Secretary: Mrs. C. W. Richards.
Treas.: Miss M. E. Hetherington.
Cor. Secretary: Miss Pearl Burnham.
Supt. Christian Stewardship: Miss Estelle Hetherington.
Strangers' Secretary:: Mrs. F. H. Smith.
Associate Helpers' Secretary: Mrs. J. L. Byam.
Literature Secretary: Mrs. R. H. Edmunds.
Supt. Mission Band: Mrs. G. W. Sayles.
Press Secretary: Recording and Cor. Secretaries.

The treasurer reported the total allocation for the nine months' year as $240; and of this amount only a little over $26 remains to be raised. A number of fees are yet to come in and the amount will be fully reached this month; over $40 was paid in at Wednesday's meeting, a part of this been thankoffering, this collection being completed as envelopes were received at November meeting as well. About $232 is now on hand, and a donation from a life member living at a distance has since been received.

Group leaders for 1928 will be named at a later meeting and full reports covering the year will be presented at the January gathering.

PLAY PRESENTED BY MADOC CAST

Young People of United Church Put on Successful Performance.

MADOC, Dec. 17.—An exceptionally good play was put on by the Young People of Trinity United Church, Madoc, at the Empire Theatre on Wednesday evening, Dec. 14.

The house was crowded to capacity and many were turned away because of lack of room. Music was provided by the Sills Orchestra and by the Young People's Orchestra, and a solo given by Mr. William Hawthorne, "The photo of the Girl I Left Behind," was encored again and again.

The play was unanimously voted to be one of the best ever given by amateurs in Madoc. The characters were well chosen and admirably sustained throughout, and Mrs. J. B. Hough, as President of the Society, and Mrs. L. Ashley are to be congratulated on the splendid success of the young people under their tuition and diligent training. The proceeds amounted to $133.00.

The cast was: Grandpa Crawford, Mr. James Keene; Mrs. Davis (Grandma), Mrs. James Keene; Ruth (granddaughter), Muriel Rousehorn; Walter, (her brother), Clarence McCoy; Dr. Jimmy Reid, Charles Phillips; Miss Flo, Edna Pettit; Mr. Post, Donald Whytock; Leetie (a neighbor's daughter), Hazel Ross; Zuzu (negro cook), Dorothy Nickle; Salamander (her choice), Albert Caskey.

While the play is extremely sad at times it all ends happily, and the audience was vastly entertained and often in gales of laughter over the antics of the negro cook and her pride in her new husband, also the laughter-provoking salutations of the three pairs of lovers and the wooing and wedding of Grandpa Crawford and Grandma Davis.

Several new electric signs are to be seen in Madoc, notably those of R. McCoy, C. Caverly, C. Ross and George West.

Christmas decorations are the order of the day and the shop windows in town are most attractive with Christmas goods and Christmas decorationss

Mr. Brett, local Ford service and garage man, expects to display the new Ford car here on December 22.

The roof of Mr. A. L. Connor's cottage at Moira Lake was blown off during the recent storm and the ruins landed on the railway track. The Madoc-Belleville train had to be held up while the wreckage was removed The cottage was shifted on its foundation and considerable damage was done to the wall also.

Mr. George A. Moon of Rainy River, formerly of Madoc, a son of the late Mr. Albert Moon and Mrs. Mary Moon of town, has been appointed to the Department of Inland Revenue as Customs Excise Examiner at the International Bridge between Bandetta and Rainy River.

Brides Continue To Promise to Obey

LONDON December 17. United Press. — British brides will continue to swear obedience to their husbands and husbands will continue to endow their brides with all their wordly goods in consequence of the rejection of the revised version of the Church of England prayer book.

An alternative church marriage service was provided in the new book—though the old still would have been permissible for unmodernied brides—by which the word obey was omitted, and the bride would have pledged herself merely to love, honor and

The bridegroom would have promised "with all my worldly goods I with thee share," instead of the old fashioned "with all my worldly goods I thee endow."

LES CANADIENS WIN 5-1 VICTORY FROM BRUINS

STONEWALL DEFENCE

MONTREAL, Que., December 19. Canadian Press. — The same blinding speed combined with an all-round display of tricky hockey, and a stonewall defence, which has given Canadiens a long lead in their section of the National Hockey League, was again evidenced late on Saturday night when the flying Frenchmen swarmed over the much-tooted Boston Bruins for a five to one victory Eleven thousand fans witnessed the fray which despite the one-sided score provided them with an excellent exhibition of hockey.

The rabid Canuck supporters went wild with enthusiasm as their favorites uncorked bursts of dazzling speed, which carried all before it.

Morenz, Joliat and Gagne, first-string Canadien forwards line, were here, there and everywhere, and had the Bruin defence bewildered. Joliat proved the popular hero with the Canadien adherents He socred three goals and figured in another. Gagne and Gardiner obtained the other two counters.

Scores Boston's Counter.

Herb Oliver scored Boston's lone goal in a rush with Frederickson early in the first period thus giving the Yankee squad the crimp. The dashing Canucks however did not take long to get going and after Joliat had evened the count before the end of the first session the Bruins were seldom in the picture.

The usually rugged Boston defence of Hitchman and Shore found it impossible to cope with the speed shown by their adversaries; Morenz, Joliat and Gagne were slipping by the Bruin rear guard with regularity, the Canuck forward line picking the openings with a nicety

At the other end of the ice the Canadian defence held up well under the determined attacks of the opposition. At times the Bruins attemped to match speed with the Canuck flyers but they made a sorry job of it Had the Bruins stuck to their usual rugged brand of hockey perhaps they would have made a better job of holding the fast-travelling Canucks. However it is doubtful if any kind of a game could have stopped the Canadiens, such was their display Saturday night. It was the kind of a game that only the colorful flying Frenchmen could provide.

The victory marked Canadiens' sixth straight win and their ninth in the twelve games played this season. Only once have they suffered defeat while they have been held to tie games on two occasions. Canadiens' winning streak during the last quarter of last season when they climbed from a fairly low position in the standing up to within a few games of the leading Ottawa Senators who during the first part of the season had established one of the longest leads ever known in organized hockey.

Charles Langlois, just obtained in a trade with Pittsburgh for Martin Burke, made his first appearance with Canadiens and relieved on the defence. Langlois quickly fitted into the Canucks' style of play and should prove a valuable addition to the Canuck roster

The scoring in Saturday night's game started less than three minutes after the start when Oliver and Frederickson went up together, Oliver taking a pass at the defence and cutting across in front of Hainsworth to flip the disc into the net. Canadiens soon got going, but it took them over ten minutes to tie the score, Joliat doing the notching on a lone effort.

The second session was little more than four minutes old when Canadiens had added two more goals to their score, Gardiner and Gagne doing the scoring. Gardiner carried up the ice, passed to Joliat at the defence, dashed between Shore and Hitchman, regained the puck on a short pass from Joliat and slammed behind Winkler. Gagne scored when he trapped Leduc's rebound and shot the puck into the net.

Joliat made it 4 to 1 before the end of the period when he got his own rebound past Winkler after having taken a pass from Morenz at the defence.

The Bruins showed some improvement in the third period, and for eighteen minutes held their own in the matter of goals scored. Joliat, however, was still on the ice, and with less than two minutes to go, he dashed through alone to beat Winkler for his third.

Ten penalties, all for minor offences, given to each team were handed out by the officials.

Summary.

First period—
1. Boston—Oliver, 2.28.
2. Canadiens—Joliat, 10.30.

Penalties: Herberts 2.

Second period—
3. Canadiens—Gardiner, 3.40.
4. Canadiens—Gagne 2.8.
5. Canadiens—Joliat, 13.51.

Penalties: Mantha, Joliat, Leduc, Shore, Gardiner and Gordon.

Laroche counted for the Beavers in the second. In the third period, Taylor, taking a pass from Mackey, scored for Boston, while Laroche scored again for the visitors.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—The Springfield Indians defeated the New Haven Eagles in a Canadian-American Hockey League game here Saturday night by a 2 to 0 score. EVERTON LEADS ENGLISH LEAGUE

Newcastle United Suffer Defeat on Their Own Grounds.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press Cable.) — Frost-ground pitches which prevailed for almost all the football games in the British Isles on Saturday made the matches almost farcial in places. The players slipped and fell constantly and nothing approaching scientific team work was possible. Of the English First Division matches two stand out, Everton's maintenance of their winning streak and the astonishing lapse of Newcastle United on their own grounds. Portsmouth trimmed the Novocastrians in a blinding snow storm. Camsell, of Middlesborough, joined the circle of elect footballers who have scored their century of goals in league fixtures.

Everton are now well out in front in the league averages. Saturday, before a home crowd of 35,000 they played like champions with superb dash and confidence. For the first time in weeks Dean, the Everton forward, did not figure in the actual scoring, though a goal secured by Critchley was diverted into the nets from a shot by him. The other Everton scorers were Troup, who netted with a cross shot, Kelly from a free kick and Forshaw, who headed in. Bell secured Burnley's tally.

Tottenham Hotspurs continued to make headway in the league standing at White Hart Lane before 25,000 people. Their victims were Liverpool. Osborne put the 'Spurs ahead with a brilliant shot in the second minute of play. Jackson equalized before the interval. Elkes placed the Spurs in their winning position soon after the turn round and repeated just before the end.

Portsmouth led by two goals to one at half time through counters registered by Watson and Foryard. Macdonald scored for the Northerners. Newcastle lost Maitland in the second half for a while. He was hurt in a collision and was carried off. He returned after fifteen minutes. Cook scored Portsmouth's third goal twelve minutes from time. This was Portsmouth's first win in twelve weeks.

Cardiff City should not have been beaten by Bury. The cup holders played a most erratic game. The teams had not scored when there was only a minute to go. Then Amos centred and Vernon headed in a most astonishing goal for Bury.

Blackburn Rovers scored their first gaol in four matches and beat Sheffield United with it. It was got by Healless.

Manchester United had a field day at home at the expense of the Arsenal. The game was even enough up to half time, Spence netting for the United and Wilson through his own goal from Hulme's shot for the Londoners. After the turn round aPrtride, McPherson and Manson scored for Manchester in quick succession.

Derby County and Middlesbrough staged a desperately played out draw at Derby with lots of scoring. Derby led at half time by the goals of Stephenson and Crooks. Whitehouse made it three for Derby. Then Camsell started the scoring for Middlesbrough with his hundredth goal and McClelland put in another. Ferguson equalized in a furore of excitement.

Huddersfield Town, at home to Leicester City, had things pretty easy. Brown scored twice and Kelly once for the Town in the first half. Chandler got Leicester's gaol.

Other division scorers were:

Bolton Wanderers, Wizard, Finney (from a free kick), John Smith; Aston Villa, Dorrell.

West Ham United, Yems, Ruffel; Birmingham, Bradford.

The best performance in the Second Division was Southampton's draw with Manchester City at Southmpton. Broadhurst scored for Manchester after sixteen minutes of play. Not until late on in the second half did Southampton get the equalizer and it came from a sizzling shot by Traylor.

Thirty thousand passed the turnstiles at Stanford Bridge to see Chelsea get back into its winning stride and blank Wolverhampton Wanderers. Wilson put the pensioners in front in the first minute and Turnbull added another in the last minute.

Scores in other Second Division games were secured by:

Glidden, Evans, Cookson, all after the interval, for West Bromwich Albion against South Shields; Taylor for Hull City and Mills for Notts County; Tilson, twice, and Curran for Barnsley, and Hampson for Blackpool; Wadsworth, twice, and Burton for Nottingham Forest and Wallace through his own goal for Stoke City; Deacon and Hilles for Swnsea City and Robson for Grimsby Town; Robson and McDonald for Reading and McKenna for Fulham.

Millwall, now on the crest of the wave in the Third Division, Southern Section, were supported by a home crowd of 20,000 for their game against Plymouth Argyle. The feature of this match was the brilliant goal tending of Beecham, who kept out several. Plymouth shots which looked almost certain scorers, one from a penalty shot. Millwall's gaols came from Cock and Landells.

Newport County scored a rather surprising win over Northampton. Watson ran through and scored for Newport in the first minute. Northampton got on even terms through a free kick, which Maloney netted. A terrific struggle ensued for the rest of the match, Gitters booting in the winner for Newport two seconds from the end.

The "Flying Parson", once famous as a middle-distance runner, Harold C. Cutbill was dropped as an amateur on a charge of excessive traveling expenses. Now reinstated, he has gone into active training.

What Your Want In the WANT ADS

MAROONS LOSE OTTAWA GAME BY SINGLE GOAL

Score Lone Tally of the Game in Second Period.

CLOSE CONTEST

Led by Nighbor, Winners Lead Opponents in Defensive Play.

OTTAWA, Dec. 19 (Canadian Press).—By a single goal the Ottawa Senators defeated Montreal Maroons here Saturday night and strengthened their second place position in the international wheel of the National Hockey League. The lone tally that was netted during the sixty hotly contested minutes of the game came in the second period off the stick of Hec. Kilrea after a combination rush by the three Senator forward stalwarts. The Maroons found in their usual rugged style and many times had the citadel of the world's champions tottering before a barrage of pucks, but they could not dent the twine of the Ottawa goal cage.

The match was similar to the previous two meetings of these teams this season, and to many they have played in other years in the national circuit, in that a single goal decided the victors. It was different, however, from their other games of the present schedule, for on those two occasions the Montreal clan romped off with the winning points.

The locals richly deserved their victory Saturday night for they soared above their opponents in the defensive play. Led by Frank Nighbor, the lanky-calculating centre, the Ottawas were back checking like demons and often the poke-checking stick of Nighbor alone seemed to have the Maroons stalled in their tracks.

On the offensive, the teams were evenly matched. Babe Siebert, Phillips, "Red" Dutton and Ward were a continual threat in their goalward rushes for the visitors, while Kilrea, Nighbor, Clancy and "Punch" Broadbent drove equally menacing shots on the Maroon net guardian. The locals led slightly in goal shots.

They banged 41 pucks on Benedict while the Maroons gave Connell 35 to handle.

Both teams exhibited smooth-working combination and this form of attack featured the majority of goal tries throughout the tussle. It was on such a thrust that the Ottawas reaped their victory. The teams had fought so evenly in the opening period that it seemed neither could tally, and half of the second period had similarly passed when roadbent hooked the puck from a rushing Maroon wing at centre ice and dodged down the right side of the ice. Nighbor was abreast of him to take a perfect pass and send the disc over to Kilrea who had slipped through the Montreal defencemen and stood waiting in front of the goal mouth. It was then a simple matter for the blonde left wing to flick the rubber over Benedict's goalstick for what proved to be the winning tally.

"Hooly" Smith, who was sold by the Ottawa club to the Maroons at the close of last season, was accorded a rousing welcome by the 7,500 fans who turned out for the game. Smith looked strong as a cross-checker and also sent many Senator thrusts back with his sweeping-hook check, but he did not appear to have reached the top of his form in offensive play.

His Excellency and Vice-Regal party attended the match.

Line-up:

Maroons.—Benedict, goal; Munro and Dutton, defence; Stewart, centre; Siebert and Phillips, wings. Subs, Ward, Oatman, Carson, Tunney, Hooley Smith.

Ottawa.—Connell, goal; Clancy and Boucher, defence; Nighbor, centre; Kilrea and Broadbent, wings. Suos, Denneny, A. Smith, Halliday, Chouinard, Grosvenor.

Referees—Lou Marsh and Bobby Hewitson.

GEYSER BREAKS BONDS.

FALLON, Nev., Dec. 17.—After spouting boiling water for many years through its valve and casing, the hot water geyser at Stillwater near here, broke its bonds and ran wild. Toronto Team Outplays Detroit, But Loses in Overtime Play.

SUNDAY'S N.H.L. GAMES.

TORONTO, Dec. 19.—In most hockey games that team which gets the "breaks" usually wins. No more glaring evidence of this fact was ever provided at Arena Gardens than Detroit's victory over Toronto Leafs in an N.H.L. fixture Saturday night. After being outplayed but not outscored for a good bit of the distance, Jack Adams' Cougars emerged triumphant by a 1 to 0 score after the teams had battled nearly seven minutes past the regulation three periods.

The "break" for Detroit came when Art Duncan, who is one of if not the most effective players Toronto possesses at the present time, was handed a penalty for an accidental trip. With Duncan in the pen, the Leafs were decidedly weakened on the defence, and Carson Cooper and Jack Walker found an opening through the locals' guard which gave Cooper a chance to drive in a fast shot from fairly close proximity to the goal. The puck eluded Roach and hit the net for the only counter of the contest.

Americans Third.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—The New York Americans went into third place in the international group of the National Hockey League on Sunday night when they scored their second victory of the season over Chicago by 2 goals to 0.

After a scoreless opening period, Eddie Bouchard netted the first counter for the Americans in the middle session on a pass from Joe Simpson. Norman Himes scored the other goal in the third period.

The Americans drew eight of eleven penalties handed out. Simpson and Himes both received head injuries and retired temporarily for treatment.

Cougars Take Lead.

DETROIT, Dec. 19.—The Detroit Cougars and Pittsburgh Pirates fought through an entire game and one overtime period in a National Professional Hockey League game on Sunday night, the contest ending in a 3-3 tie, putting Detroit in undisputed possession of first place in the league standing. George Hay, left wing for the Cougars, was the outstanding performer of the game, scoring two goals and assisting in the third.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

Headed by Joseph Schildkraut and Julia Faye, each of whom scored heavily in Cecil B. DeMille's "The King of Kings," the featured cast for "His Dog," which Karl Brown directed at the DeMille Studio and which comes to the Regent theatre to-day, is of unusual calbre.

Schildkraut, in the leading male role is seen by a social outcast tired of life, although but a young man, who later is brought to his senses, and becomes a valued citizen of his community through the example of the loyalty and devotion of his dog. The role though difficult, is said to offer Schildkraut, who portrayed Judas in "The King of Kings," another opportunity to display his fine mimetic powers.

Julia Faye, whose rise to prominence during the past year has been marked by fine performances in "The Volga Boatman," "Corporal Kate," "The King of Kings," "The Yankee Clipper," "Turkish Delight," and other important pictures, is seen opposite Schildkraut, in the role of a little country girl.

Robert Edeson, who portrayed the Apostle Matthew in "The King of Kings," and who has been seen to advantage in father portrayals in a score or more of big productions, once again plays the father in "His dog." Sally Rand, Wampas Baby Star of 1927, has a conspicuous part while Fred Walton, who recently gave a fine performance as a butler in "The Little Adventuress," is seen in a strong character delineation. Annabella Magnus also is well cast.

"His Dog" was prepared for the screen by Olga Printzlau from Albert Payson Terhune's gripping magazine serial of the same name. Walter Woods supervised the production.

LARGE ATTENDANCE CHRISTMAS CONCERT

MILLBROOK, Dec. 16.—No other event in the yearly programme of entertainments in connection with the United Church is looked forward to with more pleasurable anticipation than the annual "White Christmas" concert, given by the Sunshine Mission Band.

This happy occasion, which is a gala day for the little folk, drew a big audience to the basement of the church on Tuesday evening, over fifty of the boys and girls taking part.

Red-shaded lights, and a tree gay with red bells and glittering tinsel, created a Christmas atmosphere which was intensified by the many-shaped boxes and parcels being constantly brought in and piled on the table, or tied on the tree.

'White Gifts for the King," is the idea fostered, and the admission is "something to put on the tree," these gifts are afterward packed in a bale and shipped to Miss E. C. Hawken at Wahstao, Alberta, for use in providing a Christmas tree at the Mission boarding-school for the Ruthenian children.

Rev. F. H. Howard acted as chairman and made a few opening remarks, after which Arthur Howard gave a reading, "A Little Boys' Lament," and a piano duet was played by Bryer Edmunds and Mary Burnham.

A most attractive picture was presented when all the young folk were massed upon the platform for the opening chorus, "Welcome, Welcome, One and All." The church organist, Miss E. Hetherington, presided at the piano throughout, and the credit for the excellent training done is due to Mrs. G. W. Sayles, the efficient superintendent of the Band, ably assisted by Mrs. M. McDowell.

A recitation, "My Brother's Clothes," by Jack Stinson, was followed by the cantata, "Little Housekeepers," which had a scene for every day in the week, depicting its particular duties.

Jean Stinson and Dorothy McDowell were the senior girls remaining on the platform every time the curtain was drawn and having speaking part throughout.

Monday was "Wash Day," and found some of the little girls bending over the tub, vigorously scrubbing the clothes on the wash-board, rinsing, blueing, starching and hanging out the wash. Those taking part were Ida Lunn, Bonna Clarke, Toy Nattress, Marjorie McDowell, Kathleen Davis and Maudie Poper, who had the basket of clothes pins.

Elwood Fallis recited, "Since That New Bay came," while the stage was arranged for Tuesday, "Ironing Day," and here again were busy hands with three girls, Helen Mitchell, Bryer Edmunds and Mary Burnham, standing behind small ironing-boards, smoothing off the clothes and punctuating their tuneful chorus, with "Click, Click, Click" as each iron in turn was laid smartly on the stand.

Wednesday, "Mending the Clothes" was the order, and Thursday was "Calling Day" when girl mothers, sternly admonishing the little child held by the hand to "mind its manners," made an extremely formal call, sipping their cups of tea, and nibbling at sugar wafers, and finally causing a general laugh by the ridiculously high handshake as each guest departed.

Friday naturally was "Sweeping Day" with a well-executed drill by fourteen girls each wearing white apron and quaint white Dutch dusting-cap, and carrying her toy broom with the precision of a soldier.

Saturday, of course, was "Baking Day," and the large table had flour, pan of dough which Myrtle Nattress was busily kneading, and other necessary ingredients from which were produced the loaf of bread, jelly roll, and pie displayed at the close of this scene, in which nine girls participated. A recitation by Reg. Edmunds preceded the drawing of the curtain.

Sunday found all the little folk seated in rows upon the platform and "Playing Church" meant the singing of familiar hymns, the entire audience being included when the collection was taken by two of the boys. Over $15.00 was realized and part of this is used to defray the expense of sending the bale to the West.

"Good Night, Ladies" was the closing chorus, and outside were heard the bells of Santa's sleigh, announcing his arrival. With a big pack on his back Santa Claus (Mr. Sayles) came in, his cheeks as rosy as his red suit, and the little folk were all remembered with a bag of homemade candy, the personal gift of Mrs. Sayles to the Band members. A handsome quilt, which Mrs. Sayles had pieced and a number of the mothers had assisted in quilting, was displayed with the announcement that it was to be included in the bale as a gift to Miss Hawken herself from the Mission Band.

Owing to the present unrest in China the hospital where the "Millbrook Sunshine Cot" is located is at present closed, but the thirty dollars which the Band annually sends towards its support will be used at some other needy place this year, and probably by another Christmas season the hospital in Chentu, West China, will again be opened and the contribution sent where it has been going for a number of years.

W. A. CAESAR GIVEN PRESENT BY FRIENDS

Is Leaving Havelock for Cobalt in Service of Bank.

HAVELOCK, Dec. 19.—On Thursday evening at a luncheon served at R. Brennan's Cafe, W. A. Caesar, teller in the Bank of Toronto, who has been transferred to Cobalt was presented with a fountain and pencil by a number of friends who have been intimately associated with him in athletics as a slight token of the high estimate in which his work in athletic circles, especially baseball, is held.

T. P. Lancaster read the following address and J. Davidson presented the gift:

Mr. W. A. Caesar.

Dear Huck:

The "Sports" of Havelock, and by that designation we mean all lovers of athletic pursuits, have learned with regret that you have been transferred to a larger, if somewhat older town by the Bank of Toronto, that of Cobalt.

During your residence in Havelock we have grown to admire your ability in baseball and hockey and in the former, especially, will your assistance be missed to a very marked degree. But not only in baseball and hockey circles will you be missed because we assure you, Huck, old sport, that we have grown to love and esteem you as one of the boys—one who was at all times willing to hold up his end of any task assigned to you, and in this connection we have in mind your duties as Secretary-Treasurer of the Athletic Association.

While we regret, as we said before, your departure from Havelock, we hope you will always remember the "gang" here in after years and we assure you that we will follow your career with warm interest and hope that the future will be kind to you in every way socially, in business and domestic circles. And, in conclusion, Huck, as a small token of our friendship and as a memento of your Havelock days we would ask you to accept this pencil and fountain pen. May they serve to record in your memory the days and not forgetting the nights spent in Havelock.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beauteous orphan, who is coveted by hideous Count Ravoir. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoir. She rejoins Fabien, and they live so extravagantly that Fabien is forced to capitalize a genius for cards. The King plays Fabien at cards for Manon, accuses him of cheating. Man on is deported. Fabien miraculously escaping, swims to her ship. They are found by the officers.

Fabien's face hardened. It was as though he raised a mask to hide the tumult of emotions and dread that might betray his fear.

"Your pardon, sir, but she is my wife." Fabien's arm moved protectingly around her.

Synnelet was annoyed. His little dream of love was shattered. Besides, it was exceedingly upsetting to be balked in something on which he had set his heart and mind. The Governor frowned ominously and even the Captain looked a little worried. This calm announcement of Fabien's put altogether a different light on things. Manon, tremulous in the shelter of Fabien's arms, gazed up at him adoringly, while he calmly continued to regard the others.

The Captain and the Governor turned aside and whispered in an undertone. It was evident that they were not entirely in accord.

"Put him off the ship," said the Governor in a voice loud enough for Fabien to hear.

"Yes," chimed in Synnelet, "we insist that you send him ashore. Turn himover to the guards. It is evident that he is wanted by them."

The Captain looked back at the fast receding shore line, already more than a mile away. There was a humorous gleam in his eyes which did not escape Manon and Fabien, who had been awaiting the result of the conference with no little trepidation.

"It will be rather difficult walking, sir," said the Captain to the Governor. "Besides, the law permits a husband to accompany his wife. If the guards wanted this man badly enough they should have gotten him. For the moment we will do nothing about it."

The Governor frowned. He could not infringe upon the Captain's authority. From time immemorial, at sea, the word of the Captain has been law for all on board to obey.

The Captain waited another moment for a coherent voiced dissension to his verdict, then, as everyone remained silent, he turned to Fabien and said, "You heard what I said, Monsieur? For the time being you are to remain on board—you will work your way across."

Manon's and Fabien's eyes met in a frantic effort to convey their relief, their love, and their hope for continued good luck in the new land that was destined to be their future home.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The days that followed opened up a new life for Fabien. The hard manual labor, that befell his lot as a member of the ship's crew, combined with the bracing salt air and plain but wholesome food built him up physically and gave him a keen mental stimulation that was in direct contrast to the romantic, inactive student who had studied for the Priesthood.

Fabien's one regret was that his moments with Manon were altogether too few and too far apart. His duties did not permit otherwise and all possible moments of leisure were eagerly sought for and anticipated by them both.

Fabien was unwearied in his efforts to save Manon from every inconvenience. She knew this and her gratitude, together with an appreciation for the odd situation that Fabien had placed himself in for her sake, made her so tender, and attentive to his every desire that their moments together were a continual exchange of attentions and love.

These rare leisure moments usually occurred in the early evening, when the deported women were allowed a few moments on the open deck before being locked in their quarters for the night.

Manon had won the fine old Captain's heart and respect. He deplored the fact that so charming a young girl had been deported. He was sure it was a mistake because such errors had been known to occur as the result of jealousy of someone in authority.

More than anything else the fine old seaman admired virtue and he was positive that Manon's sweet face reflected all the good qualities that a wife should possess.

Eight weeks of life aboard ship had slipped into the past. It was the longest and most tranquil period that Manon and Fabien had ever had together.

One beautiful moonlight night they were on the forward deck while the ship, with all sails set, sailed straight into a great golden path of moonlight.

"No magic carpet could carry us on a happier journey!" sighed Manon contentedly as she nestled her head in the warm hollow of Fabien's shoulder. "It is a miracle that you eluded arrest and are here. I shall not mind living in America—or any place—with you!"

"Are you sure that you will never want to change your mind?" Fabien paused long enough to search Manon's eyes for the answer he wanted, "Because just ahead of us, perhaps a day's sail—is a new country and we do not know what awaits us there. For my part, I do not mind. There was no future for us in France and your very touch makes me happy and is more priceless than gold."

"Then you shall be the richest man in the world. I love you with a tenderness that will last until death."

"My dear!" Fabien covered her slim hands with his own and continued, fervently, "Manon will you start this new life of ours as my wife."

With radiant face Manon turned toward him, then as suddenly averted her head, covering it with her hands. Fabien lightly touched her shoulder in alarm, not daring to speak. His fears were allayed, however, as Manon slowly looked up with her beautiful eyes swimming in unshed tears and said:

"I have dreamed of it—oh, so many times—but never spoke—afraid I would degrade you—that I was not worthy of you—"

"Not worthy, my sweet one," returned Fabien. "It is I who am not worthy of you. Your sweetness and your love have been a haven of rest and comfort to me." Tenderly he held her to him, her head against his shoulder.

"Oh, no, Fabien. That is not true. However, it is good of you to say it. I know that I have not merited the almost incredible fidelity which you have given me and even while loving you I have caused you many annoyances that only your wonderful love could forgive. But now it seems that my very nature is altered. The tears that you have so frequently seen me shed were not tears of misfortune. I have wept unselfishly, from the tenderness and compassion that I feel for you: and I shall never cease to upbraid myself for all the sacrifices and terrible things that you have endured for me."

"Manon, sweetheart, it has been worth it. And now—when shall we be married? Will you come with me now to the Captain? He can marry us. He will—and we shall be able to land in this new country as we should."

"Yes, Fabien darling—anything you say. I want to be truly your wife." Manon was eager and thrilled at Fabien's suggestion.

This new idea, this great adventure—marriage—brought more wonderful thoughts of joy and anticipation than either of them had before experienced.

Guileless as two children they made their way aft, hand in hand, to the Captain's cabin.

With his arm protectingly around Manon he opened the door and entered. Before them, seated around the table were the Captain, the Governor and his nephew Synnelet. The Captain rose to his feet as they came slowly forward and inquired, "Well, what can I do for you?"

"If you please, Monsieur—will you marry us?" Fabien's voice faltered slightly and he had an uncomfortable feeling that all was not well.

MUSICAL COMEDY AT CAMPBELLFORD

Speedway Girls Review Plays To Very Small Houses.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 17.—Al Winters and his Speedway Girls Revue has all the earmarks of a very good company, but for some reason—bad weather, Christmas shopping and the usual shortage of funds which invariably accompanies it—they are only playing to small houses. Their repertoire consists of a wide variety of songs, dances and general fun. They are booked to play here for the three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Winters himself displays considerable talent on the stage and with Gertie Gwyn playing opposite him, they form one of the hits of the show with their number "Side by Side." Betty Napier and Charles Conqueror form a dancing team of no mean quality. Their southern soft-shoe dancing merits special mention and has won them the place in the sun so coveted by every person on the stage. Both are light of foot and graceful, and they dance in such perfect time and rhythm that theirs was considered the best number of the evening. Betty also made a hit with her song number, "Just Once Again." Her partner scored an equal success with his "Ain't She Sweet."

Casey, the clown, is a scream. His balancing acts and general "line" seem to work in nicely and have yet to fail to win the applause of everyone, including the members of the company, who invariably speak a word of appreciation to this master of his art as soon as he comes off. Casey's election speech made a decided hit with the audience Thursday night. Coming as it does just when municipal elections are in the air, it was particularly funny. It was a case of many a true word being spoken in jest when he announced that the manager, Capt. Hyland was going to run for mayor; because Capt Hyland, when asked about the matter, intimated that such thoughts had not been far from his mind lately, but he had not wished to make his intentions public as yet. After hearing it from the stage, however, he admitted that the cat was out of the bag.

Charles Conqueror's number, "Because I Love You," sung in a soprano voice, won great favor tonight. Part of the song is sung from the stage and he enters as he is singing the chorus. Were it all sung from backstage, it would be almost impossible to distinguish his tones from those of a lady singer, but it is part of his act to sing a portion in a baritone range and thus prove that he has an exceptional range as well as ability.

All told, it is a swift moving little company of talented people. Their presentation is clean cut and humorous in the extreme.

The historic right of a dog to chase a cat was upheld in the Minnesota legislature when a bill permitting any person to kill a dog found chasing that person's domestic animals or poultry was changed to read "livestock and poultry."

THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR — XXXVII — by Nicholas Afonsky

In 1909, at Rheims, France, occurred the first aviation meeting ever held, which did much to convince the world that flying was really practicable. As many as five airplanes were in the air at the same time at this meeting, and seven flights of more than an hour made another very impressive record in the public mind.

Leon Delagrange was one of the important fliers of that time. He was a sculptor—the first boy in France to own a bicycle. Studying art at the Beaux Arts he met, as fellow students, Henry Farman and Gabriel Voisin, who later became noted fliers. He was killed at Bordeaux in 1910 when the left wing of his monoplane crumpled.

In October, 1910, Captain Matsievitch, a Russian flier and Nihilist, is said to have been ordered to take a high military officer up in his plane and have an accident fatal to both passenger and pilot. Matsievitch had a chance to take up the dignitary, but just as he was about to start detectives came up to him.

They made him take an oath to protect his passenger's life. Matsievitch considered the oath as sacred and brought his passenger safely to earth again. Then the Nihilists ordered Matsievitch to kill himself within 24 hours. Next day he let his airplane, high in the air, plunge to earth. He was picked up dead in the wreckage.

ODDFELLOWS HOLD ANNUAL CHRISTMAS TEA AND CONCERT

Entertain Nearly 400 Children in Lodge Rooms on Saturday.

SANTA CLAUS COMES.

Each Child Receives Stocking Full of Good Things To Eat From Visitor.

The Oddfellows Club Rooms on George street, were on Saturday afternoon, the scene of a jolly party, the occasion being the visit of Santa Claus on his annual tour. The children of the members numbering nearly four hundred, were entertained to the fourth annual Christmas tree by the Peterborough and Otonabee lodges, Golden Link Rebekahs, and Mount Hebron and Hiawatha encampments.

The Club room was very prettily decorated with green and red streamers and bells, with a beautiful Christmas tree in one corner, and a number of colored lights.

During the afternoon the boys and girls were treated to some comic moving pictures, which were supplied through the Y.M.C.A., and under the direction of Fred McNeely. An orchestra composed of Bert Smith at the piano, S. Rowe, clarinet, Clifford Rusau, violin, and Stanley Jones at the drums, ably assisted during the afternoon.

With radiance gleaming on every face and joy in every action the children took their seats for the first sitting in the large dining room and there for the next half hour or so enjoyed a bountiful repast. While the second group of children followed suit the boys and girls composing the first sitting were again amused with music and pictures

About half past five when all had assembled in the large lodge room, Ald R. S. Cotton received a telegram saying that Santa Claus was on his way and would arrive in the city in a few minutes. When he finally reached the rooms he was given a very warm reception by his many young friends who were much pleased to have him address them for a few minutes.

Then he took up a position near the door and handed to each child that passed a stocking of candy, nuts, oranges and apples to further gladden the hearts of the little visitors before they went home.

Those in charge of the Chrismas tree and who worked so untiringly in preparing the programme, and during the afternoon, were as follows: Committee in charge were: Bro. H. Hillier, chairman, and Bro. F. T. Tuggey, secretary; the decorating was in the hands of Bro. C. C. Mowry, with the assistance of Bro. W. Fair; the music committee was in charge of Bro. Stanley; the purchasing committee included Bros. J. Lancashire, G. Worboy and F. Tuggey; the refreshments and the preparing of the stockings were in the hands of the Rebekahs, the convenor being Mrs. Watts, assisted by Mrs Londerville, Mrs. Sisson, Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Murduff. Mrs. R. J. Martin and Mrs. J Henderson were convenors of refreshments.

Ample fire and police protection was provided during the afternoon.

Little Barbara Miller received the doll given by Mr. Morley Lyle to the child of five years of age whose birth day came nearest Christmas day.

St. Peter's Cathedral

Speaking at the Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday, Rev. P. Costello took his text from the Gospel according to St. Luke 3:1-3: "Prepare you the way of the Lord, make straight His paths," referring to the coming of John the Baptist, the great Precursor of Christ, who heard the word of the Lord and went into all the country about the Jordan, preaching baptism and the remission of sins, just as Isaias the Prophet had declared would be done. "And every valley shall be filled, the hills shall be made low, the crooked ways straight and the rough ways plain." Just as this figure of speech prophesied the preparation for the coming of the Messiah, so did the season of Advent pre-figure the celebration of the great festival of the Nativity, when all intemperance, injustice, uncharitableness and negligence should be cast aside, and the ways of sin banished from the temple of the soul . The crooked ways of life should be made straight and the rough ways smooth for the coming of the Lord.

The Midnight Mass, which is held annually in celebration of Christmas will take place on Saturday next, commencing promptly at midnight, and will be preceded by a procession of children to the crib, singing Christmas carols. Immediately following the Midnight Mass will be a Low Mass, after which the Papal Benediction will be imparted by His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, and another Low Mass celebrated.

On Sunday, Christmas Day, Masses will be at the usual Sunday hours of half-past seven, nine and half-past ten o'clock, the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament which follows the last Mass closing the services at the Cathedral for that day. All interested are invited to come and visit the crib during the day, however.

St. Paul's Presbyterian

The morning service in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church,, well attended in spite of the stormy and cool elements, was graced by the presence of Rev. Dr. H. P. S. Luttrell of Toronto. With a commanding appearance and a convincing and impressive mein, Dr. Luttrell delivered a fine oration from the Epistle of Paul to the Ephesians.

The preacher said that the church in Paul's day was not the Christian body he would have liked. They had many sins to contend with. Their general conversation was wicked, and suicide was almost everyday talk with the ordinary people. They had not the heavenly vision, and Paul's task was a hard one leading them aright.

The gist of the sermon was "the significance of Christ's birth, life, and His death on the Cross" to mankind. "What wonderful opportunities we in Canada have—and what are we doing with these to further Christ's Kingdom?" asked Dr. Luttrell.

The preacher, having spent twenty years in North Honan, told of the wonderful times with the Chinese, converting them and bringing them along by teaching and training. He characterized the present upheaval as a turning point in Chinese history life. Churches were established in China—in the adolescent stage, it might be said, but strong enough to stand steadfast, and be ready when the political and military crisis would pass. Then, he said, their ideas would turn toward the Christian life, since there was doubt and dismay with their own religion. This day was coming and was not far off, he said.

And what an opportunity for the Presbyterian Church in Canada, which was stronger, in comparison to numbers now than before the eventful times of 1925. He thought the church needed no vindication for the stand it took at that time. They were needing more money now than ever before; and the Presbyterian Church was thankful that God had blessed it so that, owing to expansion at His command, more money was needed. A church that was dead required no support—a live church would progress through the generosity of its people.

The preacher was amazed at the willingness of the people, as he travelled the land, to do their best to support the work of the church. Its opportunities were expanding, and were being met cheerfully. Young life was required for service under the banner in many lands, at home and abroad,, and in conclusion Dr. Luttrell urged the members of the church to pray without ceasing for God's richest blessing in the work of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

The Evening Service

A splendid congregation heard Rev. Mr. Allan in the evening deal with the subject, "A Silent Heaven" —how that the heavens had been silent towards the people of Israel for the four hundred years between the prophecies of Malachi and their fulfilment on the birth of Christ, as recorded in St. Matthew's Gospel.

The Music

The choir, under Martin B. Chenhall, rendered splendid music, with a Christmas atmosphere, though not specializing along this line. A solo, "Nazareth," by William Grieves; anthem, "Rock of Ages," and male quartette, "My Shepherd," were the numbers given.

Next Sabbath there will be special music in keeping with the great day, Christmas. Carols and "Messiah" choruses will predominate.

Plan Construction Of Flin Flon Railway

THE PAS, Man., December 19 (Canadian Press). — The immediate laying of steel on the surface as far as Cranberry Portage, in Northern Manitoba, is being considered by Flin Flon railway ngineers. If this plan is adopted it will mean the employment of 200 men at once.

This scheme is considered the most expeditious and satisfactory way of constructing this part of the line, as it will enable contractors to rush supplies and equipment and get the work under way with the least possible delay.

Part of the proposed route has already been inspected by H. F. McLean and W. S. Tomlinson, joint contractors . It is announced that a number of men will be taken on and preliminary work started at once. There are about 500 men employed at present on the Hudson Bay line, part of whom are engaged in building the new terminal at Mile. The rest are working on the right of way between the end of steel and Fort Churchill and on section work along the line.

CHURCH BREAK NOW PROPOSED

Sir William Joynson-Hicks Advises Split Between Parties.

FAVORS SOME CHANGES.

LONDON, Dec. 19 (United Press). —Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Home Secretary, in an interview today in The Daily News, urged a split between the Evangelical and Anglo-Catholic elements in the Church of England.

"I think the time has come for such a break," Sir William said.

"Leaders of the Anglo-Catholics are striving for a union with the Roman Catholic Church. If they are for Rome, they must go to Rome—not continue in the Established Church. I should be delighted if the Church Assembly would revise the Prayer Book again without interfering with the Communion Service and then return it to Parliament for approval by the Houses of Lords and Commons."

THREE PERSONS ARE ARRESTED

a series of climaxes in the greatest man hunt ever staged in Southern California. There is a price of more than fifty thousand dollars on the head of the kidnapper-slayer, whose letters and actions have shown him to be as cunning as his adopted name, "Fox," signifies.

Since the first note was delivered to the distracted father of the girl last Friday, he has defied and even taunted an army of police and detectives, while restive citizens have contributed a huge sum for his apprehension. Four thousand officers have raked Los Angeles and nearby cities since the torn body of the girl was picked up from the street into which the "Fox" had tossed it.

The net results of the huge police operations has been the arrest of fifty persons, but only four of these are being held: the Padley woman, Barnaman, Lewis D. Wyatt, who was taken into custody at Los Vegas, Nevada, and a man whose name the police refused to make know, are the four.

NO CLUES YET.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., December 19 (Canadian Press). — Not a single clue that might lead to the capture of the man who dismembered the body of little Marian Parker, twelve, had been found by the Los Angeles police detectives so far. This was the candid statement of Herman Cline, detective chief, who is directing the greatest man hunt in the history of Southern California.

SANTA CLAUS VISITS ROTARY CLUB TO-DAY

Finds Children From Shelter and Orphanage There and Gets Fine Reception.

PRESENTS FOR ALL.

Even Rotarians Are Not Overlooked When Well Known Visitor Gets Busy.

The Peterborough Rotary Club enjoyed a visit to-day from no less a personage than Santa Claus himself.

And the jovial old gentleman could not have chosen a more opportune time to have dropped in, seeing that the Rotarians had as their guests for the day the children from the Children's Aid Society Shelter and from St. Vincent's Orphanage.

The little folks, along with their hosts, had enjoyed a splendid luncheon in which roast turkey played a prominent part, when the jingle of sleigh bells was heard and almost simultaneously the familiar figure of Santa himself appeared at the door.

And what a reception he got The juvenile guests and the Rotarians alike jumped to their feet to greet the welcome visitor with cheers, and once inside he lost no time in discharging his mission.

A gaily decorated Christmas tree attracted his eye and at once he began distributing gifts. There were presents for every child present, but Santa was not satisfied to satisfy juvenile hearts alone. He had something for every Rotarian as well, and from the nature of the gifts for the club members and the poetry that accompanied them, St. Nicholas evidently has a strong sense of humour.

The occasion was a most enjoyable Christmas gathering. Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland gave in her own inimitable way two particularly suitable readings, "Just Before Chrismas" and "A Child's Christmas Prayer," and the children of St. Vincent's Orphanage contributed a very enjoyable Christmas carol.

Rotarian Rev. Father Costello, in a brief but eloquent speech, reminded his hearers old and young of the significance of Christmas. Whatever the difference in creeds they met, he said, on a common Christian ground in rejoicing over this greatest event in the history of the world.

John Edgar, secretary of the Children's Aid Society, expressed the thanks of that organization to the Rotary Club for entertaining the children of the Shelter and for other kindnesses, and Rotarian Father Costello, on behalf of St. Vincent's Orphanage, gave a similar message of thanks.

The Rotarians expressed their appreciation of the work done by Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland and Mrs. J. H. Seels in arranging the many details in connection with the Christmas tree and the visit of Santa Claus.

FRED L. ROY IS HONORED

140 CHOSEN FROM 16,000.

Unusual recognition has come to Fred L. Roy, photographer of this city. His picture and a resume of his career is to be found in "Who's Who in Professional Portraiture," a remarkable book dedicated, by the American Institute of Photography, "to those men and women who have constantly striven to raise the standard of professional portraiture with the camera." This contains pictures and stories of approximately one hundred and forty photographers who have been selected by the Institute as among the outstanding persons of the profession.

There are something like 16,000 photographers in Canada and the United States, and it is, consequently, no little distinction for Mr. Roy to have been selected for representation in this book, which includes such famous men as Pirie MacDonald, of New York City, John H. Garo, of Boston, William Shewell Ellis, of Philadelphia, and Arnold Genthe of New York City.

Around the City

Only once was the Fire Brigade called upon Sunday. A chimney fire at 490 Driscoll Terrace required attention.

The unemployment situation in the city and district is growing more oppressive each day, the local employment bureau this morning announcing that approximately three hundred men who require work are listed.

It has been unanimously decided by the merchants to have their stores remain open each of the last four evenings of this week. This is in accordance with the city bylaw.

On Way To Scene of Wreck of Lambton—Boys Died For Shipmates.

TRYING TO GET HELP.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. December 19 — Canadian Press. The fathers of the two men who lost their lives attempting to swim from the wrecked steamer Lambton, on Parisian Island, have arrived at the Sault on their way to Goulais Bay, from where they will commence a search along the shore for the bodies. They are John Moon of Owen Sound, father of Ivan C. Moon, wheelsman of the Lambton, and M. Baird, of Wiarton, father of Elmer Baird, oiler. The two members of the crew jumped from the vessel in an ill-fated attempt to swim to shore and get aid for their comrades. The two parents left here to-day for Goulais Bay and on their arrival will secure the services of Indian guides to help them search the vicinity where the remainder of the crew and the captain of the Lambton landed in a small boat

OBITUARY

JAMES MULHOLLAND

Peterborough City has lost a lifelong resident in the passing of James Mulholland, whose death took place at his home, 319 Reid Street. He was in his seventy-fifth year.

The late Mr. Mulholland, as a citizen, has been interested in and closely identified with affairs of the community and of All Saints' Church, serving as warden when the Rev. W. S. Major was in Peterborough.

He leaves to mourn, his sorrowing wife and three daughters, Mrs. S. C. Warne, Mrs. Norman McLeod and Miss Rosamond Mulholland, all of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place from the family residence at 2 p.m. on Tuesday. The Rev. J. Douglas Paterson and Rev. W. S. Major will conduct the services at the home and at the graveside in Little Lake Cemetery.

FRED W. HEMPSTEAD.

The death occurred last week of Frederick Walter Hempstead. Mr. and Mrs. Hempstead had spent the evening with friends, and after returning home Mr. Hempstead suffered a heart attack and died very suddenly. The deceased was born in England and came to Cobourg in 1906. He was a member of the session of Trinity United Church, a teacher in the Sunday school, and a member of the Sunday school orchestra.

In addition to his sorrowing widow he is survived by three sons, John of Bayonne, N.J.; Captain Fred of the Salvation Army, Sault Ste. Marie, and Alfred of Peterborough. The funeral was held on Friday afternoon with services in Trinity United church. Interment took place in Cobourg Union cemetery.—Cobourg Sentinel Star.

MRS. JOSEPH SIMS

There passed away early this morning, at her home, 738 George Street, Maria Jarvis Haines, widow of the late Joseph Sims. Word of her death was received with sincere regret by a host of friends, many of whom she gained during twenty-five years as maternity nurse of the city.

The late Mrs. Sims came to Canada from Shoftsbury, Dorset, England, forty-two years ago. She leaves to mourn her loss, one daughter, Mrs. Edith Vickers, and eight grandchildren. One son predeceased her four years ago.

The funeral will take place from her late residence on Wednesday at 2 p.m., proceeding to Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. William Allan officiating.

WELL BABIES' CLINIC

The Well Babies' Clinic will hold its last meeting of the year tomorrow, Dec. 20. The King's Daughters will serve tea after the babies have been weighed. The president, Mrs. Mowat, will give an address. The attendance of every mother who has visited the clinic during the year is looked for, with her baby. There will be no admission fee charged.

Physicians Unite To Force Payment

YANKTON, South Dakota, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Persons who are in the habit of neglecting payment of bills for professional medical service will be denied medical aid in at least eight south eastern South Dakota towns. Stirred to action because of the increasing number of patients who change from one doctor to another to avoid payment, eight physicians have joined hands in keeping this class of patients to a minimum. Notices signed by the physicians warn that after January 1, services will be declined to all those whose accounts are in arrears and who have not made arrangements for a further extension of credit.

navy yard, were hove to in Buzzard Bay, but this could not be confirmed. Their delay in reaching here will seriously handicap efforts to effect the release of the six men known to be alive aboard the submersible and determination of the fate of thirty-four others aboard.

Rescue Work Stopped.

BOSTON, Dec. 19. — (Canadian Press.)— Pumping of air into the sunken submarine S-5 has stopped and rescue work at the scene was at a standstill to-day, Rear Admiral Frank Brumby reported upon his arrival at Charletown Navy Yard on board the mine sweeper Falcon.

Ask For Food.

BOSTON, Dec. 19. — (Canadian Press.)— A message from the men trapped on the submarine S-5 was received by the mine sweeper Falcon early to-day. On the arrival of the Falcon here from the scene of rescue operations, Lieut. Commander Elsberge said that the message, tapped out in the Morse code, asked if the rescuers could send oxygen and emergency food supplies to the six men still alive in the submarine through the torpedo tube. The message was sent by Lieut. Fitz, one of the four officers aboard the S-5.

Chances Very Slim.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press.)—The chances of rescuing alive the six members of the crew of the wrecked submarine S-5 known to be alive are "exceedingly slim" in the opinion of Lieut. C. Momsen, submarine expert of the navy. Lieut. Momsen expressed the belief to-day that under the most favorable conditions the men could last only until early Wednesday morning before being overcome by carbon dioxide gas.

HEALTH BOARD SURPLUS $300 ON YEAR'S WORK

Expenditures Have Been Kept Well Within Estimates This Year.

STUDENTS IN HOSPITAL.

Seven Carriers of Diphtheria Germs Found at Normal Are Under Supervision.

The final meeting of the year for the local Board of Health was held this morning. The financial statement revealed that the board has kept well within its estimates and will report a surplus at the end of the year of about $300. The $1,000 secured from the City Council during the smallpox scare will be returned to the city treasurer.

Dr. T. W. H. Young, Medical Officer of Health, reported one case of diphtheria, three of chicken pox, and one of scarlet fever in the city. There are also seven Normal students who are classed as carriers. Four of these are in Queen Mary Hospital, where they are receiving treatment, two are at their home, and the last, a girl, disappeared, but has been located in Little Britain, where the proper health authorities have been notified.

The girls could not be forced to go to the hospital, said Dr. Young, as they are not suffering from any disease, but to protect the city and the public in general they offered to go there. It was moved by Dr. Young and seconded by J. J. Turner that these students be not charged while taking the treatment in the hospital.

J. J. Turner expressed his appreciation of the co-operation he received from the other members during the year. Alderman Hancock, as chairman, thanked the members for their assistance during the year and paid tribute to the work done at Queen Mary Hospital. "A feeling has gone out that the hospital is very expensive to keep up but it is a protection to the city and the public in general. The other hospitals do not want it connected with them, and a cost of $9,000 a year is a cheap protection to the citizens of this city. Several hundred were treated during the year, and of this number there were only four deaths, said the chairman.

Those present were Ald. Hancock, J. J. Turner, Dr. J. M. O'Brien and Dr. Young.

FRIDAY NIGHT CLUB HOLDS CELEBRATION

Impromptu Speeches Feature Meeting, While Theatre Party Follows.

The Friday Night Supper Club's regular meeting on Friday night will be long remembered as one of the most memorable of any held during the club's history. Fifty-four members sat down to a chicken supper at the appointed hour and at the conclusion of the supper, which was enlivened by two or three lively songs, a number of the members were called on for impromptu speeches which were greatly enjoyed by the club. G. A. Macdonald was a guest of his son Howard and was called upon by the chairman, J. F. H. Wallace, to say a few words.

Mr. Macdonald said that he had heard a great deal about the Friday Night Club and was curious to see for himself what was the attraction at the Y every Friday night. He recalled the days when he spent a good deal of time at the Association building and the fine and valued friendships made at that time. He urged the members to make the most of the opportunities for making friends of worth while fellows such as are found in the club membership.

Those who contributed short speeches were: Ron. Fleming, Frances Hewitt, Dick Cowan, Doug. Gordon, Ralph Adair, Dave Watson and Hector McLeod.

At the conclusion of the program the entire party, including the young ladies who served supper and who have contributed to the success of the club's weekly meetings by their services, were invited by the President, Mr. Wallace, to be the guests of himself and Mrs. Wallace at the Capitol Theatre. Everybody agreed that this was the finest event ever held by the Club.

The next meeting will be held on Friday, December 30th at the usual time, 6.15 to 7.30, when all "old boys" are invited to attend, and it is the hope of the executive that all those who are home from college will be present.

MAYOR HOST TO ALDERMEN

SPEECHES SHORT

The Aldermen and city officials were guests of His Worship Mayor W. T. Holloway at what Ald. Phelan later described as a "sumptuous repast" in Hooper's Palm Rooms last night, prior to the closing council meeting of the year. After dinner His Worship made a short speech declaring that the two years now drawing to a close had been the banner years of his life. He expressed his pleasure in the work and thanked his colleagues for the way they had supported him. There had been differences, he said, but the members of the council had remained the best of friends at all times.

Because of his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him by his election to the Mayoralty, continued His Worship, he had decided to withdraw from the race for the Utilities Commission, considering that the Mayoral dignity was not lightly to be cast aside to seek another position.

A motion of thanks was proposed by Ald. Roland Denne and seconded by Ald. Nagle Phelan, the rival candidates for the Mayoralty, who sat one on each side of Mayor Holloway. Both expressed their pleasure in serving under His Worship during the past two years.

City Solicitor Joseph Wearing also spoke on the matter, stating that he had had a better opportunity of getting knowledge of the Mayor than any other official. He had noted the Mayor's gentiality, control of the meetings, and determination to get the best for Peterborough. This last had appeared to be the Mayor's slogan on all occasions.

Ald. C. H. Ackerman's attempt to get the rivals for the Mayoralty to announce their platforms was not concurred in.

There were present Aldermen Phelan, Denne, Stocker, Hancock, Cotton, Greene, Macdonald, Ackerman and McIntyre, and City Clerk S. R. Armstrong. City Treasurer Frank Adams, Tax Collector W. J. Greene, Assessor W. J. Henry, City Engineer R. H. Parsons, City Solicitor Joseph Wearing, Fire Chief George Gimblett, Chief of Police Samuel Newhall, Relief Officer A. G. Metheral, and Sanitary Inspector Charles Stapleton.

REVENGE SAID TO BE MOTIVE FOR MURDER

Finger Prints On Letters Those of Former Employee of Bank.

DISCHARGED FOR FORGERY.

Father of Slain Girl Only Official To Oppose Plea For Reinstatement.

LOS ANGELES, December 20 (Canadian Press).— William Edward Hickman, a former employee of the Los Angeles First National Trust and Savings Bank, was declared by Chief of Detectives Herman Cline to-day to have been "absolutely identified" as the murderer of Marion Parker, the twelve-year-old daughter of Perry Parker, one of the bank's officials.

The motive of the atrocious crime, the police declared, apparently was vengeance . Perry M. Parker, assistant cashier of the bank, was the only bank official who opposed the youth's plea for probation after he had pleaded guilty some time ago to the charges of forging cheques. Arrest on that charge was responsible for his discharge from the bank, and Parker had urged that Hickman should be given a prison or jail term. Hickman, however, was paroled to his mother, then living in Alhambra, California.

The announcement that Hickman had been identified both by fingerprints and a photograph as the kidnapper and slayer of the child was made by the police after it had been determined that he was not at his Alhambra address. Neighbors said the family moved a month ago to Kansas City, Mo.

Three thousand police officers and deputy sheriffs were engaged in the hunt for Hickman this morning.

Hickman's finger prints, on file with the Police Identification Bureau, a result of his previous arrest, checked with those found on the rear window of the coupe used by the slayer when he delivered the child's torso to her father, and also with the prints found on the ransom letters police said. The police photograph was identified by a school teacher as the man who led little Marian away.

Fugitive Identified.

William Edward Hickman, sought as the murderer of Marian Parker, was reported to have been identified in flight here early to-day by a garage attendant who sold him five gallons of gasoline. Police declared they were hot on the fugitive's trail.

Think Intermediary Held.

Police to-day revealed they had arrested a man whose name they would not divulge, but who is believed to have been the intermediary in negotiations between the slayer of Marian Parker and the family of the girl.

The man in custody came here from Kansas City, Mo. several weeks ago and is known to have been a friend of both the Parker family and Hickman, who was discharged from the bank at which Marian's father was personnel officer. He is said to be an aviation enthusiast.

Detectives pointed to the slayer's use of the aviation term "solo" in ransom notes as a bit of proof that the arrested man might have acted at least in an advisory capacity in the penning of the death missives.

Mother Horrified. .. .. ..

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press.) — Dazed by the news that her son, William Edward Hickman, had been identified as the kidnapper and slayer of little Marian Parker in Los Angeles, Mrs. Eva Hickman declared to-day, "It's all a terrible mistake."

"I won't believe it until I hear an admission from Edward's own lips," she said tearfully. "He's in Chicago. The police will find him there." Mrs. Hickman said the last she had heard from her son was a letter he sent from Chicago last October.

The white-haired mother could not comprehend such a crime by her son. "I know my boy could not be guilty of such an unspeakable thing. This was the act of a fiend. My boy is a good clean boy. He could not have done it. There is a mistake somewhere."

BOOK DISPUTE CAUSING SPLIT

CABINET SHAKEN.

LONDON, Dec. 20. — United Press. —The fire of the theological dispute over the Anglican prayer book revision is keeping close to the political powder magazine. The revision bill itself as passed by the House of Lords and unexpectedly rejected by the Commons, was of course a non-party measure, and the lines of discussion ran zig-zag across the regular party lines, but the religious issues involved cut so deeply into the consciences of many members that they threaten to obscure ordinary party differences and to make strange bedfellows at the expense of regular political allegiances.

The division of opinion and sentiment is nowhere more acute than in the government itself, where Mr. Baldwin fought on the losing side against several of his own ministers. The cabinet is already reported to be at odds on certain questions of foreign policy, notably that of disarmament ,and the new schism will not tend to increase its security and strength.

STEAMER WRECKED.

Feared All Crew Lost When Vessel Crashed Near Kinsale.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.)— The Exchange Telegraph Company reports that an unidentified steamer went on the rocks near old head of Kinsale, Ireland, last night. The cries of the crew could be heard and some of them were seen in the rigging when rockets lit the scene. The ship, which was thought to be a collier, vanished, and it is feared that all were lost. The wreckage later drifted ashore.

HIGH SEAS FOIL NAVY DIVERS IN RESCUE WORK

Unable To Work Air Line Connected With Sunken Submarine.

SIGNAL MESSAGES.

Ask if Supplies Could Not Be Pushed Through Torpedo Tube.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass, Dec. 20. Canadian Press. — Six men were huddled together in the forward torpedo compartment of the sunken submarine S-4 waiting in an agony of mind that can be only faintly imagined for the rescue that did not come.

That was the situation that confronted the naval and coast guards armada which was foiled by the high seas yesterday in its frantic effort to carry aid.

Whether any others of the forty men who went down when the submarine sank after the collision with the coast guard destroyer Paulding Saturday afternoon were still alive, no one knew. That these six had survived at least part of another day was indicated by a radio message from the rescue fleet which said that they had sent out signals as late as yesterday afternoon.

All that could be told earlier in the day was that messages had been interchanged between the divers and the imprisoned men Sunday night and early yesterday. The man who with apparent calmness in the face of a terrible fate, tapped out in the Morse code the word that came from within the submarine, was Lieutenant Graham Howell Pitch, one of the four officers aboard.

"How long will you be?" was the plea that came to the rescuers Sunday night. The last message received yesterday asked for oxygen and emergency food supplies could not be pushed through the torpedo tube.

Then communication ceased. A diver had been seriously injured.

Forced to Give Up.

After he had been rescued from a perilous position in tangled wreckage 100 feet beneath the surface, the gale had kicked up such terrific waves that it was impossible to continue diving operations.

Meanwhile a discovery was made which led to even graver fears for the men down under the ocean. The air line through which it had been thought they were being given means to breathe was not functioning as had been desired

The mine sweeper Falcon had hooked an air line to a connection with one of the two air lines on the S-4 opening into the torpedo room. The men inside signalled that when they opened the valve water instead of air cam in.

Lines Became Fouled.

It was when Diver L. C Michaels went down to try to connect the air line with a second line on the submarine that the lines became fouled and he was caught in the tangle. He was unconscious when hauled up. The connection was not made.

The army of men aboard the rescue fleet was helpless while the gale raged. Michaels needed hospital attention. Rear-Admiral Frank H. Brumby ,aboard the Falcon, and in charge of operations decided to make a run to Boston.

Michaels was taken to the navy hospital at Chelsea, where it was said last night he probably would recover.

Admiral Brumby held a hasty conference with Rear-Admiral Philip Andrews commandant of the yard. Then the Falcon with more supplies aboard, hurried back to Provincetown

May Live Until Wednesday.

Could the men below survive another night? That was the question in the minds of the rescuers as they stood helplessly by. Perhaps the best opinion obtainable was that voiced in Washington by Lieut. Chas. B. Manson, submarine expert of the navy. Under favorable conditions, he said, the men could last until early Wednesday morning.

"It all depends on how many men are alive and who are with them. If an officer is with them and forces the men to lie perfectly quiet, which lessens the discharge of carbon dioxide from the human bodies or if a torpedo man is there and knows how to get the air out of the torpedoes, they will have sufficient oxygen to keep them alive for 150 hours.

"But the normal discharge of carbon dioxide under the most favorable conditions would overcome the men in 87.7 hours, which would bring them to early Wednesday morning."

An officer is with them. If Lieut. Nomsen is right in his calculation it may be that Lieut. Fitch will be able to prolong his own life and that of his comrades.

Whatever their fate, the rescuers continued to work frantically on preparations for efforts to raise the submarine—likely to prove a long, wearisome task. Pontoons arrived on the scene late yesterday. Chains and gear came from the Charlestown Navy Yard. Everything pointed to a night of intense activity.

Port Arthur People Ask To Have Search Made On Isle Royale.

GONE 14 DAYS.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.)— Although fourteen days have elapsed since the freighter Kamloops ,carrying a crew of twenty, vanished somewhere in Upper Lake Superior, hope is cherished in marine circles that the vessel will be found. On the strength of this popular belief, a telegram was despatched yesterday to the Department of Marine and Fisheries at Ottawa, urging that ice breakers be commissioned to search about Isle Royale for the missing freighter. The intentions of the Department are unknown here.

STORMS SWEEP BUFFALO DISTRICT

Efforts Being Made To Bring Traffic Back To Normal.

BUFFALO, Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press.)— December continued to bare its teeth in Western New York today. Light snow fell and the temperature reached frigid marks. Reports from points in western and central parts of the State told of efforts to bring traffic conditions back to normal after severe snow and wind storms.

The majority of the two hundred tourists who experienced privations and faced possible starvation while snow bound near Evans, in the southern part of Erie county were being cared for in hotels and farm houses this morning following their harrowing experience.

Evans is twenty miles from here. Sleighs broke through the fifteen drifts last night, taking food and medical aid to the trapped tourists. Many of them were Ohio motorists on their way from New York State to Erie, Pa., en route home.

The tourists had been sheltered in a gasoline station. Some of the women and children were reported ill. Trucks, sleighs and road plows were sent to the scene to clear the road.

CITY ACCEPTS MINISTER'S OFFER TO PAY $2,500 TOWARD EXPENSE OF KEEPING UP LABORATORY HERE

City Becomes Responsible for Rest of Cost—To Have Part Time Director.

COUNCIL MEETS

Full Time M.O.H. Recommended to Next Year's Council—Business Cleared Up.

The City Council last night accepted the revised proposal of the Minister of Health for the maintenance of the Laboratory here. The proposal, received by His Worship Mayor Holloway during the afternoon by phone, was based on the suggestion of Dr. G. R. Scott during the conference last week with the Minister, but the amount the Department is to pay is cut from $3,000 to $2,500.

Among other business transacted at last night's special meeting, which completes the labors of this year's Board of Aldermen, was a decision to put the matter of having daylight saving for three months to a vote of the people, the acceptance of F. T. Webster's plan and report on the drainage area served by the ditch on Park Street South, and the acceptance of Ald. Denne's resignation to contest the Mayoralty.

The Mayor brought up the matter of the Provincial Laboratory. He recalled the visit of the deputation to Toronto, where the Hon. Dr. Godfrey had told them that the chief reason for closing the Laboratory was economy. The Minister had said that the City should take over part of the expense as much of the work done was of a purely municipal nature. Dr. Scott had put a proposition to the Minister to reduce the cost to the Government.

Dr. Godfrey was very much concerned, he said, over the necessity of having a full time M.O.H., which matter would be one for the incoming Council.

Yesterday afternoon, said His Worship, the Minister had called up to say that the Government had set the limit of its expenditure to $2,000 for salaries and $500 for supplies. This cuts down the amount available for the medical officer's salary. The city must also serve the surrounding district and provide a stenographer for the district M.O.H., Dr. N. H. Sutton, and a full-time nurse for the V. D. Clinic.

Ald. Macdonald asked what would be done toward having a full time M.O.H. The Mayor pointed out that the city pays its M.O.H. $2,000 and the School Board pays its officer $1,800. These can be consolidated and make the cost little more.

Ald. Greene remarked that the aldermen had little opportunity to consider the matter. He also wanted to know why the city should be responsible for serving the surrounding district.

The Mayor pointed out that the Department will pay the greater part of the cost, and the work cannot, therefore, be confined to the city.

Dr. F. P. McNulty, who was present, expressed the opinion that the $2,500 would practically cover the expense. There would be $1,000 for the salary of a part-time medical officer and $1,200 for a full-time technician, with $300 for supplies. The city might have to pay something towards supplies, but they would not run much over this figure.

Ald. Denne pointed out that the salary of the nurse for the V.D. Clinic and the stenographer's salary would also be extra. This was answered by Dr. N. H. Sutton, district M.O.H., who stated that the city could not afford to let the V.D. work be abandoned. Other diseases are caused from this, but within a few years, if the clinic is continued, the danger will be eliminated.

Ald. Ackerman called attention to the number of health services being maintained by public funds, such as the Board of Education's doctor, nurse and dentist, the Peterborough Health Association's nurse, and the Well Babies' Clinic's nurse and doctor, and suggested combining all this work to save money and prevent overlapping. A full time M.O.H. could look after all this.

Ald. McIntyre stated that it seemed to him to be not a matter of cost but of necessity. The city could not afford to turn it down. By accepting the offer for a year it would have time to form a plan for a full time

Local Boys Win Drawing Honors

John Langley and Billy Coleman, the former of King George school, the latter of Central school, Peterborough, have won honorable mention for their efforts in the drawing contest, conducted recently by the Ontario Safety League. In this contest, pupils of the schools throughout the province contributed drawings on accidents, fires, accident prevention and fire prevention, there being prizes totalling $320.00 in cash. There were two classes, one for those twelve years and under and one for those thirteen to sixteen years, inclusive.

The judges for the contest were a committee appointed by the Ontario College of Art.

THE WEATHER

It looks at present as if we were to have a white Christmas. While the ground is but little frozen, there is an especially fine bottom for good sleighing should a little more snow come. Speaking of early winters, I met a gentleman a few days ago who mentioned that the winter of 1869 (56 years ago) began on Oct. 17, and continued until the late spring of 1870, and culminated in the memorable floods of that year. He said that he had only met one man who seemed to remember that October day. Just then another old timer came along and joined in the conversation. He said that he came to this district to reside on Oct. 19, 1869, and that he remembered he had been told there had been good sleighing for several days. He wondered if this were a sub-division of the polar regions. Old records show that they were right regarding the dates.—W. P.

JAIL SENTENCE FOR BEER SALE

Edward S. Howard Goes To Jail on Charge of Selling Liquor.

BOUGHT LARGE AMOUNTS.

Edward S. Howard of Armour Road was found guilty of selling liquor or keeping it for sale by His Worship Magistrate Langley this morning and was sentenced to the common jail for two months.

Provincial Constable N. F. Maker raided Howard's home on Saturday night and found four men sitting around a table with empty glasses in view. In searching the house he found 29 quarts of beer. Howard produced his permit which showed that from November 1 until December 14, or 44 days in all, 372 quarts of beer, 7 bottles of whiskey and 10 bottles of wine had been purchased by him.

Howard has been working on the construction of the pier at Wallace Point bridge, but since November 1, he said in his evidence, he had probably lost about three weeks time. His wages amounted to 50 cents an hour, which totaled about $30 a week. On an average he drank five or six bottles of beer a day, his wife one, and sometimes friends would drop in and he would give them a drink. He claimed he paid $14 a month rent for his house, it cost him $8.00 a week for food for his wife, his two children, and himself, and his fuel amounted to $5.00 for three weeks. Being rather thrifty he claimed he

Meeting of Anglican Bishops To Decide Future Policy Towards Revised Book

LONDON, Dec. 20 (A.P.).—The future policy of the Church of England toward the revised Prayer Book is being decided at a meeting of Bishops at Lambeth Palace, official residence of the Archbishop of Canterbury, which opened yesterday. The meeting is expected to last three days. The deliberations are private and no official statement is looked for before Wednesday or Thursday.

In political circles, there is a movement which is gaining strength in favor of presenting the Prayer Book measure again to the House of Commons next session after formally passing it through the convocations of the Dioceses of Canterbury and York for that purpose. It is argued by those favoring this course that the one day allowed for debate was insufficient, and that members of the House, which defeated the measure last Thursday, had been unduly influenced by the intensive campaign conducted for and against the movement. Proponents of this course also argue that the small majority against the revised book was composed largely of Scotch, Welsh and Irish members, having an interest in the English Church. They insist that if the bill is re-submitted in a calmer atmosphere it will have a far different fate,

LARGE REWARD OFFERED FOR CHILD SLAYER

REACH $100,000.

Son of Los Angeles Dentist Held by the Police as Suspect.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., December 20 (Canadian Press). — Discovery of a mystery house, believed to have been the scene of the killing of 12-year-old Marian Parker, the finding of the motor car used in transporting parts of her mutilated body and the arrest of several suspects, including a woman, were the tangible results yesterday of an intensive hunt for the kidnapper and slayer of the schoolgirl.

A raid by the police early yesterday on a two-storey house in the same block where the kidnapper delivered the child's head and torso to her father, Perry M. Parker, bank official, on Saturday night, in exchange for a ransom of $1,500, disclosed evidence that the girl had been put to death there and her body dismembered.

Mrs. Lillian Padley, 23, was arrested at the address after police had been told a woman was seen running up and down the street yelling: "I didn't kill her. I didn't kill her. They did it."

William Long was found in the house in an intoxicated condition, but was released after questioning.

Within the house, police discovered towels that appeared to be blood-stained, and dark stains on a carpet. Several razor blades were found and on the wall was a picture of Judas Iscariot, who was mentioned in some of the letters sent by the kidnappers to Marian's father.

Acquainted With Child.

Earl Smith, 22, son of a dentist, who was acquainted with Marian and had been forbidden to see her by her parents, was one of the men suspects held. Another man was Gaylord Barnaman, 24, who was placed under arrest after he had telephoned to radio stations reporting himself as the kidnapper ,and inquired about reward money.

Investigators were inclined to believe that Barnaman was a "crank" and that he had no connection with the killing.

The automobile, a coupe, found in a parking lot near where the mysterious killer delivered the child's body to her father, was stolen on November 7 from Dr. Herbert L. Mantz, of Kansas City, at the point of a pistol. On December 6, license plates were stolen from a coupe in San Diego. The automobile reappeared in Los Angeles at noon last Thursday in front of the Mount Vernon Junior High School, from which its pilot drove away with Marian Parker—kidnapped.

The same car bore the little girl's remains last Saturday night to a rendezvous on South Manhattan Place with her father ,and from it the killer threw the child's body into the street after receiving the $1,500.

The car fell into the hands of the police when investigators located it in the parking lot.

Add to Reward.

A reward of $100,000 for the fiend who murdered the "tomboy" of the Mount Vernon High School seemed probable as persons in all parts of the State, including members of the Hollywood movie colony, pledged subscriptions. The city of Los Angeles voted to add $10,000 to the steadily mounting reward, and the

New Clue Is Found In Brutal Killing

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Dec. 20.— (A.P.)— A new clue which police believed the most promising of any uncovered in the search for the murderer of 12 year old Marian Parker in Los Angeles was the spur of renewed hopes and hunting late yesterday both in this suburb and the metropolitan area.

The clue was based on information given by a man here, whose name was withheld, who said he had been caretaker of a young man whose description very closely fitted that of the kidnapper fiend

The suspect, the caretaker told the police, recently escaped from a sanitarium where he had been lodged for mistreatment of young girls.

BUILDING SERVED MANY PURPOSES

Bullock's Garage Had Been Store, Hotel and Town Hall.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 20.—An old landmark passed with the burning of Bullock's garage more than a week ago. It was built about 1870 and was originally intended and used as a furniture store by Mr. Harry Goheen. After a few years he sold the building and it was converted into a hotel and occupied as such for more than thirty years. It was known as the Midland House and its last proprietor as a hotel was the late W. J. Leahy who ran it for years.

Following the burning of the Town Hall in 1918 the village rented the building, using the north lower floor as a reading room, public library and council chamber and the south side as a fire hall for such equipment as was purchased for immediate use.

Later Mr. Roland Bullock purchased the property and opened a garage business there renting the remainder of the building for various purposes.

OLD MASTERS

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth,
Pressed by these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth
Painting thy o tward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men;
And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

NATIVES FLEE CANTON CITY; MANY KILLED

Fear Execution as Communists, Seek Safety in Hong Kong.

PROPERTY DESTROYED.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—Nationalist efforts to purge their territory of Bolshevism and its agents appear to have been followed by a reign of terror, taking the form of wholesale evictions, executions and migrations.

While some tales of horror and brutality emanating chiefly from Canton, the centre of anti-Red activities, may be exaggerated, there seems to be little doubt that extremely violent methods used to rush Bolshevism and expel its opponents have reacted on the peacable Chinese population. Natives in the affected districts, fearing to be confounded with those suspected of Bolshevist leanings, are seeking asylum by the thousands in Hong Kong.

News of the execution in one group of 600 Chinese suspected of being Communists came from Canton yesterday. The Soviet Vice-Consul was reported to be among those executed.

The danger of the situation is heightened by reports that Li Chai-Sum, who was ousted from the dictatorship of Canton in November 17, is at Swatow trying to prepare an expedition to regain control of the city.

People in Panic

Apprehensions of renewed fighting have thrown the population nearly into a panic. Wealthy Chinese are transferring their valuables to the foreign concession, Shameen Island.

A Chinese relief delegation returning to Hong Kong after a visit to Canton reported that over 2,000 houses were destroyed by fire and that there were 3,000 casualties in connection with the disorders of a week ago, when the Bolshevists seized the city and lost it to the Nationalists a day or so later.

CHURCH SOCIETIES CLOSE YEAR'S WORK

BETHANY, Dec. 20.—The Christmas meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church was held at the parsonage on Tuesday evening. Miss Ada Richardson presided. The program consisted of several Christmas hymns, a reading by Mrs. Monk, "The First Christmas," followed by the reading of the 2nd chapter of Luke by Mrs. T. Jackson. A season of prayer followed.

As this was also the annual election of officers, the program had to be curtailed and Miss Richardson declared all offices vacanted and called upon the Rev. A. Poulter to take this part of the meeting which he did. He also made a short address, saying how pleased he was that the society was able to meet its allocation, as it was always a great help to any minister when the different organizations measured up to the standard set. The election proceeded by ballot, and the officers for 1928 are as follows:

President—Miss Ada Richardson.
Vice-President—Mrs. T. Jackson.
Secretary—Mrs. A. H. Monk.
Treasurer—Mrs. William Lee.
Pianist—Mrs. A. Poulter.
Superintendent of Christian Stewardship and Mite Boxes—Miss Lily Weatherilt.
Superintendent of the Watch Tower Heralds—Mrs. Jackson.
Superintendent of the Young Ladies' Mission Circle—Mrs. Poulter.

At the close of the meeting, Mrs. Poulter served a dainty lunch, and a social half hour was enjoyed by listening to music over the radio.

Y. P. L. Meets.

The weekly meeting of the young People's League was held on Wednesday evening with an attendance of thirty.

Mr. Bert Monk presided for the opening and devotional period. Miss Verna Belle Lee then took charge of the program which was of a missionary character. Mr. Edward Walsh gave a reading and Miss Helen Byers sang a solo. The topic "What the Young People's League Can do for Missions" was given by Mrs. A. Monk.

A word contest in charge of Mr. Poulter brought a very interesting meeting to a close.

Church Year Closes.

The closing of the United Church year coming the last of December has made the Christmas season a very busy one for the members of the United Church.

On Friday after noon the Ladies' Aid met at the parsonage. The meeting was strictly for business. Reports from the treasurer were encouraging, showing that all bills had been paid with a small balance in the treasury.

After a motion had been made for the secretary to write cards of Christmas greetings to the sick and shut in members of the society, the business of re-election of officers for the coming year followed. The Rev. A. Poulter took charge of this and the election proceeded by ballot without nominations, the result being as follows:

President—Mrs. A. Poulter.
1st Vice-President—Mrs. F. C. Dawe
Secretary—Mrs. J. Jones.
Treasurer—Miss Ella Jackson.
Pianist—Mrs. Bertrand Monk.
Flower Committee—Mrs. S. Arnott, Mrs. A. Monk.

The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. William Lee.

On Sunday afternoon the United Sunday school held its quarterly missionary program under the leadership of Mrs. Otto Spencer. Mrs. Spencer chose India for study and some very interesting facts were learned about this new field of missionary work, new to the former Methodists, as India came through the uniting of churches several years ago.

Mrs. Spencer pointed out that while Canada was celebrating its Jubilee as a country, India was also celebrating its Jubilee in missions.

Confident That Canadian Cattle Trade With United Kingdom Will Be Revived

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—Confidence that the Canadian cattle trade with the United Kingdom would be revived in spite of the recent diversion of Canadian cattle export to the United States, was expressed here yesterday by Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture in the Federal Cabinet.

Mr. Motherwell and Mrs. Motherwell are on their way to their farm at Abernethy, Sask., to spend Christmas with their family.

Although some uneasiness had been expressed that Canada's place on the British cattle market might be usurped by others, while Canadian farmers were making money on the trade in the United States on account of the shortage there and the consequent high prices, Mr. Motherwell declared that importers in the United Kingdom, with whom he had been in communication, were still confident of reviving the trade.

"Before satisfactory trade can be established, one or two things or both, must happen—freight rates can be cheaper, or the farmer must be willing to ship smaller and less finished cattle," the Minister of Agriculture concluded.

COLD WAVE SWEEPS EUROPE

HEAVY SNOWFALL.

PARIS, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—A cold wave extending from London to Rome and beyond brought unaccustomed snow yesterday to Southern Europe.

Nice, Cannes, Monte Carlo and even Naples were overspread with a white blanket. The Riviera, jealous of its reputation as the land of perpetual Summer, tried to conceal the news, but it leaked out.

An inch of snow covered the Forum and Constantine's Monument, as well as other ancient monuments in fields in the vicinity of Rome. Newspapers printed photographs of the snow scenes as a novelty. The white flakes fell in Naples for several hours Saturday and a heavy fall was reported in the Italian mountains.

Cannes had three inches of snow yesterday and other towns along the French Mediterranean coast were seeing it for the first time within the recollection of inhabitants.

Further north, Jack Frost rode a wind from the northwest, bringing the temperature as low as zero in some parts of sunny France. The weather is regarded as the most severe in fifteen years.

The mercury hovered around 10 above here. The poor of the French capital flocked to such warm places as the National Library, crowding the corridors and making distribution of books difficult. The city's sporting population is grumbling because, while it has all the inconveniences of a hard freeze, the lakes in the Bois de Boulogne are slow to gather enough ice to make skating safe. A few of the adventuresome, however, began negotiating the shallow pools at Versailles on skates.

Deaths Reported

Several deaths of elderly persons have been reported. The French in general accept the unaccustomed cold cheerfully, regarding it as healthy.

Early relief is forecast, qualified by the prediction that the cold snap will be followed by a heavy snowfall, which is all the same to Paris as it is not well equipped to deal with either.

The British Isles are undergoing one of the frostiest spells in decades, with the temperatures in London six above zero, the oldest record in the metropolis for 32 years. A forecast of snow has given England a prospect of a white Christmas.

GREAT LAKES TUG DESTROYED BY FIRE

Believed Blaze Was Caused By Explosion of Coal Gas.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—It became known yesterday that the Tug Nama, owned by James H. Simpson, of Elizabethtown, which had gone into winter quarters in a bay to the west of Hillcrest after having been employed in the towing of sand barges during the season, was burned almost to the water's edge on the night of Thursday last, as a result, it is believed, of an explosion of coal gas. The super-structure of the tug was gutted and even the interior of the hull was badly damaged. The superstructure of a scow moored alongside the tug was also damaged.

When the Nama was laid up a few coals were left in the fire for the purpose of drying the boiler. At the same time a cap was placed on the funnel. It is believed that an explosion of coal gas which resulted caused the tug to take fire and to be badly damaged.

The Nama was built at Montreal in 1887 and rebuilt here in 1919. She was 58 feet long, had a breadth of ten feet, three inches, had a depth of five feet three inches, a gross tonnage of 40 and a registered tonnage of 21. Her port of registry was Brockville.

The first use of an antiseptic in surgery was in May, 1886, when Lord Lister used German creosote, crude form of carbolic acid, in treating a patient.

WOULD LIKE QUIET VISIT

Lindbergh and Mother Would Have Entertainments Suspended During Stay.

AT MEXICO CITY.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press)—If Colonel Lindbergh and his mother can have their way, their Christmas in Mexico will be a quiet home affair at the Embassy residence with formal and official entertainments suspended.

Ambassador and Mrs. Morrow are entirely sympathetic with this plan and are desirous of conforming with it if possible.

Mrs. Lindbergh will be considered a private visitor, although her son is the official guest of Mexico. Nevertheless Ambassador and Mrs. Morrow apparently are going to have much difficulty in preventing their guests from being swamped with attentions because various Mexican women's organizations, government officials, Mexican organization of various kinds and foreign groups already are planning to shower attentions upon her.

Mrs. Lindbergh can beguile an hour or so looking over the hundreds of gifts sent to the Embassy for her son. They include several "charro" suits, or costumes worn by Mexican ranchers and horsemen. These consist of skin-tight trousers embroidered down the outside seams, short tight jackets handsomely ornamented in silver and gold, great wide-brimmed sombreros heavy with gold or silver trimmings, big Mexican spurs, many beautiful serapes or natives shawls, brilliantly colored native sashes, gold medals made by local jewelers as a souvenir of the flight, walking sticks and innumerable other articles.

CANADIAN LEGION HAS GOOD REPORT

Improvements to Building Expected to be Paid for Before End of Year.

At a general meeting of the Canadian Legion last night an encouraging report was presented by Comrade Crowe of the Building Committee, indicating that before the end of the year full payment will be made of all the recent remodelling expenses.

It was also reported that through activity of the Legion, in co-operation with the Postoffice authorities, sixteen veterans have been given temporary employment during the Christmas mailing rush.

Commander J. Abraham, who presided, announced that the next regular meeting will be held on January 16, when there will be a social evening and concert, to which all members are invited. On December 21, the entire Legion building will be reserved for the use of those attending the big dance.

VALUES COMPARED.

Hundreds of thousands of American magazines are sold to Canadian homes each month. The average cost is 2b cents per copy, or three dollars a year. Compare that with a worthwhile Canadian publication, combining a weekly newspaper covering the world's news, a family magazine with which few, if any, of the 25 cent monthly magazines can compare in supplying every member of the family, old and young, with the very purest and cleanest literature, short and serial stories, and hundreds of other features that interest every member fo the family, and an agricultural journal vastly superior to any purely agricultural papers in this country. All these three are included in one big 72 page paper, and sent every week, instead of monthly, to the reader, at the small cost of one dollar a year for the 52 issues, instead of three dollars for twelve. The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal is the publication referred to, the greatest dollar's worth on the Continent. Why not patronize home industry?

A gas company says that 1000 cubic feet of gas will cook 18 meals for six persons, heat shaving water for 1000 days, light two cigars a day for 500 years, bake 1700 three-quarter pound loaves of bread, boil 275 gallons of water, broil 7 3-pound steaks and barbecue ham for 1750 sandwiches.

Arbor Day was started by ex-Governor J. S. Morton of Nebraska. The first was celebrated in 1872.

Keene Ladies L.O.B.A. held a special meeting on Thursday evening. The newly elected officers in the chair.

After the regular routine of business had been gone through the members were given a Christmas treat.

LARGE REWARD OFFERED FOR CHILD SLAYER

REACH $100,000.

Son of Los Angeles Dentist Held by the Police as Suspect.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., December 20 (Canadian Press). — Discovery of a mystery house, believed to have been the scene of the killing of 12-year-old Marian Parker, the finding of the motor car used in transporting parts of her mutilated body and the arrest of several suspects, including a woman, were the tangible results yesterday of an intensive hunt for the kidnapper and slayer of the schoolgirl.

A raid by the police early yesterday on a two-storey house in the same block where the kidnapper delivered the child's head and torso to her father, Perry M. Parker, bank official, on Saturday night, in exchange for a ransom of $1,500, disclosed evidence that the girl had been put to death there and her body dismembered.

Mrs. Lillian Padley, 23, was arrested at the address after police had been told a woman was seen running up and down the street yelling: "I didn't kill her. I didn't kill her. They did it."

William Long was found in the house in an intoxicated condition, but was released after questioning.

Within the house, police discovered towels that appeared to be blood-stained, and dark stains on a carpet. Several razor blades were found and on the wall was a picture of Judas Iscariot, who was mentioned in some of the letters sent by the kidnappers to Marian's father.

Acquainted With Child.

Earl Smith, 22, son of a dentist, who was acquainted with Marian and had been forbidden to see her by her parents, was one of the men suspects held. Another man was Gaylord Barnaman, 24, who was placed under arrest after he had telephoned to radio stations reporting himself as the kidnapper and inquired about reward money.

Investigators were inclined to believe that Barnaman was a "crank" and that he had no connection with the killing.

The automobile, a coupe, found in a parking lot near where the mysterious killer delivered the child's body to her father, was stolen on November 7 from Dr. Herbert L. Mantz, of Kansas City, at the point of a pistol. On December 6, license plates were stolen from a coupe in San Diego. The automobile reappeared in Los Angeles at noon last Thursday in front of the Mount Vernon Junior High School, from which its pilot drove away with Marian Parker—kidnapped.

The same car bore the little girl's remains last Saturday night to a rendezvous on South Manhattan Place with her father and from it the killer threw the child's body into the street after receiving the $1,800.

The car fell into the hands of the police when investigators located it in the parking lot.

Add to Reward.

A reward of $100,000 for the fiend who murdered the "tomboy" of the Mount Vernon High School seemed probable as persons in all parts of the State, including members of the Hollywood movie colony, pledged subscriptions. The city of Los Angeles voted to add $10,000 to the steadily mounting reward, and the

New Clue Is Found In Brutal Killing

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Dec. 20.— (A.P.)— A new clue which police believed the most promising of any uncovered in the search for the murderer of 12 year old Marian Parker in Los Angeles was the spur of renewed hopes and hunting late yesterday both in this suburb and the metropolitan area.

The clue was based on information given by a man here, whose name was withheld, who said he had been caretaker of a young man whose description very closely fitted that of the kidnapper fiend

The suspect, the caretaker told the police, recently escaped from a sanitarium where he had been lodged for mistreatment of young girls.

BUILDING SERVED MANY PURPOSES

Bullock's Garage Had Been Store, Hotel and Town Hall.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 20.—An old landmark passed with the burning of Bullock's garage more than a week ago. It was built about 1870 and was originally intended and used as a furniture store by Mr. Harry Goheen. After a few years he sold the building and it was converted into a hotel and occupied as such for more than thirty years. It was known as the Midland House and its last proprietor as a hotel was the late W. J. Leahy who ran it for years.

Following the burning of the Town Hall in 1918 the village rented the building, using the north lower floor as a reading room, public library and council chamber and the south side as a fire hall for such equipment as was purchased for immediate use.

Later Mr. Roland Bullock purchased the property and opened a garage business there renting the remainder of the building for various purposes.

OLD MASTERS

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth,
Pressed by these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men;
And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

NATIVES FLEE CANTON CITY; MANY KILLED

Fear Execution as Communists, Seek Safety in Hong Kong.

PROPERTY DESTROYED.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—Nationalist efforts to purge their territory of Bolshevism and its agents appear to have been followed by a reign of terror, taking the form of wholesale evictions, executions and migrations.

While some tales of horror and brutality emanating chiefly from Canton, the centre of anti-Red activities, may be exaggerated, there seems to be little doubt that extremely violent methods used to rush Bolshevism and expel its opponents have reacted on the peacable Chinese population. Natives in the affected districts, fearing to be confounded with those suspected of Bolshevist leanings, are seeking asylum by the thousands in Hong Kong.

News of the execution in one group of 600 Chinese suspected of being Communists came from Canton yesterday. The Soviet Vice-Consul was reported to be among those executed.

The danger of the situation is heightened by reports that Li Chai-Sum, who was ousted from the dictatorship of Canton in November 17, is at Swatow trying to prepare an expedition to regain control of the city.

People in Panic

Apprehensions of renewed fighting have thrown the population nearly into a panic. Wealthy Chinese are transferring their valuables to the foreign concession, Shameen Island.

A Chinese relief delegation returning to Hong Kong after a visit to Canton reported that over 2,000 houses were destroyed by fire and that there were 3,000 casualties in connection with the disorders of a week ago, when the Bolshevists seized the city and lost it to the Nationalists a day or so later.

CHURCH SOCIETIES CLOSE YEAR'S WORK

BETHANY, Dec. 20.—The Christmas meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church was held at the parsonage on Tuesday evening. Miss Ada Richardson presided. The program consisted of several Christmas hymns, a reading by Mrs. Monk, "The First Christmas," followed by the reading of the 2nd chapter of Luke by Mrs. T. Jackson. A season of prayer followed.

As this was also the annual election of officers, the program had to be curtailed and Miss Richardson declared all offices vacanted and called upon the Rev. A. Poulter to take this part of the meeting which he did. He also made a short address, saying how pleased he was that the society was able to meet its allocation, as it was always a great help to any minister when the different organizations measured up to the standard set. The election proceeded by ballot, and the officers for 1928 are as follows:

President—Miss Ada Richardson.
Vice-President—Mrs. T. Jackson.
Secretary—Mrs. A. H. Monk.
Treasurer—Mrs. William Lee.
Pianist—Mrs. A. Poulter.
Superintendent of Christian Stewardship and Mite Boxes—Miss Lily Weatherilt.
Superintendent of the Watch Tower Heralds—Mrs. Jackson.

Arbor Day was started by ex-Governor J. S. Morton of Nebraska. The first was celebrated in 1872.

Although their core is actually made of graphite, lead pencils are so called because metallic lead was used in them as late as the nineteenth century.

The local Ladies' Lodge of the L.O.B.A. No. 480 held their annual meeting and election of officers for the coming year, on December 1st. After opening the Lodge in the usual form, Worshipful Mistress E. McLachlan thanked the ladies for their splendid support during her two years of office and expressed a sincere wish that they would continue to be as successful under their new officers, which they were to elect. Brother Gratten was asked to take the chair and conduct the election of officers. The result of the election was as follows:

Keene Ladies L.O.B.A. held a special meeting on Thursday evening. The newly elected officers in the chair.

After the regular routine of business had been gone through the members were given a Christmas treat.

The room was beautifully decorated for the occasion, by W.M.S. Sister Thompson and Sister Richardson. In one corner of the room was located a handsome Christmas tree, gaily decked with tinsel, cards, and presents, under the charge of Earl Kimball and Bro. Fred Bell.

Following the meeting the members were called to order and Bro. Gratten was asked to act as Santa Claus, and distrigute the gifts, each member receiving a nice remembrance. A jolly time was enjoyed by all, which was followed with refreshments. Miss Myrtle Frost, Worthy Mistress of Eastern Star L.O.B.A. of Peterboro, was present and helped to make the evening a most successful one.

OBITUARY

ROBERT NORTHEY.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 20.—The funeral of the late Robert Northey took place on Sunday afternoon from the residence of his son, Mr. Herbert Northey, Smith street, and was attended by a large number of friends and neighbors who gathered to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of one who was well known and respected in the entire community.

Rev. W. S. Edgar of Gilmour Memorial Church officiated and spoke words of hope and comfort to the mourners and also paid a tribute to the sterling character of the deceased gentleman who left the world the poorer by his passing. The pall bearers were the six sons of Mr. Northey, who bore their father's remains to its last resting place in Lakefield cemetery.

Mr. Robert Northey was born in Smith township eighty years and seven months ago, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Northey, and nearly sixty years ago he went to the 16th Concession of Smith where he took up land in what was then the virgin forest with no fences and few settlers. Mr. Northey had years of real pioneer life on his farm, which by patient endeavor and hard work, he cleared and made productive. He was married to Eliza Jane Nicholls, also of Smith, who pre-deceased him about twelve years ago. For the last few years he has been connected with the Lakefield Baptist church.

LARGE REWARD

State added $1,000, the limit for a single reward under state laws.

Those whose interest in the case surmounted their financial ability auctioned off pet dogs, canaries — anything available—in order to swell the fund.

The formality of a coroner's inquest was gone through with, but the father and mother were spared the ordeal of testifying. The only ones to testify were Dr. A. F. Wagner, county autopsy surgeon, and Mrs. Mary Holt, school attendance supervisor, who permitted Marian to accompany the kidnapper when he called at the school last Thursday.

Dr. Wagner, who lives next door to the Parkers and often talked to Marian and gave her candy, fought back tears while he described the broken body of the little girl.

"I believe she was killed Saturday," he said in a trembling voice, "but I am not certain. I don't know yet just what caused death. All I can say is that she was brutally murdered. She may have been strangled to death or she may have been poisoned. It may be that death came when the murderer cut her to pieces."

Suspected Nothing.

Mrs. Holt was asked if she suspected anything wrong when a man came to the school and asked that Marian accompany him to where the girl's father had been injured. "Oh, my, no," she answered. "If I had, I would never have allowed Marian to go."

She testified that the man said he "wanted Parker's daughter."

"Well, there are two of them," the witness said she told him. "He (the father) wants the younger one," she quoted the kidnapper.

He was permitted to take Marian, the smaller of the twins, when he told Mrs. Holt he worked in the bank with Parker, who was assistant cashier of the Los Angeles First National Trust and Savings Bank.

The jury's verdict was:

"We find the deceased, Marian Parker, came to her death by being brutally murdered by some person or persons unknown to this jury and the body dismembered with homicidal intent."

Posses Comb Countryside.

No let-up in the intensive manhunt which has gripped all Southern California was apparent last night. Thousands of detectives and deputized citizens continued the combing of the countryside and the slightest suspicious move on the part of any man was the signal for his detention.

Tips by the hundreds came into detective headquarters and almost always were found valueless. Swollen eyed detective lieutenants, who have not slept for days, assisted Chief Cline in directing the hordes of men working in all parts of the city and environs.

The city council heard an impassioned appeal by Councilman Carl I. Jacobson that the city executives lend a hand to police in its investigation. In a short speech, interrupted when his emotions overcame him, Jacobson intimated that "blundersome acts" were responsible for the girl's death. He appealed to the police commission.

At the Parker home on the West Side, the first great shock of the tragedy had passed and the mother and father slept for the first time since Wednesday night.

Cruel Joke.

A note threatening Marjorie, twin sister of Marian, was declared by handwriting experts to have a "cruel joke, presumably by a disordered mind," and not the work of the kidnapper. The threat was received at the Parker home after Marian's body had been recovered.

WOMAN HANGS HERSELF AFTER HOME BURNED

Young Toronto Mother Commits Suicide While Friends Are Absent.

VERY DESPONDENT.

Husband Was at Ruined House Considering Salvage Prospects.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—Despondent over an outbreak of fire that damaged her home Sunday night at 16 Macey Street, Scarboro Township, Mrs. May Boyd, aged 26, ended her life yesterday in the home of her sister, 69 Burgess Avenue. The woman strangled herself by fastening a rope around her neck and pulling it around a sofa she was lying on.

Crying Baby Arouses Neighbors.

Continual crying of her 8-months old baby whom she had left near her, aroused neighbors who tried to get into the house. Finding all doors locked, Robert Graves, 71 Burgess Avenue, raised an unfastened window. Climbing in he made his way to the kitchen where he found the woman's body. He released the rope that had choked the woman to death. Doors were then opened and neighbors hurried to summons police and a doctor.

It was about 5.20 o'clock when the house was entered and, from the condition of the body, a doctor told police life had been extinct several hours. Coroner H. W. Burgess investigated and after examining the rope and the body announced an inquest would not be held.

Home Damaged By Fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd, with their young baby, lived at 16 Macey Street. Sunday evening, fire broke out in a shed adjoining the rear of their frame home. The family escaped the flames, but their furniture, clothing and interior of the house were destroyed. Chief Love, of the Scarboro Fire Brigade, and his men responded to the call and it was due to their good work that the entire home was not razed to the ground.

Mr. Boyd left his wife and child at her sister's home on Burgess Avenue early yesterday and returned to their home to go over the house and see what could be salvaged. When left alone, the woman, who had been very nervous since the fire, took her life.

The first Christmas from Ben Hur was read by Jessie Schaffer. This being the last meeting of the year, much business was discussed. Mrs. Robert Hooten moved that the officers be re-installed. Mrs. Sid. Connel seconded the motion, which carried.

Will Need Officers For New Warships

WASHINGTON, D.C., December 20 (Canadian Press). — A total of 1,700 additional officers will be needed for the 71 new ships proposed in the Navy's $725,000,000 building program, Chairman Butler, of the House Naval Committee, said yesterday in endorsing a committee recommendation that each member of Congress be allowed five appointments to Annapolis Naval Academy instead of three.

This would provide for 3,276 appointments each year instead of 2,205 as at present. Butler also said he understood that the Navy planned to place five aeroplanes on each of the 25 cruisers of 10,000 tons proposed in the program. This compares with two carried by the 7,500 ton cruisers of the Memphis class.

CITY ACCEPTS MINISTER'S OFFER

officer. Ald. Cotton and Hancock favored this course, pointing out that action has to be taken at once. Ald. Macdonald added that as the city is accepting it as a matter of expediency, the Council should go on record as favoring a whole time medical officer of health. This can not be done this year but can be recommended to next year's Council.

Ald. Denne pointed out that an attempt at consolidation had been made two or three years ago but cold water had been thrown on it.

Survey Completed.

F. T. Webster, O.L.S., who was retained by the city some months ago to report on the division of cost of maintaining the Park Street drain. He brought in plans of the area drained, and also a report on the division which follows:

North Monaghan: 521.50 acres, or 73.9 per cent.

Smith: 18 acres, or 3 per cent.

Peterborough: 42.64 acres, or 20.2 per cent.

Suburban roads: 5 acres, or 0.8 per cent.

Provincial Highway: 7.50 acres, or 1.3 per cent.

Canadian Pacific Railway: 1.00 acres or 0.2 per cent.

Canadian National Railway: 3.56 acres, or 0.6 per cent.

Total—599.20 acres.

Mr. Webster pointed out that the percentages of cost had not been entirely based on the area drained, but that the city's share had been increased because of extra drainage from the De Laval plant.

Daylight Saving.

A by-law was carried, over the opposition of Ald. McIntyre, who felt that it was a waste of money, calling for the taking of the votes of the electors on the matter of daylight saving.

Ald. McIntyre moved that the committee rise, stating that the matter had been sent to the people twice and had been turned down, and would be defeated again.

Ald. Cotton remarked that other places had changed their minds in less time. He had not brought the matter in for personal reasons.

The mayor pointed out that the time had been shortened and that the people might favor it this time.

Ald. McIntyre asked for the yeas and nays on the second reading but was told this could not be done until the third reading. He did not call for the vote in that manner then. By-law 2752 covered the vote on daylight saving.

By-law 2753 amended by-law 2748, the by-law for the sewer connection to the Confederation School. The change calls for either party to give notice of wanting it cancelled instead of the city alone.

Ald. Phelan asked if the changes made permitted making the connection at night.

The aldermen were unanimous in favoring opening up the connection of the Monaghan school to see if it is properly made.

W. J. Welch appeared on behalf of the barbers asking for a change in the by-law, which calls for them to close at seven every evening this week except Saturday.

It was pointed out that this would have to be done by by-law and there is no time for this.

John Brownlee, the blind man, was granted a license for the sale of cigarettes free of charge.

Ald. Greene brought up the matter of the speed of the Border Transit Company buses, saying the one coming down Charlotte street travels at a dangerous speed. The Mayor will take up the matter with the Chief of Police. Ald. Stocker stated that the man who had a narrow escape from a collision with a train had been suspended next day.

Ald. Denne suggested that the Border Transit Comany be asked to get extra buses at once for the Christmas rush. He suggested an agreement with Cooney and Jopling.

Ald. Hancock moved that the license of Frank Marino for an eating house be suspended for three months, saying that warnings by the police had been of no effect and that complaints had been made that the place was very disorderly on Sundays.

On suggestion of Aldermen Greene and Phelan he changed his resolution to warn Mr. Marino that if the conditions complained of are not changed the license will be taken away.

The request of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association for the closing of Barnardo avenue for two nights a week for coasting was refused because it is not in the power of the council to grant.

Ald. Denne offered his resignation from the council in view of his candidacy for the Mayoralty. He suggested that Ald. McIntyre take his place as chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee.

The five percent bonds for the collegiate extension were sold yesterday afternoon by the Finance Committee. The successful tenderers were Matthews and Company of Toronto, who offered $104.24, which means that the city gets its money for less than four and three quarters per cent.

MEANS MUCH TO PETERBOROUGH.

Recent announcements by officials of the Department of Highways indicate that within a comparatively short time this city will be served by a net-work of good roads that will undoubtedly result in a greater volume of business for Peterborough's merchants and a marked increase in the number of tourists visiting here each year.

In the first place—and this, of course, is of immediate importance—is the inclusion of the Port Hope-Peterborough highway among the Provincial roads that are to be kept open the year round.

The announcement that the new Provincial highway from Sarnia to Ottawa, which will cut some 100 miles off the present route between these cities and provide a much needed trunk road to parallel the Kingston highway, will pass through Peterborough is also of great interest.

The construction of such a road will mean a great deal to this city, and if it be followed by the extension of the Port Hope-Peterborough highway through the Kawartha Lakes district and north to Muskoka, Peterborough's position as a tourist centre will be materially advanced.

Motor tourists follow the good roads, and these additional links would provide this city with an admirable highway system branching out in all directions.

COURTESY PAYS.

The Department of National Revenue has received a letter from Leon Frazer, Secretary of the Ontario Tourist Association, conveying "an expression of appreciation of the courteous treatment accorded by the department's officials at ports of entry to the many thousands of visitors with whom they come into personal contact."

So much depends upon this point that it is gratifying indeed to note the fact that the conduct of customs officials was so as to elicit such a grateful letter from the organization encharged with the task of increasing Ontario's tourist traffic.

The store, the hotel, the Province, the country that offers its patrons and visitors these things is certain of making a favourable impression and ensuring return visits.

Our tourists from over the border like to feel that they are among friends when they come to visit us; they appreciate a warm welcome and courteous treatment.

And naturally much depends upon the manner in which they are received by those who, like the customs officials, come closely into contact with the visitors.

"LINDY" AND COBHAM.

A correspondent referring to The Examiner's tribute to Colonel Lindbergh on the completion of his flight to Mexico points out that we were doing an injustice to Sir Alan Cobham the great British flying man, in describing "Lindy" as the ace of flyers.

Certainly The Examiner had no desire to slight Sir Alan whose wonderful feats of aviation have been admiringly commented upon in these columns—in fact, only recently we declared that in his present air trip around Africa Cobham was making one of the most important contributions yet made to the development of aerial navigation.

His flights to India and return and his round trip to Australia stamp the British crack as outstanding in the realm of aviation.

We would have been safer perhaps if in our reference to Lindbergh we had described him as the ace of lone flyers, for after all it was because he was unaccompanied in his great flight across the Atlantic that made his feat one that seized upon the imagination of the world.

The pilot of the Spirit of St. Louis "rides alone," and is a world figure because of that fact.

Whether or not he is a greater flyer than Sir Alan Cobham will have to be decided by the experts; there is glory enough, however, for both, and both have won lasting fame by exploits that mark them as the two most wonderful pilots the conquest of the air has yet produced.

And from what we can read of the two men they would be the last to desire a controversy as to which is the most expert.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

In the month of November there were 6,175 accidents reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board, including 46 fatalities. In the previous month of October there were 6,686 accidents, including 31 fatalities. The figures for the eleven months of 1927 were 66,324, this being 408 more than the total number for the year 1926. From this it would appear that the year 1927 will stand out in the history of thirteen years of workmen's compensation in Ontario as the high point in accident experience, as there is every indication that the total number of accidents for 1927 will run close to 72,000, and in no former year has the figures reached 70,000. It is fairly evident that the total benefits awarded by the Workmen's Compensation Board in 1927 will run in excess of six million dollars.

Commenting on these figures, R. B. Morley, General Manager, Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, says that his office receives from the Workmen's Compensation Board reports covering all accidents which involve a loss of seven days' time or more in the fifteen classes of industry represented in the Associations. In 1925 the Associations received a total of 12,369 reports of seven-day accidents from the Compensation Board, and in 1926 there were 13,707 received. The calculation for the first eleven months of 1927 show 13,205 such reports. This will mean that the total number for 1927 will be very little in excess of 1926, and when the increase in employment this year is allowed for, the Associations can lay claim to an actual decrease in the accident reports in their classes of industry.

The Chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board has made the statement that the general accident experience of those classes of industry organized for accident prevention in Ontario under the authority of the Compensation Act, is better than that of the classes that are not so organized.

Mr. Morley returned last week from Europe where he attended meetings of the Safety Sub-Committee of the International Labour Office at Geneva, Switzerland. He reports that there were also delegates present from Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Finland, and that the work of the committee consisted almost entirely of preparing material to be submitted at the 1928 conference of the International Labour Organization. The fact that industrial accident prevention has become of sufficient importance to be considered by representatives of the fifty-five countries comprising the League of Nations, next year, is an indication that safety work will be caried on much more generally throughout the world.

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK IN BRITAIN.

With the normal growth of population and with rising standards of living in most parts of the world, it is natural to anticipate an annual growth in the volume of production of all important industries, and a corresponding increase in the volume of world trade. Within the past two years, most European countries have made good the actual losses in volume of manufacturing and commerce due to the war, and for 1927, in many cases, a slightly favorable comparison may be made between present levels and those which existed in 1913. From this viewpoint, the analysis of the production figures of the basic industries of Great Britain is disappointing. It is doubtful whether coal mining, the manufacture of iron and steel, and shipbuilding have yet attained a volume 90 per cent. as large as that of 1913, and the tonnage of foreign commerce is not more than 60 percent. as large as before the war. Recovery in Great Britain has been more seriously retarded than in any other important country.

The coal industry is still suffering from the fact that the stoppage in British production in 1926 stimulated production in continental countries and the recapture of many foreign markets can only be accomplished at the cost of substantial price concessions. It is doubtful whether the reorganization in the mines has been sufficiently drastic to put them in a competitive position in the international market. The demand for coal for shipping has failed to increase, because of the tendency to equip ships with oil burners. In the first and second quarters of 1927, the iron and steel industry experienced a temporary stimulation due to orders which had accumulated during the strike, but recent statistics seem to indicate that production is again dropping to a level only about four-fifths as high as that in 1913. Since the iron and steel industry is also going through a detain upon shipping and commerce, situation may not be more than temporary. Recent reports indicate that amalgamations are being made with a view to securing greater efficiency in this industry. Undoubtedly, this is a step in the right direction and a principle which could be applied advantageously in a number of British industries. The world depression in shipping has substantially reduced demand for ships, and until there is a marked increase in commerce, no great revival is to be anticipated. For a country as dependent as Great Britain upon shipping and commerce, the erection of new tariff barriers and the slow recovery of world commerce has created an especially difficult situation. Yet neither in Great Britain nor in other modern countries do the statistics of the old basic industries tell the full story. Internal trade is increasing much more rapidly than external trade. New industries are gaining headway. The production of automobiles, radios and artificial silk is not included in the old production indices. While there is no immediate remedy in sight for the unemployment in Great Britain, the initiative and virility of the nation is too strong for undue pessimism as to the ultimate outcome.—St. Catharines Standard.

WHERE CANADA LED THE WAY.

With the absorption of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment by the Department of Health, a word regarding Canada's work for ex-service men may not be out of place. In this task—the task of remembering in a practical way the men who fought for her, and of re-establishing them in civil life—Canada, it can be said without boasting, was more successful and more efficient than any other nation that took part in the Great War. The bonus paid to Canadian war veterans was the highest granted by any nation. Our soldier land settlement scheme has been, from the beginning, a fine success, good for returned men, and good for Canada. Our pensions are among the highest—if not the highest—in any of the allied countries. And, finally, the work of our Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment has been copied by nearly every other nation that had a part in the war.

The danger of all such work is that it leads to the creation of large bureaucratic departments. It has not done so in the re-establishment of ex-service men. When Major N. F. Parkinson, who is now retiring to private life, became Deputy Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment in 1920, the staff of the department numbered 8,000 persons. Later on, due to an amalgamation with the administrative work of the Board of Pension Commissioners, the number of the staff increased to 10,000. Today it is down to 1,900. Considering the tendency of all Government departments to grow, and having regard to the vast amount of work that the Soldiers' Re-establishment was called upon to do, this is a remarkable showing.

Major Parkinson, who now relinquishes the task that he has held for nearly eight years, deserves the thanks of the country. It is good to know that his retirement is not, as rumored, due to political machinations, but to the simple fact, as emphasized by his Minister, that by his capacity for reorganization and zeal for the public interest, he abolished his own job. Such devotion to the public good is rare; and it is to be hoped that in his return to private life Major Parkinson will have all the success which his ability deserves.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Imports of Canadian liquor into the United States is said to be on the increase. The Volstead Act does not seem to be killing thirst across the border.

Appointments to the Senate are very nice Christmas gifts, but unfortunately the supply is limited.

Citizens are reminded that Friday is nomination day. This important event runs the danger of being overlooked in the pressure of last-minute Christmas shopping.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, December 20. — With all needs for Christmas cattle filled, the abattoirs were doing very little business in the market yesterday morning. Trade was very slow, and prices for choice butcher and heavy steers were 50c lower than last week. The run was light, but there will evidently be enough for the rest of the week. Shippers are being advised to hold their cattle back until after Christmas.

Hogs steady at week-end decline of 25c.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, December 20 (Canadian Press). — The foreign demand for all grains was slow here yesterday. The trade on spot was also of a limited character and prices showed no change.

Prices for all grades of spring and winter wheat flour were firmly maintained under a small demand.

A fairly active business was done in all lines of millfeed, and the undertone was firm. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was moderately active and values were steady.

The feature of the egg trade was the weaker feeling that developed, and prices for fresh extras scored declines ranging from two to five cents per dozen. This was attributed to the more liberal supplies being imported from the United States and British Columbia.

In sympathy with the above and owing to the larger stocks of storage eggs held as compared with last year prices were reduced one cent per dozen. The trade was fair. The receipts were 662 cases.

The trade in potatoes was inactive but prices were steady. Sales of odd cars of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were made at $1.15 per bag of ninety pounds; Prince Edward Island white potatoes at $1.05 per bag of ninety pounds; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.00 per bag in bulk; and New Brunswick white potatoes at 95c per bag in bulk, ex-track.

On account of the increase in freight rates on imported beans spot prices have been advanced fifteen cents per bushel. The demand was steady. Sales of choice white handpicked in car lots on spot were made at $2.65 per bushel, ex-track, and smaller quantities ex-store sold at $2.75 per bushel ex-store.

The demand for butter was confined to small lots and the tone of the market was easy. The receipts were 24 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade and the feeling was easier. The receipts were 41 boxes.

WOULD FEED THE HUNGRY.

If I were Santa Claus and had money I would like to prepare a Christmas dinner such as would be served at the Empress Hotel, only serve it at my own home to one, and all, old and young that could not have a real Christmas dinner. That would be my gift to those who would be less fortunate than myself.

IF I WERE SANTA CLAUS.

I am of the opinion I would be called a "kill-joy" as there would be no Christmas trees.

In these days of reforestation I think it a shame to use the trees. Why not revert to the stocking? And show consideration for the generation to follow.

The Government should prohibit the exportation too. I understand millions of our trees are exported annually to the U.S.A.

Look after the needy, care for the suffering and give joy abundantly to all not forgetting the unborn.

THE ACE OF FLYERS.

The Editor, The Examiner:

Dear sir:

Your editorial of last evening relative to the prowess of that wonderful flyer, Col Lindbergh, is indeed interesting.

That "Lucky Lindy" is both a splendid flyer and a very modest gentleman, we will all agree, but when you state him to be the Ace of Flyers, then I feel tempted to draw your attention to the fact that there is a Britisher named Cobham, Sir Allan Cobham to quote his full name, who, in his London to Australia and return, and London to India and return flights, traversed over 44,000 miles, using the same engine for both trips.

If just these two trips of his are compared with Lindbergh's 35,000 miles (with one exception over land) then you will realize that the same quiet Britisher, still has it over "Lindy" by no less than 9,000 miles.

Then again, if you were to know the flying hours of these two wonderful flyers, then you would again hand the laurels to Sir Allan Cobham, and be convinced that the Ace of Flyers is a Britisher.

Thanking you for occupying so much of your valuable space.

Yours respectfully,
W. H. HOWARD.

THE POWER QUESTION

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir.—There is to be a contest for the Utilities Commission, as well as for Mayor and Aldermen in January.

Now is the time for our people to vote for the man who will notify the Ontario Government that the power question here and power prices, are not satisfactory by any means.

The delegation that went up to Toronto recently to interview the Government about it got no satisfaction.

So long as we have no power to offer manufacturers of our own as we did to the C.G.E. and Quaker Oats Co, but uncertain Hydro and Government owned power at high and increasing prices, Peterborough can go no farther It is now at a standstill, and that is the cause of it.

It was said in reply to this attack on Hydro for Central Ontario that the Gatineau power would soon be ready. So it is, but now it is announced that Gatineau power is all for Ottawa and Eastern Ontario.

The Government has taken our powers away and given us high-priced power and not enough of it in return.

West of Toronto the municipalities own the Niagara Power, and Hydro manages it for them, selling 100,000 h.p. to the U.S. annually.

In Central Ontario the municipalities gave up their power privileges and have nothing and are rapidly drying up for lack of common sense and opportunity.

If Hydro would step out of Central Ontario altogether we would boom in this district as formerly.

We are not doing so though Hydro has been here a long time and because in Central Ontario (not Western Ontario) Hydro is not meeitng the wants of this district.

Is that what you want?

A MATTER OF INTEREST

(By J. H. Burnham.)

A similarity of names has before this got people into strange mix-ups and Regulation 17 is no exception. The fact is that there are two "Regulation 17's". One is the mess the various governments of Ontario made of the French language in Separate schools and the other is Section 17 of the Alberta Act, two entirely different things, but both now before the public in all their glory.

Some years ago the Rt. Rev. Bishop Fallon, of London, notified Sir James Whitney that many "separate" schools where French people predominated had become French altogether, and that Irish Catholic children in those sections were compelled to learn to speak French and understand it as the language of instruction or go without teaching. The correspondence between Sir James and His Lordship was intended to be a quiet talk over the careless administration by the Ontario Governments of Separate school affairs. Sir James' Secretary gave it away to the press and then left for parts unknown. A matter that could have been settled amicably and quietly was now made public and aroused the wrath of all concerned. The French considered that the government intended to narrow their school and language rights. The Irish Catholics stood to their guns along with their allies (on this occasion) the Orangemen of Canada. In course of time a commission (that refuge of the destitute) was appointed, and after investigating some hundreds of these two-language schools where French was used to teach English for pupils whose mother and only tongue was French it condemned the whole system as a mass of neglect on the part of high-salaried government inspectors, and the Department. Sir James then proceeded to remedy matters by enacting Regulation 17, which said that French could be used to teach the children English in these French schools if it was not carried beyond the pupil's first year. This plan satisfied Bishop Fallon and the Orangemen. But it did not work. Another "commission" was appointed and it has just "found" after two years' work (and pay) that if it had not been for the anxiety of the French teachers to teach the children English as a necessity in this great English-speaking continent the children would not have learned English at all, as the Government's inspectors had again failed utterly to do their duty. This time the government is learning from the French, and is putting in a system of directors instead of inspectors who will report constantly how things are getting on. The plan of teaching English used by the French teachers is so fine that instead of complaining about it the government is adopting it in these schools. The truth is, the fault all along has lain with the different governments at Toronto, but now that Mr. Ferguson is minister of education we may expect an improvement. That is the state of the poll just now.

The other "17" is the clause put in "The Alberta Act" which created Alberta into a province. This section reserved Separate school lands. These were still to be in the hands of Ottawa. They are there still. The Ottawa and Alberta Governments had a lawsuit over this section recently, but Ottawa beat Alberta to it—and retains so long as it sees fit the Separate school endowment lands, etc., in its control. Why? It was done originally to protect the constitutional rights of these schools from irresponsible legislation. But Ottawa is getting uncomfortable and is seeking a way out of keeping Alberta in leading strings. There is a row in prospect all round the board if Alberta does not get what all the other provinces got, viz., its full powers under the B.N.A. Ottawa creates provinces when necessary, as in the past, but it cannot go beyond reason in the matter, and no doubt does not wish to. What is "reason?" That is the question. Ottawa must protect the whole country of Canada, which it represents and in this case as in all others, time will probably suggest the true course. Meanwhile, naturally enough, agitators are abroad and the "rights" of the province the subject of debate. It is customary for it to be said that troubles such as we have had over these schools in Ontario are due to "politics." That is not true. Any stick will do to beat a dog with. Incompetence was at the bottom of it. Politicians do not ride for a fall for the sake of "politics." The truth is good men and women are rare in public life, as in business, but there is also a strong feeling of jealousy or hatred of them in people sometimes who would rather have a man they feel above than have one they feel is above them. They'll "Show 'em" and they do—at their own cost.

A GOLDEN FRUIT

Last month, in my article about tomatoes, I referred to the fact that the Italians call the tomato the "Golden Apple." The orange is another golden fruit which is bringing rich returns in increasing the health of every one who uses this fruit, and also bringing good returns to the orange growers.

The use of oranges and orange juice has increased so rapidly in the last few years that during the season of 1925 and 1926 over one hundred million dollars poured into the State of California alone, for oranges and other citrus fruits. Besides the California production of citrus fruits, large quantities are raised in Arizona, the Mississippi Valley, and in Florida.

The first oranges raised on the North American Continent were those which were brought to Florida by the early Spanish settlers, while the first Navel oranges were planted in California in 1873.

The growth of the citrus industry in the United States is due to two principal factors; first, the efficient co-operative organization of the fruit growers and, second, the growing knowledge that oranges are a healthful fruit.

Only a few years ago oranges were considered a delicacy, to be used around the holidays, but now you see oranges and orange juice being served at the tables of every good restaurant, club, hotel and cafeteria.

On a recent lecture tour through the United States and Canada, I made a point of noting the number of diners who used oranges for their breakfast. On the Pullman diners and in the large hotels it would surprise many of you to know that at least seventy five out of a hundred used either oranges, orange juice, or grapefruit as a part of their regular breakfast. I know it will surprise you as it did me, even though I knew the use of orange juice was increasing rapidly. These figures I am giving you from my actual observation as I sat at breakfast and looked over the food at the other tables.

One morning at a medium priced cafeteria in an Eastern hotel I sat where I could watch the people passing along the counter and filling their trays. I counted the first one hundred who passed, and found by actual count that eighty-seven had some kind of citrus fruit on their trays. Of course, these figures would not hold true in the lower priced restaurants, because many people consider that orange juice is too expensive for those with small incomes.

The price of citrus fruit is not likely to change very much because of the cost of producing this valuable fruit. One who thinks he cannot afford orange juice in addition to other foods at a meal might be wise in actually making an entire meal of oranges or grapefruit, and leaving out the other foods.

In tomorrow's article I will explain more about the orange as a health food.

Questions and Answers.

Question: O. H. asks: "What shape of belt would be the best for one to wear with a floating kidney, and should it be worn through the night as well as through the day? Is taking half a wineglassful of brandy a day any harm to one with a floating kidney?"

Answer: I have attempted to raise floating kidneys through the pressure of belts, but have never been able to do so with any success. The X-ray examination will show that these belts do not actually raise the kidney or any other prolapsed organs, although sometimes the patient feels more comfortable when the belt is worn. Most people do not have any symptoms from a floating kidney, and the majority of patients examined are found to have at least one kidney lower than what is considered normal. A floating kidney would not be harmed by brandy any more than one in normal position. Whether or not the stimulation of brandy is good in your particular case depends upon many other things besides the position of your kidneys.

Question: Adelaide L. D. asks: "Is there any cure for "false" angina? And what exactly is it, and what causes it? It does not affect my breathing, and occurs between the shoulders and across and down left arm."

Answer: Any true or false angina is a sign of some interference withthe normal flow of blood from the heart, or due to some nerve derangement produced by inflammation of the nerves or pressure upon those going to the left arm. The so-called "false" angina can often be cured by one or two osteopathic or chiropractic treatments.

SEYMOUR CHEESE FACTORIES WIN PRIZES FOR BEST IN DISTRICT

Prince of Wales First, Menie Second, and Brae Fourth.

HOG PRICES LOW

Young Pigs Now Drug on Market—Grain Prices Going Up.

BURNBRAE, Dec. 20.—Factory annual meetings have been held almost every day during the last week among the various cheese company patrons of the East Seymour district. While returns in a financial way are usually in excess of the 1926 mark, the production of cheese is down considerably. Prince of Wales factory, owned by District Instructor John A. Murray and operated by David Wallace had a make of over 111,000 pounds, all being of first grade with a goodly percentage of specials. Mr. Wallace practically made a clean-up of the prizes offered by various organizations for the maker with the highest score in Central Ontario.

Menie Cheese and Butter Company, with a make of 128,000 pounds is about 30,000 behind last year. Frank Little is maker and in spite of some losses had a sufficiently high score to stand in second place in the Central Ontario competition, so that this district should feel proud of the fact that it has the two highest scoring factories in this large area covered. Two other local makers, Leslie Shillinglaw, Brae factory, and his father, James Shillinglaw, Kimberley factory, stood in fourth and fifth places respectively.

The Rylstone Cheese Company, with a make of over 200,000 pounds had the highest average price for butterfat, 46.70 cents, in addition to having a substantial balance from the whey cream branch, after paying for considerable new equipment.

Altogether, the past season has been a highly successful one for cheese factory patrons with a higher financial return than in former years from less milk due to the consistently high cheese prices. The factory cheques have been doubly welcome of late weeks to the farmers who have a large number of hogs on hand and no sign of any immediate advance in prices. Even the most expert feeders cannot show a clean sheet on hog feeding at the present $7.50 price, much less a profit. What few young pigs that are offered for sale are a drug on the market and prices as low as $1 each are being offered.

Grain prices, especially for oats, have advanced rapidly and farmers who are compelled to buy grain and mill feeds will have to do some careful figuring to make their books balance by the time spring comes.

FRAGMENTS OF FRANCE.

HAVELOCK, Dec. 20.—A crowded house greeted the four act sketch, "Fragments of France" which was put on by the Havelock veterans in the town hall on Thursday evening, December 15th. The soldier's life in the great war was very vividly depicted both behind the lines and in the trenches, and scenery especially painted for the occasion by Fred Platt, showing a sandbag barricade in front of the trenches and the enemy's line in the distance was a very helpful feature in giving the scenes a proper setting. The play was thoroughly enjoyed as it was something different from the usual line of entertainment. French songs were introduced throughout, and appropriate solos by James Diaper, who also took the part of the sentry in the second scene and Fred Platt were well rendered, as were also recitations by H. T. Mathison, J. Evans, and J. Falkner. As a fitting conclusion to the sketch, "The Eleventh Hour" was recited by Fred Bacchus, which described the feelings of the soldier to his pals who had passed to join the heavenly army. T. W. Quinn, as Captain Chamberland, was in command of the company with J. Evans as Sergeant Gruff. The role of Mademoiselle from Armentieres was well taken by Fred Platt in a very natural manner, the other members taking their parts equally well.

The evening's program was opened by two reels of moving pictures, showing scenes from the military camp at Cobourg, 1927, and the unveiling of the Brighton memorial by General Curry. "Behind The Front," a war picture in six reels was also shown. The Symphony Orchestra, under the able leadership of Mr. R. Bonny, furnished music, while the audience was gathering and between acts and the excellence of their performance was much appreciated. All songs throughout the play were accompanied by Miss O. Haig, who was presented with a box of chocolates by the Veterans in appreciation of the services which she so willingly rendered.

The proceeds amounted to about $150.00, and will go to repair the Memorial Gate at the Park. Should the Veterans decide to repeat the play in the near future, there is no doubt but that it would again be greeted with a capacity house.

The following is the cast of characters:

Mademoiselle from Armentieres—Fred Platt.
Captain Chamberlands—Barney Quinn
Captain Chamberland — Barney Quinn.
Sergt. Gruff—Jack Evans.
Orderly Corporal—Percy Yuill.
Pte. Trouble—Joe Falkner.
Crown and Anchor Bill—H. T. Mathison.
Shorty Sloan—Fred Bacchus.
"Just Diaper"—James Diaper.
More Trouble—Carman Coon and Danny Shorter.
Scene 1—Billets in England.
Scene 2—Sentry on duty behind lines in France.
Scene 3—Estaminet scene behind lines in France.
Scene 4—In trenches just before attack.

Uncle Wiggily

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S CHOCOLATE DROPS.

(Copyright, 1927, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggily was hiding in a hollow log, waiting for the Bushy Bear to go away. And the Bear still had his eyes shut and was chewing the last bit of sweetness from the end of the rabbit gentleman's candy cane, which he had bitten off. I told you that part in the story last night, if you will kindly remember.

"Oh, yum! yum!" gurgled the Bear. "That sugar cane is good! But a nice fat rabbit will be much better. I'll start on him now!"

But when the Bear opened his eyes, after swallowing the last crumbs of candy cane, Uncle Wiggily was nowhere to be seen. Of course, the Bear didn't know Mr. Longears was inside the hollow log.

"Why, my goodness! This is queer!" growled the old Bear. "I wonder if I am asleep, or dreaming? I can't see any rabbit, and yet Uncle Wiggily was here a moment ago. Can anything be the matter with my eyes?" He rubbed his eyes with his paws, to make certain they were all right.

"I can see snow and bushes and trees," growled the Bear, "so my eyes must be all right. But where did that rabbit go? Am I going to lose my nice, fat rabbit dinner after all? That candy was nice and sweet, but I want a rabbit. I WANT A RABBIT!" cried the Bear in a loud voice.

He looked all around, but of course, he couldn't see Uncle Wiggily, who was snugly hidden in the log.

The Bear sat down on the hollow log.

"Ha! Ha!" chuckled Mr. Longears to himself, hoping he wouldn't sneeze. "I fooled that Bear! Pretty soon he will waddle off on his big paws and I can come out and go on home with what is left of my candy cane. Maybe he's going now."

Very carefully Uncle Wiggily looked out one end of the log, but the Bear was still there, shuffling around in the snow. The Bear was growling to himself and the rabbit listened to what he said.

"I know what happened!" grumbled the shaggy chap. "Uncle Wiggily was so surprised to see me that, after he jammed that candy cane down my throat, and I bit off a piece, he just jumped up in the air like a balloon—that's what Uncle Wiggily did.

"But," chuckled the Bear to himself, "what goes up must come down, so I'll just sit on this log and wait for Uncle Wiggily to return. Then I'll have a fine dinner. Ah, what a fine dinner I'll have."

So the Bear sat down on the hollow log, half way between the two ends, and of course Uncle Wiggily could not crawl out from either hole and hop away without being seen.

"I'm in a sort of a pickle of a fix!" thought the rabbit gentleman, who was rather cramped inside the log. "I can't stay here much longer without sneezing, and if I ker-choo the Bear will know I'm here and he'll dig me out with his strong claws. I wonder what I can do? I might throw what is left of my candy cane as far out of the log as I could. The Bear might run to pick up the cane and then I could hop out and go home. I wonder if I could do that?"

But, after thinking about it, the rabbit decided that he could not throw the cane far enough so that the Bear would run a long enough distance away to give the rabbit a chance to slip out of the log.

"If I only had some smaller pieces of candy I could throw them a long way and when the Bear went to pick them up I might have a chance to slip way and when the Bear went to pick out," said Mr. Longears to himself.

Just then he noticed, inside the log near where he was hiding, a pile of what at first he thought were chocolate drops.

"Ha! Chocolate drops!" whispered the bunny to himself. "Here are a lot of chocolate drops! I can toss them out one end of the log and while the Bear is scrabbling after them I can crawl out the other end and run home to my wife and little bunnies. I'll do it!"

But when Uncle Wiggily started to pick up what he thought were chocolate drops in his paws, to throw them, he found they were only brown acorns. They did look very much like chocolate drops, but they were only acorns.

"Dear me! What a disappointment!" sighed the bunny. "If they had only been chocolate drops—but, ha! wait a minute! Maybe I can fool the Bear with the acorn chocolate drops. I'll try it!" Uncle Wiggily gathered up two paws full of the acorn and got ready to throw them.

WHEN A FELLER NEEDS A FRIEND

MARMORA, Dec. 20.—With a cast of ten in which the sexes were evenly divided, Hylton Coxwell's amateur artistes of Campbellford admirably presented, "When a Feller Needs a Friend" at Marmora Town Hall on Friday evening under the auspices of Marmora Community Band.

The heavy fall of snow throughout the day sufficed to limit the attendance, so that one of the best three-act farces ever seen here did not get the patronage which it merited.

Jack McEachron as Tom Denker, an artist and Jack McAvoy as Bob Mills, a magazine writer, played their parts exceedingly well and perfection may be writ in letters large of the acting of Miss Mona Hammond, B.A., as Mrs. Reese, their landlady.

Jerry Smith, just returned from over there, was the character supplying perhaps the most comedy and Earl Stevens, B.A., to whom this part was allotted was certainly in his element. His monologue in the second act was none the less appreciated than the succeeding one by Hylton Coxwell, who starred as William Denker, Tom's uncle.

The dialogue, "Burlington Berty from Bow" another specialty by these two gentlemen produced much mirth. Miss Hazel Atkinson gave a fine impersonation of Liz, Mrs. Reese's stepdaughter. Miss Maisie Wheaton, B.A., was also good as Alice King, Tom's aunt. Harry Burgis as Bing Dickson, Liz's steady, well sustained his role. Miss Freda Nelson had no difficulty in her part as Elaine Lynne, Alice's ward and Miss Helen Bygott was particularly good as Angela Scott, Bob's fiancee. On another visit in the future the probability would be a crowded house, despite weather conditions.

20 COMMUNISTS SHOT IN HANKOW

Four Young Girls Among Those Executed on Sunday—Rest Students.

HANKOW, China, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.) — More than twenty Chinese Reds were executed over the week end. Fourteen students, including four bobbed hair girls, were shot on Sunday. While the executions were in progress a mob of soldiers and coolies gathered. "Kill the Communists, down with Bolshevism," they shouted. "Down with Imperialism," one girl shouted before she was executed.

Above are the most recent portraits of Her Majesty the Queen (left) and Princess Mary (right), painted by Richard Jack, noted English artist. They are included in the collection of his paintings now on exhibit in New York. The queen is wearing the court costume of gold brocade, and the crown jewels, and is carrying one of the most valuable antique fans in her magnificent collection. The painting of Princess Mary will hang in her London home when it is returned from the exhibition.

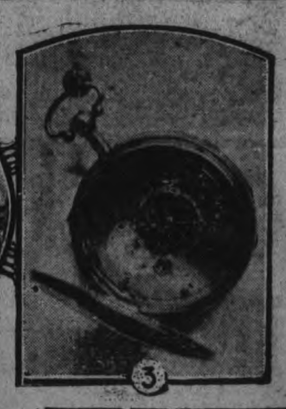
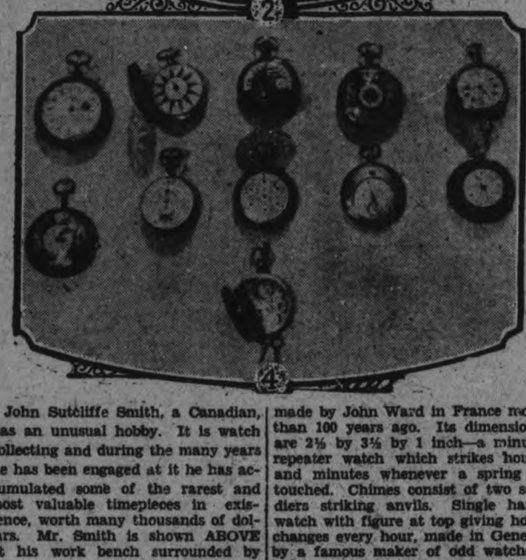
Chief Johnson claims that his tribesmen constitute a separate nation over which the dominion government has no jurisdiction. He wants the reserve to be ruled by a hereditary council, not an elected council.





John Sutcliffe Smith, a Canadian, has an unusual hobby. It is watch collecting and during the many years he has been engaged at it he has accumulated some of the rarest and most valuable timepieces in existence, worth many thousands of dollars. Mr. Smith is shown ABOVE at his work bench surrounded by some of his treasured possessions. On one side is shown one of his most highly prized watches, an 18 karat gold Verge with quarter repeater and chimes composed of angels and a cherub striking three bells. The watch was made in 1704. On the other side is a back view of the same watch showing its wonderful mechanism. The group of watches BELOW include a large old Verge made by John Ward in France more than 100 years ago. Its dimensions are 2½ by 3½ by 1 inch—a minute repeater watch which strikes hours and minutes whenever a spring is touched. Chimes consist of two soldiers striking anvils. Single hand watch with figure at top giving hour changes every hour, made in Geneva by a famous maker of odd watches. Watch with seven dials giving times in seven cities at once. "Bulls eye" watch 1½ inches thick, 2¼ inches across. Rare old 3-case watch 204 years old with movement marvelously engraved, "as good as the day it was made", according to Smith, and a 200-year-old enamel watch with picture of the queen in front of an incense burner. Several other rare watches are also pictured.

KEMAL PASHA — LATIFE HANOUM

A young Turkish girl walked into a moving picture studio at Biarritz this week and asked for a job. "Do you know anything about drama?" the director asked. "If you mean real-life drama, I'll say I do", she replied. "First act: I marry Mutapha Kemal, the Turkish dictator, an hour after I meet him. Second act: I become the real boss of a backward country. Third act: Kemal tries to open up a little harem in the presidential palace and then kicks me out when I protest. Fourth act: The silly girl goes home. Fifth act: She decided to go into the movies. And sixth act—finale—with your permission, she plays her own life story!" For Latife Hanoum, "The Turkish Josephine", has actually come to France to play her life story in the pictures—a story that sounds more like an Arabian Nights tale than a romance of real life.

DRIVERS MUST CARRY LIGHTS

Provincial Constable Maker Will Issue No More Warnings.

MANY COMPLAINTS.

Provincial Constable N. F. Maker warned numerous drivers on the highway last night whom he found without lights on their vehicles, and he declared to The Examiner to-day that henceforth there will be no warnings given, but that the offenders will be prosecuted according to the law. Lately many motorists have complained about horse-drawn vehicles not carrying lights in the country, and the authorities are determined to make a careful check-up on the roads at night.

HOPE TO FIND OTHER BODIES

Twenty-four Children Are Still Missing From Hospice Fire.

SEARCH BEING RESUMED.

QUEBEC, Dec. 20. — (Canadan Press.)— With twenty-four children still missing as a result of the tragedy at the Hospice St. Charles last Wednesday night, efforts to find them among the debris of the destroyed wing were being continued with much vigor. Fifty men are working on the ruins but for the past few days their work has been hindered by the storm and a large fall of snow. With the prospect of milder weather, it is expected that searching among the debris will be facilitated and the bodies of the still missing children are expected to be found within the next day or two.

M. O. H. TELLS OF LAB'S VALUE

Case of Normal School Students Cited as Showing Time Saved.

DISTRICT PROTECTED.

Dr. T. W. H. Young, M.O.H., points out as an illustration of the efficiency of the work done at the Isolation Hospital, and also of the benefits derived from the presence in the city of the Provincial Laboratory, the very speedy cleaning up of all danger of infection in the Normal School from diphtheria carriers. Five of these carriers were discovered after examination of the students at the school, and four were at once removed, on orders of the M.O.H., Dr. T. W. H. Young, to the Isolation Hospital, where remedial measures were at once resorted to and a treatment of nasal douches and swabs was so far successful that all of these carriers are in a condition to be discharged at once, without any further danger of infection to the school or the community.

Without the conveniences afforded by the local laboratory, and the good work done at the Isolation Hospital, these carriers would not so quickly have been discovered and rendered immune. In fact, they would probably have infected many sections of the country by this time, as they might have dispersed to their homes in various sections of the province. The local laboratory afforded facilities for discovering their presence at once, and the Isolation Hospital, with the scientific care afforded there, completed the task of eliminating the danger of further infection.

The rapidity with which these carriers were treated and the fact that they are now at liberty, without danger to themselves or the community, to return to their homes, is an evidence of the sensible attitude taken in following out the instructions of the M.O.H. Two of the teachers refused to go to the hospital, and are quarantined in their own homes, as carriers.

Dr. Young informs The Examiner that the fifth carrier, a young girl, refused to go to the Isolation Hospital,and skipped out to her own home in Little Britain. She had no right to do this without permission from the local M.O.H., and had no further right to go into another municipality without the permission of the M.O.H. there, who was at once informed of the circumstances, and expects to apprehend the girl shortly.

EXPLOSION ON SHIP.

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press.)—A terrific explosion occurred about midship of the U. S. Navy airplane carrier Langley, anchored in San Diego Bay, to-day. Flames immediately broke out and enveloped the ship in an immense cloud of smoke. The naval tug Koko and a San Diego fire boat were despatched to the scene.

Mine Shares Stronger Though Market Weaker

TORONTO, Dec. 20.— (Canadian Press.)— A better tone was in evidence in slightly less active trading on the standard mining exchange today and the feature was the firm hold on their gains by two specialties that advanced substantially in recent sessions. Sudbury Basin at 11.50 and Treadwell at 24.75 showed no recession, while Noranda gained 10 at 23.85. Wright Hargreaves in active dealing climbed 25 cents at 620 and Teck Hughes firmed five at 10.55. Lake Shore and Amulet were also five higher, while Howey Gold climbed seven at 145. Barry Hollinger sold up five at 114 and Kirkland Lake was four higher at 247. Bidgood and Newbeck advanced three each and Potter Doal was one higher.

Corn Prices Slump When Report Issued

CHICAGO, December 20. — Corn prices underwent a sharp early setback to-day as much as 3¼c a bushel in some cases. The government crop report pointing to an increase of corn yield over November estimate, whereas most traders had looked for a decrease, was chiefly responsible. Opening at 2¼ to 3¼c off, corn showed only moderate power to rally. Wheat and oats were also weak, wheat starting ¼c to 1½c down, but later recovering somewhat. Provisions tended to advance.

Opening prices were: Wheat Dec. 127 1-4, March 128 3-8; corn, Dec., 82¾; March 87 1-8; oats, Dec. 51¾, March 54c.

Holiday Lull Begins On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—The Christmas lull began to settle over the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning and the tendency to easier price levels was noted in scattered trading. The liquor stocks and occasional regulars, however, were firm. Fractional advances were recorded in Seagrams, Canadian Brewing, Canadian Malting, Carlings, and Walkers. Two of the oils, the International Petroleum and Imperial, were also fractionally higher, while British American was unchanged at 36⅛, but the majority of changes in the listed issues were downward. Canadian Pacific lost three at 213 and Brazilian more than a point at 219¾. One point losses were shown in Alberta Pacific Grain, Arnolds, Bell Telephone, Canners Preferred, Canadian Oil, and Page Hersey. International Nickel, the most active stock on the board, was unchanged at 77½ after touching 78½.

Selling Slows Up New York Advance

New York, December 20. — Canadian Press. — Bullish operations in to-day's stock market were temporarily interrupted by a wave of selling which followed the omission of Pan-American dividends, but speculative confidence was quickly restored and the market headed upward. Again in the early afternoon more than a score of issues were elevated to new high levels for the year or longer, some of the gains running as high as nine points. Heavy buying of motors was characterized as the usual "window dressing" in preparation for the New York Automobile show next month. One block of 18,000 shares of General Motors changed hands at 135 as against the closing quotation of 133 7-8 yesterday; Hudson also was heavily accumulated and a better undertone was apparent for most of the other motor shares. Gabriel Snubbers sank to another low at 22.

RECORD BREAKING ATTEMPT FAILS

Spirit of California Forced Down—Over 49 Hours in the Air.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—After remaining in the air for 49½ hours in an attempt to break the world's record for an endurance flight, the tri-motored monoplane "Spirit of California" was forced down at Mull's Field here today on account of an exhausted fuel supply.

Service Station Men Will Observe Holiday

TORONTO, Dec. 20. — Canadian Press. — Motorists in Ontario requiring gasoline or other supplies over the Christmas week end should make sure to secure their requirements on Saturday or before. Rev. A Terryberry, secretary of the Ontario Branch of the Lord's Day Alliance, announced to the Canadian Press to-day that in response to suggestions that a large number of service station men throughout the province should be enabled to spend Christmas Sunday with their families, the Alliance had taken the matter up with the various service station companies, and that six of the largest of them had arranged to close the stations under their control on Sunday, Dec. 26

A.Y.P.A. HOLDS MOCK COUNCIL

W. Chappell Acts as Reeve at Lakefield Church Society Meeting.

LAKEFIELD NEWS

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 20.—The A.Y.P.A. meeting on Monday evening took the form of a mock Village Council, in which all present took part in one way or another. The committee was made up of the men of the branch, who enlisted each person present on the various committees which were given a few minutes to meet and prepare their reports.

Rev. W. j. Creighton ably filled the place of village clerk and W. Chappell took the part of the reeve most acceptably. C. C. Stenner was the chairman of the finance committee and with the assistance of the reeve and council, prepared a budget. F. J. Robertshaw filled the dual post of chairman of the roads and sidewalks committee and also that of chairman of the school board. W. S. Remnant was chairman of the charity committee and M. C. Hampton the chairman of the property committee.

The chairman of the finance committee reported that it would take $47,000 to run the village for the year, even after cutting estimates as low as possible, and in order to avoid a raise in the tax rate, he advocated a special tax on cats and on ladies' goloshes which would net a goodly sum; in fact they planned to buy a vest for the constable out of a portion of the added income. The chairman of the property committee urged better fire protection and also that a modest amount be invested in providing comforts for the firemen.

The chairman of the roads committee urged a grant of $30,000 for necessary work on the roads, urging the paving of Rabbit Street and the grading of Bishop Street, and other improvements which the other councillors regarded as extravagant. The chairman of the finance committee remarked, "He wants a lot," and the reeve replied, "He wants nearly all we've got. The estimates were cut to $15,000.

The chairman of the charity committee asked for several improvements for the village which would benefit valuable citizens who were unable to bear the expense themselves.

The report of the chairman of the school board urged the purchase of a uniform for the janitor, military style, a provision for afternoon tea for the teachers, a tunnel for the janitor, a new porch which would also provide a domicile for the janitor in bad weather and also $2,000 for wiring the school for lights which would enable the girls to see the mirrors in their compacts.

The deputation for the village asked for police protection for a prominent member of the association, a grant toward a new industry which would get its raw material here and was assured of a good market. The industry was unique but the proposition was supported by all the Council.

A grant toward the building of a ten story Board of Trade building of cement blocks on the corner of Reid and Queen Streets made vacant by Saturday's conflagration was turned down, although the benefits of such a building were urged strongly.

The mock council adjourned and refreshments were served.

Ladies' Aid Meets.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Regent Street church was held on Tuesday afternoon with a good attendance present. The treasurer reported the receipts of the annual bazaar as $442, which was $112 more than ever before, which was gratifying to all the officers and members, whose co-operation made such success possible.

The officers were re-elected as follows:
President—Mrs. A. Darling.
1st vice-President—Mrs. R. Nugent.
2nd vice-President—Mrs. T. A. Northey.
Secretary—Mrs. Walter Hamblin.
Treasurer—Mrs. S. S. Spence.
Pianist—Mrs. P. Spence.
Convenor of Flower Fund—Mrs. Richardson.

This year, owing to the new regulations of the United Church, the year closes with the calendar year instead of the end of March, as formerly, so that the reports really only give the reports for nine months. All the reports showed progress in every line.

Pastor Called.

Rev. Mr. McCormack, of Clinton, has accepted a call to the Lakefield Baptist church and will arrive in the village in time for Christmas.

Ten tables were played at the A.Y.P.A. card party on Thursday evening. Miss Hampton and Mr. Hall won the prizes and Miss Grace Watson and Mr. Milford Hampton the consolation prizes.

Mrs. (Rev.) Creighton entertained three tables of bridge on Wednesday afternoon at the rectory; the prizes were won by Mrs. H. G. FitzGerald and Mrs. E. R. Tate. A delightful afternoon was spent.

REVUE TROUPE HITS HARD LUCK

Fails To Make Enough in Campbellford To Pay Running Expenses.

NEARLY STRANDED.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 20.—Al Winters and his Speedway Girls Revue who have been playing the entire week end program at the Regent Theatre here, have apparently fallen into hard luck. For three consecutive nights they failed to draw a crowd sufficiently large to meet their running expenses. This made an immediate appeal to the financial backers of the shows necessary, and through lack of immediate action it appeared as though the entire troupe would be left stranded at the Windsor Hotel. Several appeals by telephone and through the agency of the local police failed to bring a satisfactory response from the company. However, at a late hour last night financial assistance arrived and the troupers are resting easily, assured that they will not be held in any embarassing situation.

The company has not been long on the road. Their list of bookings include appearances in Toronto theatres, Napanee, Belleville and Campbellford where such disastrous finale awaited them. But regardless of their failure to win the complete approval of local audiences, there were parts of the entertainment especially worthy of mention. They were the strong parts of the entire evening and literally held the show together. Betty Napier and Charles Conqueror with their southern Soft Shoe and waltz-clog coupled with their two song numbers made a decided hit with the audience. They appear to be a strong dancing team with a future before them. Casey, the comedian, was another strong number and got his part over with the approval of everyone. His line of banter and stock in trade of balancing and juggling feats won the entire approval of the most critical listener.

Gertie Gwyn, who plays opposite Winters, may be hailed as the saviour of the hour. That she is one of the old school variety of troupers was proved when she came to the assistance of the stranded players by arranging a loan with another showman who had retired from the game. Just when all seemed lost she appeared with the "cash on hand" and the way was opened.

This was to have been near the end of their tour for some members of the company have had engagements for various theatres this week. Casey (James Taylor) is billed to appear for three nights in Belleville this week. Betty and Charles, the dancing team, are billed for Toronto.

HAVELOCK PLANS NEW OPEN AIR RINK

All Organizations Interested Meet Together for Discussion of Matter.

HAVELOCK, Dec. 20.—A special meeting of the C. P. R. Recreation Club was held on Wednesday evening with the President, P.Pincombe, in the chair.

An invitation had been extended to the reeve and members of the town council, the chairman and members of the park board, and the officers and members of the Havelock Athletic Association to attend this meeting and each organization was well represented.

Mr. Pincombe stated that the object of the meeting was that the members of the different bodies assembled together might devise and discuss ways and means of operating a skating rink in Havelock the coming winter.

Mr. Caesar, representing the Athletic Association, spoke as regards the need of a rink in the town for skating and hockey purposes.

Reeve Curtis also thought the town should have a rink and stated he would give any support necessary to the project and gave a general outline as to cost for material for an open air rink such as the meeting had in mind.

Mr. Moore, secretary of the Recreation Club, stated that, in his opinion, the reason there was no rink in Havelock at the present time was on account of no private individual or club caring to assume the financial obligation involved and that in order to get the project under way suggestions along this line might bear fruit.

Mr. Lancaster made the suggestion that the Park Board secure material and select a site in the park and build the rink in sections so it could be taken down each spring and erected again each winter. The Park Board should have the active management of the rink but the Athletic Association and the Recreation Club should give their support in all ways possible to keep it a going concern.

Mr. Lancaster's suggestion was acted upon and the Park Board decided they would undertake to handle the rink.

Mr. Hagerman then spoke in regards to the location, etc. Members of the council present stated they would give their support to the project. With the assurance once again from the members of the different organizations present that they would do all possible to make the rink a success, the meeting adjourned.

The individual prizes will be given again this year in addition to the cup. The members of the successful rifle shooting team are also enrolled with the local troop of Boy Scouts. The community joins in congratulations to the boys for the high honor which they have brought to the school, and to the village.

CHRISTMAS CONCERTS

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, MILLBROOK

MILLBROOK, Dec. 20.—An appreciative audience completely filled the Town Hall on Thursday evening for the annual entertainment given by the Sunday School of St. Thomas' church.

General regret was felt that the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, was absent on account of illness, the assistant clergyman of the parish, Rev. P. C. Howard, capably filling the position of chairman.

A piano duet by Mrs. Allen and Miss Ada Attwooll was the opening number on a well-prepared programme, others who added to the pleasure of the evening in this manner being Misses Mamie Collins and Hazel Armstrong, and Marcella and Marguerite Lang.

Christmas wreaths, small cedar trees gaily trimmed, a hedge of greenery and flowers, with bright-colored overhead ropings, gave the stage a most attractive setting.

When the curtain rose, Mother Goose (Elizabeth Russell) was discovered moving slowly about the stage, leaning on her trusty cane, and expecting her 'story book' children for her Christmas Party. A big, white goose adorned the front of her black skirt, and a silken, flowered bodice with full-draped hips, and soft white fichu caught with an old-fashioned brooch, and tall, red hat completed her becoming costume.

Little Bo-Peep (Mary Vance) dainty in pink and silver and carrying a tall, ribbon-trimmed crook, came running in and wakened "Little Boy Blue" (Charlie Mason), who had fallen asleep under the 'haystack,' that he might blow his horn and so call the other children to the 'Party.'

The arrivals included Little Jack Horner (Walter Todd), who carried his Christmas pie, and 'stuck in his thumb and pulled out a plum'; Little Miss Muffet (Mary Nattress) who was persuaded to forget the spider and sat happily on her tuffet, with 'bowl of curds and whey' in her lap; the Old Woman who lived in a Shoe (Winnie Lord) and her many children, the big, black shoe being a feature of this entry; some of her children were Laureen and Mary Handley, Joy and Tom Howson, Betty Smith, the Queen of Hearts (Evalena Todd) who did truly bring a plate of tarts and pass them generously around; Old Mother Hubbard (Grace Sloan) who was very quaint in flowered, panniered dress, tall hat, cane, kerchief folded round her neck, and small apron; Jack and Jill (Kenneth Ingram and Mary Smith) particularly appealed to the audience, and Jack Spratt and his wife (Harold Howson and Margaret Russell) were reprimanded sharply by Mother Goose for their greedy manners as they 'licked the platter clean'; The Little Girl with a Curl (Suzanne Grassett) was as sweet as a picture, and Simple Simon (Eric Abbott) fished in his pail and looked quite foolish; Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son (Walter Todd) gave Mother Goose a lively chase to recover the pig he had stolen; Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary (Jean Todd) was very sweet in blue and silver with flower-trimmed hat hanging on her shoulders, sprinkling her garden with small watering-can; Patty Cake, Patty Cake (Henrietta Grassett) with white cap and apron, and pretty flowered dress, carried a mixing-bowl and was evidently intent on her cake-making; last of all came The Bachelor (Eric Abbott) with his 'wife' in a wheel-barrow, which he finally upset.

Solos and choruses brightened the 'Party,' Mother Goose singing "Time Will Bring the Roses," and "For All Good Fellows Are We," her children joining in the chorus: Boy Blue sang "The Clock Strikes Eight," and a final chorus was "Merry Christmas."

The "Star Drill" by ten girls won popular approval with its pretty movements, and closing chorus, "Shining, Shining"; dainty white dresses were worn, silver stars centring the white head bands, while larger stars outlined in tinsel topped the blue-wound wands. Those taking part were: Mary Nattress, Jean Todd, Winnie Lord, Evalena Todd, K. Donnelly, Mary Vance; Helen Martin, Nellie Miller, Margaret Russell, Marjorie Vance.

Spring was suggested by the "Hoe Drill," the twelve boys wearing big straw hats, overalls, and bandana kerchiefs about their necks; there was no lack of vigor as hoes were wielded dexterously, sharpened and finally shouldered, while faces were mopped free of perspiration and the various movements were gone through with precision. The personnel was: Owen McCrrthy, Henry and George Gray, Edward Budd, Burton Russell, George Harkness, Lyal Nattress, Grant and Donald Henry, Gerald Raper, William Todd and Gilbert Howson.

A one-act comedy, "Trying Them Out," took up the second part of the program, replacing a much longer play which had been in course of preparation, but which had to be abandoned, almost at the last minute, because of two characters taking positions out of town.

Mr. Brown (H. Jordan) advertised for a new stenographer for his office taking the place of the capable Miss Jones, who had married. Bill (Piercey Fitt) the office boy, acted the part true to life, his 'antics' with the duster, especially when the applicants began to arrive, and his frequent 'butting in' with pertinent remarks, gave the audience plenty of cause for laughter.

Miss Sally Allen (Miss M. Curtiss) was the first applicant, her get-up fitting perfectly the once-popular idea of an old maid, and her absurd questioning of Mr. Brown as to his personal habits—did he drink, did he smoke, swear? etc., ending in her rejection, Bill showing her the door with suspicious eagerness.

A widow, Mrs. Mary Due (Miss Marcella Lang), carrying Tootsie, her pet poodle under her arm, and givin to saying 'Just a minute' when Mr. Brown tested her out with a dictated letter, was the next rejected candidate, when the 'boss' inspected the badly torn, misspelled and wrongly-worded paper she handed over after her efforts at the typewriter. A frequent use of her compact, and an evident desire to entangle Mr. Brown in matrimony in spite of much weeping into a big purple silk handkerchief she displayed as a momento of her late husband, characterized the widow during the comparatively short time spent in the office.

Miss Evangeline Evalena Covington (Miss Ada Attwooll) was admitted by Bill; her statement of 'no experience what ever' was followed by an extended pedigree of her illustrious ancestors, and she was only scared out of the office by Mr. Brown intimating that half his staff were in the hands of the police; to disgrace her family by employment in such an establishment was not to be thought of.

Difficulties were all settled when Miss Hall (Miss Marguerite Lang) applied for the position; her quiet manner, and proper mode of dress, together with her willingness to 'work after hours if necessary,' and the excellent copy turned out, won for her quick approval.

Bill brought to her desk a bouquet of red flowers as a final mark of acceptance because 'I guess I know a good stenographer when I see one' and the curtain dropped with everyone smiling and satisfied.

Among those who assisted with the necessary training for the concert were: Mrs. Allen, Misses Ella Grandy, Muriel Curtiss, M. B. Turner, B.A., and Mr. H. Jordan. The accompanists were Mrs. Allen and Miss Attwooll.

WOMEN'S PAGE

PERSONALS

An interesting group of young girls who call their association the Maple Leaf Club, held a small tea in the parish hall of St. John's Church, on Saturday afternoon, when their mothers came in during the tea hour and also viewed the work of their daughters, comprising the Christmas presents which members had been making for some time past. The club, which had its inception in a Hallowe'en party this year, holds monthly dances at the homes of the members and meets every Saturday. The young girls had a quantity of very pretty things on view on Saturday, composed of various pieces of fancy work and painting done for the Christmas season, the proceeds going to assist several poor children. A prize given by Mrs. Wm. Blackwell, president of the Women's Art Association, for the most industrious member of the club, was won by Beatrice Denston and Patricia McClellan won the prize, a silver bangle donated by the honorary president of the club, Mrs. Arthur McClellan, given for the best piece of work on view, a dainty little picture done in pastels. The members, all of whom are from thirteen to sixteen years of age, are the following: Lillian McClellan, president, Gwen Sorby, secretary, Margaret Rogers, treasurer, Patricia McClellan, Beatrice Denston, Elizabeth Mulholland, Margaret Warne, Barbara Ackerman, Isobel Weddell, Mary McDonald, Grace Caddy, Guelda Pakenham, Ruth Sutton, Margaret Allison and Gwen Hewett. At the tea on Saturday, the members presented Mrs. McClellan with a Chrismas gift, in the form of a cut glass and silver butter dish and knife and a mayonnaise bowl.

Two very jolly Christmas parties were held at the Y.W.C.A. yesterday, when the members of the Intermediate classes, about sixty in number, had their gathering in the afternoon, and Santa Claus distributed gifts, followed by refreshments served in the Domestic Science room. In the evening, the Advanced and Senior classes held their party, with a very jolly programme for the fifty girls in attendance. Once more, Saint Nicholas was in evidence, and presented every member with a gift, ending by giving them the candy canes on the big Christmas tree. Later, coffee was poured by Mrs. H. Beal, assisted by Miss Amy Beal.

By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith wanted to run to Nils, to drag at his arms—anything to prevent the crashing of one of those big fists against Bruce Patton's twitching, ashen face. But her body was rigid with numbness. Only her eyes seemed to have the power to move, and they darted, sick with shame, from Cherry's face, on which delight, triumph and terror fought for ascendancy, to Nils' incredibly broad back, slightly hunched, as he leaned over his victim. But scarcely had her eyes fastened on Nils when she saw the unbelievable happen. The blond giant's fists slowly uncurled; he raised his hands with maddening deliberation and thrust them into his pockets. His shoulders squared themselves and in another moment his laugh rang out, a strange sound in that tense room, for the radio music had stopped and that queer laugh—queer only because it was hearty and not at all sinister—was the only sound.

"Why should I hit you, Patton?" Nils' voice came at last, and Faith felt that she would have given a great deal to see his face just then. "I'm afraid you have misunderstood me. I had no intention of interfering in a lovers' quarrel. I really came in to say good-night, Good-night, Mr. Patton! Good-night, Miss Lane," and he bowed first to one and then to the other of the dumbfounded pair.

Cherry recovered speech first. "Don't dare speak to me!" she shrilled furiously. "You rotten coward! You let him insult me and then scare you into backing out of an honest fight! Oh—you—you!"

Then he smiled down upon Cherry's fury imperturbably. "Sorry! But you seemed so well able to avenge any insult Mr. Patton may have offered you in trying to kiss you that it never occurred to me that my interference would have been welcome. If I should presume to criticize your friend, Mr. Patton, I should say that his error was one of taste."

"Oh!" Cherry wailed, throwing up an arm to shield her flaming face. "Oh, I hate you, hate you!"

With her arm still shielding her face, she turned and fled from the room.

"I'm so sorry——" Faith began in a low voice which was shaken with nervousness and revulsion from the terror which had gripped her in those awful seconds during which Nils had advanced menacingly upon Patton. "I'll—I'll get your hat and coat, Mr. Patton."

When she returned from the hall closet with the things she found Bruce Patton smoothing his hair and speaking of the weather with a smiling, friendly Nils.

"May I—drop you somewhere, Jonson?" Patton stammered, as he shrugged into his overcoat.

When the door closed upon Patton, Faith dropped to the couch, her shoulders beginning to shake with the sobs she could no longer hold back.

"Do you think I'm a coward, too, Faith?" Nils asked gently as he sat down beside her and took her hand. "I simply couldn't make a fool of myself and of Patton by playing the heavy, avenging lover in that little melodrama she'd written on the spur of the minute. But I think I did make her see Patton in a new light. Ghastly how he cringed, wasn't it? Poor little Cherry!" He laughed softly, tenderly.

CAVAN COUPLE HOLD WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith Celebrate 25th Anniversary of Their Marriage.

ADDRESS READ

Presented With Gifts of Silverware as Token of Goodwill.

CAVAN, Dec. 20.—On Friday evening in Cavan Community Hall, a pleasant social gathering was held, when about ninety of the friends and neighbours of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, Eighth Line, Cavan, gathered to celebrate with them and their family the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day.

A beautiful supper was served in the basement by the ladies of the community after which the guests gathered in the auditorium of the hall, and the Rev. Mr. Fierheller, pastor of the Anglican church, Bethany, was asked to be chairman for a short programme.

Mr. Fierheller gave a brief and interesting chairman's address, expressing his pleasure in being present on the happy occasion, with other pithy and appropriate remarks.

Mr. Arthur Jamieson then read the following address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. John Smith:

We are here this evening to celebrate the 25th anniversary of your wedding.

The occasion being an opportunity of your friends and neighbors expressing their appreciation of a quarter of a century of neighborliness, friendship and generous actions. Therefore we take great pleasure in presenting you with this gift as a mark of our esteem and to commemorate your silver wedding.

The hope is also expressed that your golden wedding shall be reached as happily and as successfully as the present one.

Your many absent friends, we know, would like to be with us; but they are here in spirit just the same, and join heartily in all good wishes.

As brevity is the soul of wit we ask you to accept this gift and the sentiments expressed in the spirit of love and goodwill, and we all feel they will be appreciated accordingly.

Signed in behalf of friends and neighbors,

Arthur Jamieson,
Louis Pudsy,
Miss Flo. Smith,
Mrs. M. E. Milligan.

At the proper time, the chairman removed the cover from a beautiful tray of flat silverware.

Mrs. Milligan also presented a pyrex casserole, set in silver, the gift of their own family, and a silver bread plate from a friend.

Mr. Smith made an appropriate reply, after which the Misses Fierheller gave a well rendered piano duet which was encored.

Miss Hazel Sluggett sang a solo in pleasing voice, after which the Misses fierheller again gave piano duets.

The young people danced for a short time and the older guests enjoyed a social time.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith had a family dinner party with a few intimate friends at their own home, earlier on the same day.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER, 21, 1927

Good and evil influences contend today, according to astrology, which finds a benefic aspect dominant in the afternoon.

The morning may be conducive to impatience and lack of sustained effort. It is well not to trust to this day's decisions.

The rule is favorable to the airing of radical views and to indulgence in criticism of persons in high place.

This is not an auspicious date for beginning an ocean voyage as there may be sudden storms and serious delay.

Some sort of trouble between those who favor naval development and those who desire to improve aviation is indicated.

It is of interest to know that the stars appear to presage for aviation and predominence of interest.

Schools and colleges are to gain much through interest excited during the holiday vacation, it is foretold.

Increase of interest of intellectual matters is indicated and authors should benefit.

Again American diplomats are to be put to the test in an international incident, it is prophesied.

Farmers are to have reason to rejoice in the new year when they will reap much good through economic conditions.

Egotism continues to be encouraged by the stars and both men and women are warned of its danger as a mentally disintegrating force.

Vanity among women also is supposed to be augmented by the sinister aspect which enlarges self-appreciation.

Simplicity and sincerity are to be watchwords in the coming year when great events will eliminate much foolishness.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a lucky year.

Children born on this day are likely to be exceedingly clever and intelligent. The subjects of this sign often devote themselves to church and political leaders are born under this sign.

SANTA CLAUS VISITS WARSAW CHILDREN

Gives Out Bags of Candy During Call—Warsaw News.

WARSAW, Dec. 20.—Santa Claus was in the village in front of Payne and Darling's store on Saturday, afternoon at two o'clock. He arrived, looking very happy. Many children were there, and of course their parents were with them.

With a beaming face and a cheery "Merry Christmas" he gave bags of candies and nuts to the children.

The village stores are all prettily decorated. Their are doing their best to cater to the needs and wants of the people, and carry a good supply of staples and many fancy goods, so that people can do as well to buy at their home stores as elsewhere.

All sorts of vehicles were on the streets on Friday and Saturday. By Friday noon the sleighing in and near the village was quite good. Even on Saturday some of the sidelines were not good sleighing. On Friday afternoon and evening several cars were badly stuck. The snow drifted with the terrific wind and as it was soft and wet, chains did not help much.

The Presbyterian Ladies' Aid met on Thursday afternoon. The ladies were all busy knitting. Arrangements were made to start another quilt.

DIES FROM INJURIES.

Raymond Robert, held in connection with the death, was released to-day on bail of $20,000. Roberts pleaded not guilty to manslaughter charges and was remanded until Thursday for perliminary trial.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

An innovation in the way of scarfs appears in the guise of the black handkerchief scarf made of beaded fish net shown above. Below is a novel arrangement of two scarfs of different shades of pink tulle attached with a jeweled flower on the shoulder of an evening frock.

Judging from the display of scarfs of all sorts that we may see any day in any of the large shops we may reasonably conclude that scarfs are as fashionable and as much in demand as ever. But judging from what you see of women here, there and everywhere, you might come to the conclusion that scarfs were not quite such an important accessory as they once were.

The fact is that scarfs are not overworked as they were some years ago. The evening scarf is now either a part of the evening frock itself or chosen and worn with a special view to its effect on the frock for which it is chosen. Women realize—at least those with good clothes sense—that a scarf chosen at random and worn as a matter of course may detract from the line or color harmony of the frock.

There are some frocks that call for scarfs—and then they are provided by the dressmaker—sometimes actually tacked into position at one shoulder or the back. There were many sports frocks of this description last summer and autumn.

Scarfs of tulle are among the new evening accessories. They are usually chosen to match the gown with which they are worn or perhaps in a shade of tulle slightly darker. One interesting sort of tulle scarf is a large square with a deep silk fringe around the edges. I have also seen charming tulle scarfs edged with a row of glittering rhinestone nailheads. Other tulle scarfs have heavy oil-painted designs around the outer edges. Sometimes the tulle is trimmed with gilt or colored spangles.

COLONISTS ARE STILL FAITHFUL

Ask Extra Day For Resurrection of Leader of House of David.

MUST BURY HIM SOON.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—The disciples of Benjamin Purnell to-day awaited the performance of a miracle with a faithful ardor that to all outward appearances had not been dampened by the possibility of disillusionment. To-day was the last day of the period set for the resurrection of the dead leader of the House of David cult. Purnell died on Friday and after his demise the cult members faithfully awaited his resurrection on the third day. When the third day passed yesterday without any sign of returning life, the colonists beseeched the officials to hold up the interment in the belief that he would arise to-day. After sundown to-day, health officials have notifed the members, they will proceed with embalming the body for burial to-morrow in accordance with the State law.

Frenchy Belanger Wins Flyweight Title on Points

BELANGER OUTPOINTS JARVIS FOR FLYWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP

Toronto Boy Earns Decision in Fiercely Contested Twelve-Round Bout.

BOXERS HIT HARD.

Jarvis Knocked Down Twice and Belanger Once During Fight.

TORONTO, December 20. — Flyweight champion of the world is the proud title to which Albert (Frenchy) Belanger, youthful Toronto boxer, may now lay claim. The dynamic little Queen City battler won the right last night when he earned the decision of Referee Marsh and Judges W .A. Hewitt and Elwood Hughes in his twelve-round titular bout with Ernie Jarvis of England. Jarvis made a valiant effort to snatch the crown that once fitted so firmly on the brow of the famous Jimmy Wilde, but victory was not for him.

And so, at 21 years of age, and with only three years of experience as a professional boxer, Belanger reigns supreme in his particular class of the profession which gives him his livelihood—and fame. Climaxing a brilliant campaign for the title, Belanger's effort last night proved that he is a boxer, a puncher, and as courageous a lad as ever drew on a glove.

Exciting Bout.

The bout was productive of action such as thrilled the huge crowd that packed the spacious Coliseum. Three knockdowns added to the excitement, two scored by Belanger early in the bout and one by the Englishman.

The knockdowns occurred in the first, third and eleventh rounds. Jarvis was on the floor as the first ended. Referee Marsh had counted two when the gong sounded. The English contender took a "nine" count at the beginning of the third round, and himself scored a clean knockdown in the eleventh. Belanger refused to take a count, but was forced to assimilate some heavy punishment before his head cleared. He finished the round strongly, however.

Decision Close.

It was a close decision. Belanger had enough of an advantage to give him the verdict beyond any doubt, but Jarvis hurt the Toronto boy perhaps more than any other boxer has done. It was close enough that Jarvis may well demand a return bout when Belanger has fulfilled his agreement to meet Frank Genaro.

Both boxers were in wonderful condition . Jarvis was able to come back strongly after the two early knockdowns, while Belanger, after taking a beating in the eleventh round, finished the bout with a furious assault that was evidence of the remarkable recuperative powers of the Queen City kid.

Belanger weighed in two pounds below the flyweight limit. He looked rather fine although his boxing was not at all sluggish. He deserves a rest from training now that the title is his. For over a year he has been almost in steady training. Jarvis's weight was 111½ pounds.

Jarvis lived up to his reputation as a two-handed "mixer." He has forsaken the upstanding English style for an aggressive, crouching attack, using the head-weaving method of defence to a great extent. He proved an easy target for Belanger in the first three rounds, but thereafter looked like an entirely different boxer. He was willing to meet Belanger at the give-and-take game, but at this the Toronto boy nearly always made his opponent give ground.

Belanger commenced the bout confidently; Jarvis cautiously. After Toronto's "Frenchy" had opened hostilities with a left to the head they met in several clinches, in which they appeared to be teasing one another. Finally, near the end of the round, Belanger cut loose with his heavy artillery, and, with a left and right, both to the jaw, sent Jarvis down. The bell rang as the referee counted two.

Jarvis Down for "Nine."

Belanged had decidedly the advantage in the second round and again in the third when he scored the "nine" knockdown. In the fourth and fifth Belanger appeared content to let his opponent take the initiative. Jarvis was not slow to do this and had an advantage in each of these sessions.

In the sixth Belanger became more aggressive again. He drove Jarvis to the corner several times, but the boxer from across the water was cautious and covered up well. Honors were evenly divided in the eighth, with Belanger having a very little the better of the ninth, in which he again had his opponent covering up against the ropes. There was little to the tenth which could have been called even. Belanger had perhaps a slight shade here. The eleventh went to Jarvis by a very decisive margin. He sent Belanger to the canvas, and, while the Torontonian refused to take advantage of a count, he was groggy as he jumped to his feet. Belanger took considerable punishment before his head cleared, but he was becoming stronger the end of the round.

Every second of the twelfth frame was bitterly contested. Belanger, fully recovered from the effects of the knockdown, leaped from his corner, paused to shake hands, and then began a series of punches which was scarcely broken until the round ended. Jarvis was forced to go back continually in the face of this attack, but landed his share of punches while doing so. The new champion took the round. The decision was most favourably received.

Heavy Fines Imposed On 4 Hockey Players

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—Fines totalling $80 were imposed yesterday by President Charles C. Clapp of the Canadian - American Hockey League on four Philadelphia and Providence players who engaged in fistic warfare during and after the Philadelphia-Providence game in the Quaker city last Saturday. At the same time he werned the offending players to "watch their actions in the future."

Vernon Forbes, Providence goalie, and Steve Yankowski, Philly defence player, were fined $25 each, while Freddie Lowery of Philadelphia and Wilfred Desy of Providence were fined $15 each. President Clapp is now sifting charges growing out of a free-for-all in the locker room alleyway after the Boston-Quebec game here Saturday, during which the two referees and a goal umpire claim to have been assaulted.

HOW IT WENT.

Round One.

Referee Lou Marsh called the men to the centre of the ring for final instructions. They shook hands. Belanger was first to land with a left to the chin and another to the body. The men worked at close qaurters. Belanger scored with a left and right to the body. Jarvis connected with a right to the ribs and a left to the face. Belanger landed with a left to the stomach, but missed with his right. Belanger rushed Jarvis into a corner but did little damage. Jarvis landed a right to the ribs. A left and right to the jaw put Jarvis down, the referee having counted two when the bell rang. Jarvis did not appear to be badly hurt as he went to his corner.

Round Two.

They locked heads and punched each other to the body. Jarvis was boxing with his chin well behind his left shoulder. Belanger landed a left to the jaw. Jarvis retaliated with a sharp left to the body. Two straight lefts to the head by Belanger found their mark. Belanger attacked Jarvis to the ribs. A left to the chin sent Jarvis back. Belanger followed with a two-handed attack and punished Jarvis with body blows. Belanger was boxing confidently, Jarvis giving ground. Jarvis missed with a wild left swing to the body. Jarvis, in a corner, got in a left and right as the bell rang.

A left to the jaw sent Jarvis down at the beginning of the round. He took the count of 3 sitting down, one hand gripping the rope. Belanger attacked and Jarvis covered his head with his arms. Jarvis missed with a left swing. Belanger kept Jarvis in the corner for nearly half a minute. Jarvis rallied to score with a right to the body. They went into a clinch at mid-ring. Jarvis landed a left high on the head. He landed another left. Belanger shifted his attack to the body, where he scored with several hard punches. He went back to the head, landing again. The bell rang with Jarvis still in the corner.

Round Four.

Round Five.

Jarvis landed a heavy left to the body and scored with a right to the head. He missed with a left to the jaw. Belanger's left found his opponent's face. Jarvis landed a left to the chin. Jarvis was the aggressor. They mixed it furiously in the corner, neither having much advantage. Jarivs landed a heavy right to the ribs and Belanger failed to counter. The bell found them sparring in mid-ring.

Round Six.

Belanger crossed a right to the head in a clinch. Belanger was going after his man more than in the previous two rounds. The Toronto boy landed a right left to the head. The referee cautioned Jarvis for clinching. They exchanged body blows. Belanger backed Jarvis into a corner, but the latter covered up. Belanger connected with both hands to the body. Belanger jolted his right to the jaw and shook Jarvis momentarily.

Round Seven.

Round Eight.

Jarvis' glove became untied and the referee fixed it. They traded lefts to the body. Belanger landed a left to the face and a right to the body and backed Jarvis to the ropes. Belanger landed another left. Jarvis scored with a left to the stomach. They traded punches to the head, with the Torontonian having the better of matters. An old cut over Belanger's eye was commencing to bleed slightly.

Round Nine.

In a clinch Jarvis landed several blows to the head. Belanger, with a heavy two-handed attack, sent Jarvis to the ropes. Both landed to the body at close quarters. Belanger caught Jarvis with a straight left as the latter came rushing in. Jarvis crossed a right as Belanger was setting himself for a punch, but "Frenchy" came back and sent a dangerous left to the jaw and right to the body. They locked heads and traded body blows. Belanger landed three successive rights to the body.

Round Ten.

Round Eleven.

Round Twelve.

Huggins Would Like T o Annex Uhle But There's Not Mu ch Chance To Get Him

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Apparently not content with a team that no doubt will be a heavy favorite to win another American League pennant, the New York Yankees are talking of trades to strengthen their battery.

Miller Huggins, crafty and careful manager of the team that made a runaway of the 1927 pennant race and the world's series, admits that he is after another right-hand pitcher. Huggins never has enough pitchers to suit him.

He confessed that he has his eyes on George Uhle, one of the best pitchers in baseball in 1926, but one of the biggest disappointments of last season.

"Sure Huggins wants Uhle," Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland club, said when he was here recently. "He also wants two other players on our club, but all he wanted to give us were some patched uniforms and worn-out socks."

It was reported that Huggins aso wanted Luke Sewell, Indian catcher, with Uhle.

Evans intimated that Uhle was not on the bargain counter and that he would not be used in a trade unless it would be of a great big advantage to the Indians.

"Uhle and Levsen are two of our biggest hopes," he said.

Evans told managers at the major league meetings that they could talk business with him about any player on the Cleveland club excepting the two Sewells, Hudlin and Uhle. He indicated a disposition to part with Miller and was willing to listen to offers for Shaute. The Yankees offered him Morehart, Wera or Gazella, but he wasn't interested.

SENIOR HOCKEY OPENS WEDNESDAY

Marlboros to Meet Varsity in Opening Game Tomorrow Night.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—On Wednesday night at the Arena Gardens the senior race of the O.H.A. will get under way with Harry Watson's Marlboro's meeting the much heralded Varsity club. It should be a bitter battle as the above clubs are the only Toronto aggregations in the hunt for the Allan Cup this year and the one that gets off on its right foot will have the edge on the other sextet. The Dukes played the Grads in the S.P.A. series and did not fare very well against them but since then they have been molded into a pretty smooth working club and they will give "Mike" Pearson's strong club plenty to think about. The Blue and White gang are out to emulate the feat of the Graduates and up around Queen's Park they think that they have a great chance of doing it. The students are much stronger than last year but so are Marlboros.

Carrick With Varsity.

Don Carrick has made his appearance with Varsity and he should add strength to their already strong defence. He did not play hockey last winter and very little of it the year before but what little he did play was good. He is big, fast and a better stick-handler than either of his brothers, Jess or Alex. Alex is with the juniors. "Red" Whitehead and Kirkpatrick, the other two defence players, are two real standouts, and Murray Snyder in goal is no slouch. Up in front they have many to pick from and Richards, Stewart, MacKing, Harley, Legon and McMullen appear to be the most prominent.

Ross Paul and Mart Nugent, two former Parkdale Canoe Club juniors, and St. Andrew's College players, will be the defense for the Dukes. Both are big fast and they are pairing well together. Paul has starred for a good many years and Nugent broke into the limelight last winter with the Paddlers.

ADAMS TO PIRATES

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Bucky Harris, of Washington, hasn't been able to dispose of Joe Judge yet. Cleveland wanted him, but they weren't willing to part with Joe Shaute, pitcher, and $10,000 to get him.

The Athletics have let Zach Wheat and Ty. Cobb go, but have obtained a brilliant youngster in Casie Orwall, pitcher-outfielder, from Minneapolis.

The Boston Red Sox bought Ken Williams, one-time home-run king of the American League, from the Browns.

The Chicago White Sox haven't strengthened any. They paid $123,000 for Chalmer Cissell, the Portland star, when they already had three short stops, Hunnefield, Flaskamper and Johnny Mann, a flash from the Texas League. The Sox also have two first basemen, Clancy and Sheely. Schalk is willing to trade Sheely. Johnny Mostil is expected to be in shape this spring and make a bid to win his old job back from Alex. Metzler, who was the best young outfielder in the league.

The Chicago Cubs have added reinforcements and are going to kick up a lot of dust in the National League race next season. Cuyler added to Stephenson, Webb, Wilson and Heathcote gives the Cubs just about the best outfield in the league. Maguire, a second baseman from Toledo, and Johnny Butler, Brooklyn, short stop, have been added to Cub infield.

Brooklyn Robins will have a new infield of Bissonette, recalled from Buffalo of the International League; Riconda, formerly with the Boston Braves; Bancroft, bought from Boston for $20,000, and Friberg, formerl Chicago Cub, caught in the draft.

New York Giants' only important catch was Lefty O'Doul, slugging outfielder from the Coast League.

St. Louis Cards acquired Mokan outfielder; Cooney, infielder, and Claud Jonnard, catcher, from the Phillies and bought Frank Gibson catcher, from the Boston Braves but none of them are prospective regulars.

New York Yankees have not strengthened any and do not need to. In fact the other teams would resent anything of the kind. They would like a young pitcher though.

Experts believe Dan. Howley slipped a fast one over on Detroit when he got Blue and Manush for Rice and Van Gilder.

The big shift, of course, was Sisler to Washington from St. Louis and Ken. Williams from St. Louis to Boston.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A PARENT'S JOB

The parents of the years agone,
Of course, had certain joys,
Were much congratulated on
Their sturdy girls and boys,
But parents have their joys today,
Their joys of later years,
Whatever people seem to say,
Whatever youth appears.

Once Robert earned his bicycle
(Now Jack a car demands),
Once Mary painted things to sell
(Peg says, "And spoil my hands?")
Once parents used to point with pride
To Robert and the rest,
But even now they still decide
Their children are the best.

Yes, many a father gets him down
Upon his knees at night,
And many a mother in the town
Feels something like delight.
Though Jack is speeding in his car,
And Peg is known to curse,
Their parents, knowing what they are,
Are glad they aren't worse.

WHAT ASSET MUST LEAGUE UMPIRE HAVE?

Bill Evans Says Greatest is Confidence of the Players.

EYESIGHT ESSENTIAL

Good Judgment and Courage Also Absolutely Necessary.

BY BILLY EVANS

After 22 years of umpiring in the American League, in which I have seen hundreds of players come and go, scores of them the outstanding stars of their time, I have decided to quit the mask and pad for the executive end of the game.

I have called my last ball and strike in the American League, my final out and safe. No more will I have to listen to the wail of the athlete who feels that I have beaten him out of a base hit. No more will I have to listen to the tale of woe of the pitcher, who is certain that had I not missed a perfect third strike, the opposition wouldn't have made the four runs that followed.

Baseball is often a game of alibi and the umpire is the chief target for most of the "it-might-have-been" stuff.

However, I have greatly enjoyed my 22 years as an umpire in the American League. That may sound rather strange, since in all professions that of umpire often seems the least enviable.

I have done my umpiring on the theory that all ball players are gentlemen and should be treated accordingly. I am pleased to say that in only a few instances have I been disappointed.

In umpiring, the greatest possible asset is the confidence of the ball player.

Good eyesight is very essential, an athletic physique is helpful, good judgment is most important, courage is absolutely necessary. If an umpire has these four assets, he can, after a time, build up a confidence with the men over whom he presides that will make his work much easier.

When a ball player has confidence in an umpire, he will let him get away with a terrible decision without trying to start a riot, simply because he feels that is the way the umpire saw it, that he rendered such a decision believing that he was right.

I have worked any number of ball games in the American League in which I knew I was not in the best of form, yet would get through with scarcely a kick.

"Don't bother with Bill today, I know he's terrible, but he's calling them as he sees them", is an expression I might hear a half dozen times during the game. The players accepted in good spirit what they believed were off-color decisions because they had confidence in me.

Since the announcements that I would quit the umpiring game to act as general manager of the Cleveland team of the American League, I have received many enquiries asking me to detail some of the many interesting happenings of my long career as an official.

What is the greatest pitching feat you have ever seen?

What players of the last 25 years do you regard as the best at their respective positions?

What fielding plays are outstanding in your memory since you started umpiring in 1906?

These and scores of other questions dealing with various incidents that have come under my observation appear to be of great interest to baseball fans the country over.

That being the case, it is my intention to write a series of articles which will give my opinion on many things that have impressed me most in the various departments of play.

INNOCENT VICTIM OF INSURRECTION

New Indians' Boss Traded to Senators After Indignation Meeting.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 20.—Fate often plays queer pranks in one's career. There is no doubt but that Dame Fortune had much to do with shaping the career of Roger Peckinpaugh, newly-appointed manager of the Cleveland Indians.

An indignation meeting held by the New York Yankees, in which Peck, being entirely ignorant of the event, played no part, caused his passing from the New York Americans at a time when he was rated the most valuable shortstop in the American League.

One of the two Pullmans engaged to haul the Yankees from New York to St. Louis offered the setting for the Yankees to give vent to their feelings, give Peckinpaugh the college yell and hang crepe on Miller Huggins, then managing the Yankees.

That was during the season of 1921. Despite the fact that New York won the pennant that season, all was not well within the ranks of the Yankees. There seemed to be a lack of discipline and few of the players seemed to have the proper respect for Manager Huggins. Peckinpaugh was one of those who did.

So tense was the feeling against Huggins that a group of players, more than half of the squad, met in the Pullman, other than the one in which Peckinpaugh had his berth, to take action to overthrow the Huggins dynasty.

The consensus of the red shirts was that Huggins must go and that Peckinpaugh should succeed him. It was decided that on the return of the Yankees to New York, the matter would be taken up with Colonel Jake Ruppert, owner of the club, and if he didn't accede to their wishes the team would go out on a strike.

It is just possible that some of the boys might have been under a stimulating influence other than aqua pura, but, regardless, such action was taken.

As is always the case, the affair, supposed to be kept a deep, dark secret, leaked out. Instead of Huggins walking the plank, Peckinpaugh, who had no part in the insurrection, and who was innocent of the entire affair, was the victim.

Without going into the ifs and whys of the case, Colonel Jake Ruppert decided on quick action. Although he had nothing against Peckinpaugh, he was strong for Huggins and figured if Huggins was to succeed, it was best that Peckinpaugh should go.

It was this state of affairs that caused New York to enter into a three-cornered trade that brought Scott of Boston to New York and sent Peck to Washington.

It wasn't a bad break for Peck at that, since he shared in two world championships in Washington, getting a winner's and loser's share of the money, amounting to something like $10,000 extra.

Had not the popularity of Peckinpaugh caused the New York players to swear allegiance to him instead of Huggins, he would have missed those two world series at Washington and possibly the big opportunity that is now before him, manager of the Cleveland Indians.

At first Dame Fortune seemed to have been very unkind to Roger Peckinpaugh in causing his passing from New York, but all is well that ends well. Now it seems the desire of the players that Peckinpaugh should be a manager has had its reward in his new job.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

"SECOND TO NONE."

"Second to None" is a romance of the British navy, released in England and has the atmosphere of verisimilitude imparted to English films by their producers ,who seem to aim at presenting life as it is, rather than it might be, if things were different. While the American producers might be said to worship the little god Billiken, "the god of things as they ought to be," the Englishmen, on the contrary, bow to the inevitable, to the god of things as they are, and they make their pictures of life accordingly. The touch of realism that they inject into their productions gives a sad ending to "Second to None," the romance of Bill Hyde, the little English newsboy who grows up to be a sailor on HM.S. "Determination," and adores a lovely lady who marries the captain of the ship. Gilbert and Sullivan could have created a wonderful romance out of this situation, in which "the lass who loved a sailor" has given place to the sailor who loved a lass, and lost her.

Ina, the small heroine of the piece and also one of those lackadaisical actresses that English producers seem to delight in, is a companion of the small Bill Hyde, but she follows a big ship in an effort to find her lost, dead mother, and the captain adopts her into his home, where she grows up to be a real lady, and finally marries a fine gentleman, leaving poor Bill Hyde to find refuge in drink and desertion. However he returns to duty at the call of the drums of war, and one of the finest scenes in the picture is the big episode in which a naval battle is staged with wonderful realism. But Bill is killed while trying to protect the ship's flag, and his captain returns to his home and love It is a typically English production from start to finish, with the many little deviations apparent between the English and the American, or possible, Canadian, point of view.—Jeanette.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beauteous orphan, who is coveted by hideous Count Ravoir. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoir. She rejoins Fabien, and they forced to capitalize a genius for cards. The King plays Fabien at cards for Manon, accuses him of cheating. Manon is deported. Fabien stows away on the convict ship, and later asks the Captain to marry Manon and him.

"Marry you!" exploded the Captain. "You told me two months ago that you were man and wife."

The Governor, who had been sitting with an astonished look upon his face, half rose from his seat as he asked, "Do you mean to tell me that you two are not married?"

Fabien's face must have expressed the consternation that swept over him, for he felt Manon shrink close to him and her quick convulsive grasp on his arm brought a full realization of his mistake. In the joyous thoughts of the new life that was opening for them, he had utterly forgotten his previous statement made to the Captain weeks before.

There was nothing to do now but face the situation. Fabien held Manon's hand more tightly and answered calmly, "No, we were not married, but we love each other and wish you to marry us before we land."

For a full moment there was a deep silence. Across the Captain's face one emotion after another clearly expressed his rising anger at being duped by them both and disillusioned by Manon.

The Governor was amazed into stunned silence. To think that Fabien had tricked them all by a lie. He blamed himself as an utter fool for having respected the so-called holy bonds of matrimony.

It took Synnelet to break the silence. "That is good," he said, stepping forward. "That is very good, Monsieur; and now that we know the truth," he continued, turning to his Uncle, "There is no reason why I cannot have her."

"Right, my boy," replied the Governor slowly nodding his head to the nephew he never denied, then turning to Fabien with a slightly puzzled expression he said, "Since the girl is not your wife, she is any man's property, and shall be given to my nephew."

Fabien tightened his grasp around Manon's shoulders. His own stupidity had brought their dream castle tumbling about their ears. But he would not give her up. He had gone through much for her sake and was now ready to lay down his life if it would help her.

As Synnelet came forward to claim his new property, Manon cried out in terror and Fabien leaped at him like a madman. His hands went about Synnelet's throat. With a roar of pent up anger the Captain hurled himself upon Fabien and forced him back against the wall where he held him until reinforced by two husky sailors who had been hastily summoned by the Governor.

"Iam sorry, sir," Fabien admitted to the Captain, "Let me explain—I am sure you will understand!"

"Throw this mad fool in with the convicts," ordered the Captain. As the sailors bore him toward the door he fought madly like one possessed as he saw Synnelet struggling to take Manon into his arms.

The odds against Fabien were too great and he was thrown through the open hatch into the hold below. He fell upon the reeking, naked bodies of the half-crazed convicts, and lay sprawled in their midst, unconscious from the impact of his fall.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Manon was more terrified for Fabien's safety than for her own welfare. Her newly found love had completely shut out her former selfishness. It did not matter, now, what happened to her as long as Fabien was safe.

Sobbing — half hysterical — she struggled to leave the cabin. She wanted to follow the Captain and plead for Fabien. The old seaman had been so splendid to her that she did not realize how utterly hopeless any appeal would be since he had learned of their deceitfulness. No sacrifice that she could make would soften him enough to have Fabien removed from the hold of the ship. But Manon did not know this—she was sure the Captain would do as she wished and she fought madly to get by Synnelet who laughed and smiled in anticipated satisfaction and barred her way.

Manon's tiny fists beat hopelessly upon his chest but he only smiled in delight. He was much pleased with Manon and her fiery temper amused him greatly. Certainly it was an indication that his conquest would not be an easy one. However, that only added zest to his purpose. She was his property—there would be no opposition and he could take his time about taming her into sweet submission.

The Governor was well pleased with the situation. Before leaving the cabin he paused a moment and looked back at Manon as she struggled against Synnelet's advances; but he only smiled indulgently, shrugged his shoulders nonchalantly and walked away without interfering. He had done his part, besides was he not young once, himself, and thehot blood of youth must be served.

Wildly and more fiercely Manon continued her struggle to escape from Synnelet, but with each effort her strength weakened. Her gown was torn and her gorgeous golden curls, sadly dishéveled, were spread about her half naked shoulders like a golden halo of sunshine.

The nearness of Manon had aroused a passion within Synnelet that was fast getting beyond his desire to control. He had played with his beautiful new toy just as long as he could. Suddenly he seized her, brushed aside her arms and crushing her to him, kissed her madly.

Vainly Manon worked to free herself. Synnelet's burning kisses covered her neck and shoulders. His hard labored breathing fairly smothered her as she strove to turn her head away so that he could not find her lips. Then she felt her self lifted, bodily, in his hateful arms and carried across the cabin. Vaguely she sensed the easing of her body upon the couch and saw Synnelet's face strangely grotesque, as he leaned over her. Through a mist of tears his countenance seemed to become more and more indistinct. Shortly it disappeared entirely and Manon knew no more. She had fainted.

With the return of consciousness, Fabien sat up. His clothes were torn and his face and hands were covered with blood. He had not been stunned for very long because overhead he saw the sailors securely battening down the hatch cover through which he had been dropped.

It was a dark, gloomy hold into which he had been thrown, literally stinking with sweat and filth. Above the dim rays of a ship's lantern sent down a faint light that enabled him to discern the convicts, scores of them, chained like animals to stanchions in the ship's beams.

They stared at him curiously. His sudden advent in their midst had aroused them, for a moment, from their apathy of despair into which days of confinement in their foul quarters had cast them. One or two of the men laughed—meaningless laughs inspired by crazed minds.

Still in a half daze Fabien gazed around and became conscious of their curiousity, their mocking voices and the clang of their chains. It all tended to bring back a swift remembrance of his fate. Like a madman he lurched to his feet and climbed up the iron grating to the locked hatch above where he pounded, vainly. It was useless. His bruised hands were but puny instruments for the giant task. Even his shoulders pressed with all his strength failed to make any impression. It was hopeless. He was unequal to the task. With a groan of despair he descended into the hold, fell back on the floor and buried his head in his hands.

SALT RHEUM
All Over Her Hands and Between Fingers

Mrs. Walter Misner, Midville Branch, N.S., writes:—"I had salt rheum all over my hands, and especially between my fingers. It was impossible for me to put them in water, or do my house work.

"After trying medicines and salves, which did me no good, I heard of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS being so wonderful, and after taking two bottles I am entirely relieved of my trouble."

THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR — XXXVIII — by Nicholas Afonsky

The first flight across the United States was made by C. P. Rogers in 1911, when he tried for a $50,000 prize. He left New York September 17, reached Pasadena November 5—and lost the prize, which allowed only 30 days. He made 68 stops, and helped pay his expenses selling a beverage in the towns where he stopped.

Thought the transcontinental flight has since been made without stop in about 24 hours, Rogers' record was then remarkable. He had many slight accidents en route. Another 1911 record was made when E. B. Ely flew from the shore near San Francisco to the deck of the battleship Pennsylvania and back again.

It was about this time that the airplane was first used for military purposes, when the United States—February, 1911—sent Charles Hamilton flying over the Mexican border near Juarez to observe fighting there in a revolution. About the same time France used airplanes in military maneuvers in the Mediterranean.

The French airplanes—which then flew at an altitude of 1,500 feet, with a maximum of forty miles an hour, records which would seem insignificant today—were pronounced by the French war minister "marvelous instruments of war." A little later Pegoud, a French flier, for the first time looped the loop in an airplane in France.

SANTA VISITS S. A. TEMPLE

Large Building Jammed For Annual Concert and Christmas Tree.

GOOD PROGRAM.

Three hundred and fifty young people, augmented by another four hundred adults, fathers, mothers, aunts, uncles, grandpas and grandmas, crowded into the Salvation Army Temple last night for the annual Christmas tree and program.

Secretary George Leggett led the opening exercises, after which Y. P. S.M. R. C. Braund, undertook to introduce the chairman of the program. When the young people knew that the chairman was to be no other than that popular parsonage, Santa Claus, their joy knew no bounds. His entrance was greeted with loud shouts of welcome from all present.

The young people's band, under band leader, Joseph Halcrow, supplied the music for the evening. The first item was by the Primary class, and was entitled, "Christmas Parcels." They were trained under the direction of Mrs. Stanley Richardson, who was assisted by Mrs. C. Breadman and G. Reid. A Christmas carol, "Merry Christmas," was next sung by a group of boys under the supervision of Miss Gladys Sutherland. The boys who took part were: L. Boorman, W. and T. Rose, A. Cummings, F. Cunningham and Arthur and Harold Jones. An action song by five girls, P. Cox, D. Routley, D. French, R. Boorman and G. Mills, entitled "A Place for Everything" was ably given under the leadership of Muriel and Nellie Boorman.

Commandant Ham at this juncture of the program, read an appropriate Scripture reading. The Band of Love, gave a very prettily executed hoop drill. Miss Phylis Braund gave a recitation "A Boyless Town." Miss Gertrude Leggett, Miss Edith Halcrow, Miss Nellie Boorman, Miss Annie Rose and Mr. Ernest Braund took part in a dialogue with a strong moral, "That awful Temper." An instrumental quartette by Y. P. Band Leader J. Halcrow, C. and G. Kennedy and Vincent McDonald, was well rendered. Master Gerald Haig followed with an appropriate recitation, "A Christmas Dream."

The final item on the program was a tabelaux, entitled "The Story of Bethlehem,," in two scenes. It made a fitting climax to a splendid program.

Sergt.-Major R. C. Braund closed with prayer.

Santa Claus then commenced the distribution of gifts after which the happy crowd left for their various homes, thanking the Salvation Army for providing a most happy and enjoyable event. It was announced that a program and Christmas tree will also be given at the Brownton Temple Chamberlain Street, on Friday evening.

Bandmaster Frank Robinson impersonated the genial saint.

A false alarm was the reason for the fire brigade making a run to the corner of Sherbrooke and Park Sts., at 11.40 on Monday morning.

At 1.25 this morning the brigade rushed to the Peterborough Canoe Company's plant owing to the fact that when the sprinkling system was tried out the call had been automatically sent in. There was no fire.

FAINT TAPPING HEARD ON S-4

No Code Messages Contained in Signals Picked Up By Sister Ship.

STORM STILL RAGES.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 20. —(Canadian Press.)—Faint signs of life were still apparent this morning on the sunken submarine S-4. The oscillator of the S-8, a sister ship of the ill-fated craft, which is in a position near the wreck, picked up signals from the submerged vessel at 8.15 o'clock. The tapping heard early to-day carried no code messages. It was believed that the six men who have been imprisoned in the torpedo room of the S-4 since Saturday were now too weak to rap out on the side of the vessel the orderly messages in the International code which had been received on previous days.

As the predicament of the prisoners continued to grow more desperate, their comrades on the surface were held to inaction by the storm and rough water which made diving operations difficult and dangerous.

For the first time since the war Germany is to be represented in the Gordon Bennett Cup race in the United States this year.

ENTOMBED MEN MAKING EFFORT

Trying To Get Out of Sub, Say Officers of Sister Ship.

WEATHER STILL BAD.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.)— Faint sounds were heard from within the sunken submarine S-4 at eleven o'clock today, but these were not signals, officers of the submarine S-8, sister ship of the ill-fated craft, said. It appeared to those on the surface that the survivors of the S-4 were making vain efforts in their own behalf.

Meanwhile, weather conditions continued to render rescue attempts impossible. The wind and sea at that hour were much worse than at any time since the submarine was rammed by the coast guard destroyer Paulding off this harbor last Saturday. As the salvage crew impatiently awaited better sea conditions to renew diving operations, Capt. Ernest King, in charge of this department of the work, said there was but little hope that any of the imprisoned men would be taken out alive.

Drill Offered Fleet.

MAMARONECK, N.Y., Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press.)— A hollow drill which he said would pierce the shell of the submarine S-4 in fifteen minutes and permit connections for air and liquid food was described today by a telegram to Admiral Brumby aboard the U. S. S. Falcon, by Harry Davis, mechanical engineer of this city. The tool, evolved by Mr. Davis for use in the rescue of the submersibles crew could be made by any mechanic in an hour, he said, but woud require the use of an electric motor which could operate under water.

JAIL SENTENCE

could save half of his week's salary. The liquor purchased in the 44 days cost him $110.50, but he received back $18.60 for empties.

His wife and the other three citizens, when called upon for evidence, claimed that no liquor was purchased on Saturday night, nor was there any liquor consumed or produced.

J. A. O'Brien, who represented the accused, claimed that his man had given a satisfactory explanation of how the amount of liquor purchased was consumed.

Crown Attorney Hatton maintained that the onus was on the accused to prove what he did with this amount of liquor and that no man in the financial circumstances of the accused could afford $91.90 for liquor in 44 days.

His Worship, in delivering judgment, said: "The accused has not satisfied me so as to relieve himself of the burden placed on him by the Act. He was evasive when answering questions and from the quantity of liquor consumed and the wages obtained by him I must find him guilty of the offence and sentence him to two months in the common jail."

Those present were: Messrs. F. H. Dobbin, James Abraham, J. Edgar, Alderman Stocker, Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, Mesdames J. Fanning, E. Daynard, C. Wiggin, H. W. Darcy, S. Newhall.

The report of the agent, J. Edgar, showed 12 children in the Shelter during the month of November, with 3 brought in and 5 sent out. Other figures in the report were Applications for children, 5, children brought to Shelter (not wards 2, received from the Juvenile Court 2, children returned to parents (not wards) 3, children involved during month, 19, complaints received and investigations made, 7, mail received 40, mail sent out, 145, approximate mileage covered, 385 miles, visits outside of city, 3, court attendance 2, wards placed out 1, ward visited 4.

Mr Edgar also spoke of a ward of the society who is now confined in the Weston Sanitarium, without much hope of recoverly, also referring to a report received from Hastings regarding the ill treatment of a ward there. This report was found, on investigation, to be the outcome of a neighbors' quarrel and had no foundation in fact, the boy professing himself to be well treated. Another ward was placed with a farmer near Omemee and provided with food, but no clothes, and an allowance last year for his work of only $85.

Reference was made to the action of the Rotary Club, in entertaining the wards at dinner and giving each child a present, and it was decided to forward a letter of appreciation to the club and request that a member be appointed to represent the organization on the Board of the Children's Aid Society.

A letter sent to the society by the Orangemen of the city, and signed by Frank Millard was read by the secretary. This communication spoke of the excellent work done for the children at the Shelter and enclosed a donation of $21.15 towards the Christmas cheer fund. Donations to this fund have now reached the total of $122.15, and will be acknowledged in full at a later date. The sum of $6 was realized from a tea held recently at the Shelter. Rev. Dr. Blagrave expressed the appreciation of the members at the many donations made to this fund for Christmas cheer.

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church, was welcomed as a new member of the Board.

Alderman Stocker reported that about two hundred feet of fence at the Shelter had been blown down during the recent storm and would be rebuilt in the spring. It was decided to put the matter of rental of Shelter buildings in the hands of the Property committee, instead of leaving it to the secretary, as heretofore, Alderman Stocker considering this the proper procedure.

Committees for the coming year were re-appointed from last year's list as follows Property, F. H. Dobbin, J. Abraham, Alderman W. Stocker. Finance, R. H. Parsons, convenor, Mrs. H. W. Darcy. Purchasing, Mrs. W. H. Gibbs, convenor, rMs. J. Fanning Mrs. J. Welsh. Alderman Stocker was re-appointed supervisor of the Shelter grounds.

Convinced Fire Not Of Criminal Origin

QUEBEC, Que., Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—"I am convinced that the fire was not of a criminal origin," declared Fire Marshal Leclerc yesterday when he opened his investigation into the Hospice St. Charles disaster. To date thirty bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the old section of the institution which was conducted by the Sisters of the Order of the Good Shepherd for fatherless and motherless children. Twenty-four others are believed missing. A gang of fifty workmen are still at work searching the ruins. The Fire Marshal expressed the opinion that the present inquiry would establish the origin of the blaze and added that he did not think it necessary to place any guards at other institutions in the city.

'STILL IN RACE' SAYS ALDERMAN

Ald. N. E. Phelan Has No Intention of Retiring From Contest.

SEEKS MAYORALTY.

Still in race

Alderman Nagle Phelan when interviewed by The Examiner to-day said he had no intention of dropping out of the mayoralty contest and that he would in the race to the finish. A rumor was in circulation last night that Mr. Phelan intended to withdraw from the contest as he did not resign from the City Council at the Monday night meeting, but from all appearances there will be a real raec between Aldermen Phelan and Denne for the Chief Magistrate's chair for the year 1928.

MINISTER WANTS MORE INFORMATION

Hon. L. C. M. S. Amery is Studying Emigration Opportunies in Dominions.

LONDON, Dec. 21. — United Press —The chief purpose of the forthcoming visit to Canada of the Hon. L. C. M. S. Amery, Secretary of State for the Dominions, is the same as that which prompted his voyage to Australia and New Zealand, namely to investigate the possibilities of increasing British emigration, the British United Press understands.

He wants to learn at first hand the views of the various Dominions as to what new avenues of immigration can be opened up, what schemes can be formulated, and how the welfare of the immigrant can be best protected.

THE WEATHER

Lowest temperature last night, 15 degrees; highest yesterday 22 degrees. To-morrow will be our shortest day. From then onward the evenings will noticeably lengthen; the mornings to a lesser degree. Yesterday I had something regarding the winter of 1869. A lady has brought to my attention the fact that snow first fell that year on Oct. 4th, and some at least remained in the fence corners and sheltered places until Oct. 17, when sufficient came for good sleighing. I also have a clipping from an old paper, which I believe was written by F. H. Dobbin, regarding this winter: "A time to be remembered by those who experienced its rigors and its inconvenience was the 'big snow.' The heaviest and deepest snow within the memory of man in this district, certainly no snow ever since has equalled it. Snow began to fall on Sunday March 13, and fell continuously until Monday early in the afternoon. The fall commenced again on Tuesday morning, the 15th, all day, all night, all day Wednesday and Wednesday night, and on Thursday all day. Thursday night was calm and clear. More than three feet of snow covered the ground on the level. Then on Saturday it started in to snow again. The fall was heavy and blinding. Little wind and large heavy flakes. Snow fell all day Saturday and Sunday and Sunday night. By this time people were getting alarmed. Every one had shovelled snow with double diligence, and patience all week. Here was everything to be done over again. On Sunday all churches were deserted. On Monday all schools were closed. Business was at a standstill. Five feet of snow on the level was a good average. George street was a sight. When the sidewalks had been cleared those walking about could not see the other side of the street and the line of vision only took in the second storey windows." When the snow began to melt it went off in a hurry, and was followed by the greatest flood the city has ever seen, and George street was navigible by small boats as far north as Dalhousie street.—W. LEATHER GOODS TO COST MORE

B. F. Ackerman Points Out That Hides Have Doubled in Price.

SMALL STOCK ON HAND.

That the prices of boots, shoes, harness and all other lines of leather goods have moved and will continue on an upward trend, was the opinion expressed by B. F. Ackerman, of the B. F. Ackerman Co., George Street, in conversation with The Examiner on Tuesday afternoon. "The prices of shoe leather have increased several times since June and only that we chanced to have a considerable quantity of material on hand, our prices, of necessity, would have increased more than they have. Harness leather has gone up twenty-five per cent in the same length of time and hides have reached almost double their old prices," said he, adding that it is becoming difficult to obtain leather of correct weight. The subject under discussion was the account of the recent meeting of tanners held in Toronto.

Mr. Ackerman also quoted some very interesting figures showing that since January 1, 1927 his firm has purchased 22,732 sides of harness leather, each side weighing approximately twenty-one pounds. This quantity equals about twenty-three carloads. About 15,155 sides of leather were also used in the manufacture of horse collars. He made these statements to show that since a factory the size of the local one requires such a supply, the total demand will be difficult to meet, owing to the decrease in hide production.

Relationship which oftimes exist between industries of apparently separate and distinct fields of operation and the manner in which an irregularity in the course of one may react upon the other was quite clearly and emphatically shown in the resume of factors contributing to the increase in prices of all lines of leather goods, as given by Chairman S. P. Beal ,of Lindsay, in the account of the annual meeting of the tanners' section of the Toronto Board of Trade.

"A study of the tanning industry for the past year," said Mr. Beal, "indicates that the world is going to see leather prices on a much higher level for some time to come." He outlined the reasons for this. After the war, with credit easy, many new concerns sprang up. There was overproduction. A surplus of hides and leather and leather products resulted, and while this was being disposed of there came a depression in the leather line. Fewer cattle were raised, and that meant less leather, and so the pendulum had swung to the extreme of a shortage of nides and leather.

This shortage has been accentuated by the fact that the human population of the world was constantly increasing and the world's supply of cattle constantly diminishing. As an example, where as twenty-five years ago there had been a population on this continent of approximately 58,000,000 people, at the present time there was a population of about 125,000,000—on increase of some 67,000,000 people. On the other hand, the number of cattle had decreased from about 65,000,000 twenty-five years ago to about 53,000,000 at the present time, or a decrease of about 12,000,000 head.

Another feature that has developed of recent years is the demand for less beef and a smaller type of beef," he continued. "This not only reduces the poundage of beef, but also seriously affects the hide situation by the reduced poundage of hides off these smaller and younger cattle.

"Under the above circumstances the world's hide markets today are bare of hides, and the prices of all cattle hides are today from 60 per cent. to more than 100 per cent. higher than they were a year ago.

Today there were no surplus stocks of leather. This was very clearly shown in a few figures. Five years ago there was enough belting and sole leather on hand for a year's supply. This had now been reduced to a 45-day supply, the lowest on record. All other leathers have been reduced in approximately the same proportion.

New Reward Wheat Does Not Mature As Early As Garnet, Says Motherwell

REGINA, Sask., December 21 (Canadian Press). — The new Reward wheat which has aroused interest of agrarians throughout the country, matures earlier than Marquis, but not quite as early as Garnet, Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Federal Minister of Agriculture, said when discussing the merits of the new wheat during the course of an interview yesterday.

"We know also that in some districts the yield is slightly less than Garnet," Mr. Motherwell said, in referring to Reward wheat.

"The flour derived from it is without spot or blemish. It has the strongest straw of possibly any wheat to withstand wind and storm. The results of this year's exhibitions have shown that it is a prize-winner; and last, and one of the most important points of all, this year's experiments have shown that it has thus far shown more immunity from rust than any other of its competitors.

"When the new wheat began to capture jewellery, first at the Toronto Exhibition—it was brought into prominence ,and when Herman Trelle of Wembley, Alta., captured first place for a bushel of spring wheat at Chicago, its qualities were further enhanced. This decided the Department to place one thousand bushels with leading farmers who would report back on its developments. Since the Exhibition at Toronto, the great demand for the wheat has about gobbled up all that has been prepared for circulation."

STATE OFFICERS COMB COUNTRY FOR SLAYER OF MARION PARKER

Eight Thousand Men Engaged in Man Hunt For Edward Hickman.

ACCOMPLICE ARRESTED.

Investigators Believe That Several Youths May Be Involved in Crime.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Defying capture at the hands of the greatest force of officers ever assembled for a man hunt in the West, William Edward Rickman, identified as the kidnapper and slayer of Marian Parker, 12-year-old school girl, was still at large late yesterday.

Spurred on by the positive identification of Hickman as the youth responsible for the abduction and killing the child, and the arrest of another youth, Milton Jakowsky, believed to have been an accomplice, police in Los Angeles and Southern California pressed forward the hunt relentlessly.

Eight thousand men combed Los Angeles and its environs, while other thousands prosecuted a search through the Pacific Southwest for the killer, on whose head a reward of $100,000 has been placed.

In the arrest of Jakowsky, authorities believe they have found the man who gave Hickman information concerning the Parker family during the kidnapper's ransom negotiations with Perry H. Parker, bank official and father of Marian.

Jakowsky, in the belief of investigators, acted as an intermediary for Hickman, who graduated as an honor student at Central High School in Kansas City in 1926 and is said to be 19 years old.

Police said Jakowsky came to Los Angeles five weeks ago from Washington, D.C., where he is believed to have been a government employee. Jakowsky is known to have been friendly with both the Parkers and Hickman. His age was given as 25 and he was said to be single. Earlier in the day it was reported Jakowsky was from Kansas City.

Jakowsky attempted to overpower guards at the city jail yesterday morning, but was subdued by four men and locked in another cell while crying that he would take his own life.

Guard Jail

A heavy guard was maintained about the jail because of threats voiced on the streets against the prisoner. Although taken into custody Monday night, his name was withheld until noon yesterday.

Announcement that Hickman had been identified as the youth who lured the girl away from school last Thursday and on Sunday night delivered her torso to her father in exchange for a ransom of $1,500, was made after police had compared fingerprints from the slayer's car and ransom notes with those in Hickman's police record. His photograph from the police files was identified by Miss Leona Britten, teacher, who was tricked into permitting Marian

DASH PRODUCES SHORT LIBERTY

Constable Maker Quickly Recaptures Edward Howard—On Way To Jail.

FREE FOR FEW MINUTES.

Edward S. Howard made a short bolt from custody yesterday afternoon. He was being taken by Provincial Officer Joseph Stewart from the police court, where he had been sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley to two months in the common jail for selling or keeping for sale liquor at his home on Armour Road. As Mr. Stewart got the prisoner to the bottom of the stairs, Howard pulled the officer's hat dwn over his face and made a dash for the open.

Provincial Constable N. F. Maker was upstairs in the police court at the time in conference with Magistrate Langley. He heard the scuffle between the prisoner and Mr. Stewart and immediately rushed to the floor below. When he got to the street the prisoner had disappeared. Two men were standing at the corner of Water and Simcoe streets and they told him the man had rushed east on Simcoe Street. Constable Maker followed and caught the fugitive in a yard behind the Peterborough Cereal.

Interviewed to-day Constable Maker said he was not contemplating taking any further action against the prisoner.

FOWL LARGE THIS WINTER

MARKET HELD TO-DAY.

Most of the birds that have been preparing for Christmas for months back came to the farmers' market this morning. here were so many of them that a probable large number will return on Saturday, when the real holiday market will take place. hey are coming in large sizes this year. Outsize turkeys and geese were the rule with plenty at 17 and 18 pounds and one noble gobbler tipping the scales at twenty-six and one half pounds. Hen turkeys sold at 48 and 50 cents a pound, with gobblers at 46 cents. Geese were priced from 28 to 30 cents, ducks at 30 cents and chickens from 27 to 35 cents a pound.

Butter ranged in price from 40 to 45 cents a pound and eggs, commencing at 70 cents a dozen, dropped later to 60 cents.

There were many vendors of other types of merchandise in the basket section this morning, including soft little woollen things for the baby, tiny knitted jackets selling at a dollar apiece, with pink and blue silk trimmings, artificial flowers in waxed paper and in wool, woollen stockings and mittens, iced Christmas cake selling at $2 for a five pound section, summer savory for dressing, at a nickel a bunch, everlastings in bunches at 25 and 50 cents and mushrooms at 60 cents a pound.

In the basket section, a small assistant to her grandmother, selling butter and fowl, was Clarabelle, with yellow curly hair, and blue eyes. In announcing his candidature, Mr. Hunter pointed out that he is now in a position to give plenty of time to the duties of the position, and to devote his efforts to municipal matters.

HOPE FOR MEN ON SUNKEN SUB IS ABANDONED

Sister Ship Moves Away as Messages From Mates Cease.

DIVER GOING DOWN.

Attempt Will Be Made To Attach Air Line To Hull—Sea is Choppy.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., December 21 (Canadian Press). — The submarine S-8 moved to-day from her post beside the S-4. The S-8 had been under orders to remain in position as long as there was any hope of communicating with her sister ship. Her action in moving away was interpreted as meaning that there was no longer a possibility that life remained on board S-4 and that no more signals might be looked for. Two other submarines, the S-5 and the S-3, were at anchor in the inner harbor, a mile and a half from the scene of the disaster.

When the Associated Press boat pulled alongside of the Falcon, Diver Tom Eadie wigwagged to it that an attempt would be made to send a diver over as soon as the Falcon was lined up with the submarine tender Bushnell and the minesweeper Lark. The minesweeper Mallard, which had taken part in the previous operations, was not in line.

Eadie, who was the first diver to go down to the S-4 last Sunday, said the rescuers would attempt to tap a hole in the hull of the submarine at the torpedo room and attach an air line. This will require the use of underwater floodlights such as were used in the S-51 salvaging operations. It will be necessary to weld the tapping machine to the hull. The machine is so constructed that when the hull is punctured and the drill withdrawn ,the valve automatically is closed. An air line is then screwed on and air forced in.

The sea off Wood End this morning was flat, but as the hours passed it grew choppy and threatened once more to hold up all diving operations. The operation described by Eadie, the officials said, required the best water conditions.

NO MORE SIGNALS.

NEW LONDON, Conn., December 21 (Canadian Press). — No further signals have been heard from the submarine S-4, Rear-Admiral Frank Brumby, commander of the rescue fleet, reported in a wireless message picked up here to-day. He announced that the rescue ships were getting in position to resume diving operations.

MAY CALM SEAS.

BOSTON, December 21 (Canadian Press). — The Boston Navy Yard to-day announced that the destroyer Sturtevant, now under way for the scene of the sinking of submarine S-4, carried apparatus with which an attempt might be made to calm the troubled seas with compressed air. The use of compressed air was suggested by Phillip Brashear, of Princeton University, who recently set forth the idea that ships anchored in mid-ocean might afford landing places for trans-Atlantic planes by calming the water around them in a

HEAVY INCREASE GRAIN SHIPMENTS

Over Three Weeks of Same Period of Last Year.

ST. JOHN, N.B., December 21 (Canadian Press). — Approximately 3,400,000 bushels of grain have been delivered to vessels in St. John port in less than three weeks since the first consignment was cleared for overseas ,compared with some 2,940,000 bushels during the same period last year, it was announced yesterday afternoon This includes 2,648,000 bushels from the C.P.R. elevators and 760,000 bushels delivered from the C.N.R. elevator.

At the present time there are about 1,442,000 bushels stored in both elevators including 1,342,000 in the C.P.R. and 100,000 in the C.N.R. plant, it was stated, in addition to some 667 carloads in the Canadian Pacific Yards and about 621 carloads on the Canadian National tracks awaiting storage, totalling approximately 2,596,000 bushels.

Hon. Dr. Foster, chairman of the St. John Harbor Commission, announced that the plans under way for submission to the Government on improvements in the harbor, which were before the Board for review, were progressing satisfactorily. Four tramp steamers are scheduled to arrive here on Friday, and three or four liners are due here on the week-end.

E. Bruce Fowler, Chairman of the Board of Education, announced to-day his intention of seeking re-election as trustee. He has served six years on the Board.

NAVY EXPERTS ABANDON HOPE OF SAVING MEN

Have Practically No Hope of Rescuing Six Entombed Sailors.

SIGNALS CEASE.

Plan To Gain Entrance To Steel Chamber Through Listening Gear.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press.)— The stillness of the grave reigned last night in the depths of Provincetown harbor where lies the shattered bulk of U. S. S. S-4 and her crew of two score.

Not since an hour before noon had the rescue fleet above, grimly holding at anchor against a seemingly interminable gale, been able to catch the faintest echo of the tapping which for sixty hours signalled the pathetic watch of six men trapped in the forward torpedo room.

About 11 a.m. the microphone of the S-8, sister ship of the stricken submersible, recorded the barest whispers of sound through the double barrier of steel hull and sea. While conveying no intelligible message, they were interpreted as indicating that the dying men, cut off from succor by steel, sea and storm, were making a last desperate attempt to do something for themselves.

Then the stillness of the grave came over the dark hulk lying prostrate on the ocean floor.

While the hearts of naval officers directing the rescue rose in their throats, the faint ray of hope remaining was enough to keep them feverishly preparing for the moment when the seas might quiet enough to permit the resumption of diving.

Slight Ray of Hope.

It was pointed out that life might linger in the black gaseous chamber for many hours after the men had grown too weak to respond to signals and had lapsed into unconsciousness.

After seven hours of sending oscillator signals which officers believed must have reverberated loudly in the forward chamber of the S-4, the S-8 at 620 o'clock yesterday morning obtained a faint message, three taps, interpreted by some as an acknowledgment.

"Your wife and your mother are praying for you," the S-8 was trying to tell Lieut. Graham Newell Fitch, one of the six men. Whether Liept. Fitch was conscious to receive the message could not be learned.

Two hours later the S-8 heard a faltering tapping, as though some one in the torpor of suffocation were helplessly trying to tap a code message. Efforts to establish communication with the struggling men failed.

Officers pinned their hopes on the possibility of getting air to the men beofre death might end their valiant struggle.

If an air line could be connected with the chamber, Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, commander of the First Royal Naval district, said, "we can take our time cutting a larger hole to get in oxygen and other supplies. If we can get them in, they can live for months."

Saved By Miracle.

But the admiral concluded that the men could be saved by "nothing short of a miracle."

Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, in charge of the rescue work, was held aboard the mine sweeper Falcon in Provincetown harbor all day by the steady gale which swept over Cape Cod.

Both Captain Ernest T. King, in charge of diving operations and Lieut.-Commander Edward Ellsburg, in charge of salvage work, agreed that there remained practically no hope of saving the six.

The hope that some of the men might be able to project themselves out in torpedo cases ended when submarine experts pointed out that there would be no compressed air to work the projection tubes.

Officers had expected that at least one of the men might brave the practically suicidal effort to crawl through one of the torpedo tubes, but it was believed that none of them had the strength to make the attempt when no responses came to signals.

The torpedo tubes are about 21

REMUS FOUND NOT GUILTY ON INSANITY PLEA

Jury Finds On Only Grounds Which Gained Freedom From Chair.

SHOT HIS WIFE.

Will Go To State Hospital Unless Convinces Jury is Now Sane.

Courtroom Cincinnati, Dec. 21.—United Press. — George Remus yesterday was found not guilty of the murder of his wife, Imogene, the jury deciding he was insane on Oct. 6th, the day of the killing.

The verdict was:

"We, the jury, on the issue joined, find the defendant not guilty of murder as he stands charged in the indictment, on the sole ground of insanity."

Remus will not now go free unless he succeeds in convincing a probate court that he now is sane. Otherwise he will be sent to a state hospital.

The jury of ten men and two women were given the case at 12.49 p.m. They sent word to the court that they had reached a verdict at 3.54 p.m.

The case went to the jury at noon.

The judge's decision was a severe blow to Remus who despite his technical defence of insanity has been pleading the unwritten law. Frequently he has charged his wife with misconduct with Franklin L. Dodge, former department of justice operative.

Under the judge's charge five verdicts are possible: Guilty of murder, first degree, carrying a sentence of death in the electric chair. Guilty of murder, first degree, with recommendation of mercy, carrying a sentence of life imprisonment, without hope of pardon. Guilty of murder, second degree, carrying a sentence of life imprisonment, with eligibility of parole beginning after the tenth year. Guilty of manslaughter carrying a sentence of from one to 20 years of imprisonment. Not guilty, on the sole ground of insanity.

WILL MAKE ANOTHER ATTEMPT

Possibly the most persevering of all would-be trans-Atlantics fliers is Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson, who is now awaiting a break in the weather to permit her to hop off from Curtiss Field, New York, for Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, from which place she proposes to make an attempt to span the Atlantic despite adverse weather conditions. Croydon, England, is her first objective, but if all goes well and the gasoline supply holds out she will make a non-stop flight to Le Bourget field , near Paris. Mrs. Grayson's pilot is Lieut. Oskar Omdahl, of the Norwegian navy, and her navigator is Brice Goldsborough. Goldsborough was in her crew last October when Mrs. Grayson made several unsuccessful attempts to make a flight from Old Orchard, Maine, to Denmark. The picture shows, from left to right, Brice Goldsborough, Mrs. Grayson and Oskar Omdahl, standing in front of their amphibian plane, The Dawn.

POLICE CHASE AUTO THIEVES LONG DISTANCE

Darkness Prevents Further Trailing of Men at Campbellford.

CAR RECOVERED.

One of Three Men Who Brought It From Trenton Is Under Arrest.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 21. — The local police did not succeed in capturing the auto thieves who entered Campbellford late Monday night, but they did succeed in making them show a clean pair of heels after an all day chase through the town and surrounding country. It was reported through the usual channels that an automobile had been stolen from a citizen in Trenton about nine-thirty Sunday evening. The car was described as an Essex coach of the 1926 model, color black, and having the serial number, 413881. It carried Ontario license markers number 316231.

As a general rule, auto thieves do not frequent this locality, preferring to remain in the more thickly populated districts, but on Monday evening the stolen car stopped at Blue Oak Service Station to fill up with gas. There were three men in it: Frank Madden, Clarence Hankinson and George Wells, all of Toronto. Earl Turner, who operates the service station, recognized the marker numbers as those reported belonging to the stolen car. He at once notified the police that the car was there. Chief Light left at once to arrest the men, but Hankinson and Madden had overheard the conversation and made good their escape. When the chief arrived he found only Wells sitting in the rear seat. Hankinson and Madden had completely disappeared.

About three o'clock in the morning Hankinson and Madden appeared at the home of James Parcels and tried to force an entrance. Parcels lives on the south side of the C.N.R. tracks and is in charge of the town dump. His efforts to resist the entrance of the two marauders were countered by threats of arson. So sincere did these threats sound that Parcels decided discretion to be the better part of valor and allowed them to enter his home. One inside, the fugitives kept close watch over the Parcels family and not till about one-thirty in the afternoon did Parcels have an opportunity to lay information. He got word to Major J. M. Bygott, station agent, and asked him to notify the police. The Major at once got in touch with Chief Light and reported that suspicious characters were hiding out at James Parcels' residence.

Chief Knocked Out

The Chief at once commandeered a motor car belonging to Joseph Kelleher and proceeded to Parcels'. He did not instruct the driver of the car or his passenger to wait or assist him further, so they departed. Chief Light tried to gain admission to the

FEAR FRESH RED OUTBREAK

Reported Chinese Commanders Preparing To Lead Siege Against Canton.

EXECUTIONS CONTINUE.

SHANGHAI, December 21 (Canadian Press). — The reign of terror in Canton of the Nationalist campaign to crush Bolshevism out of existence is still continuing, while reports from Hankow indicate that executions are continuing in the Wuhan cities of Hankow, Wuchang, and Hanyang.

Conditions at Canton are still most serious and a fresh Communist coup to regain possession of the city is not excluded from the possibilities of the near future.

Reports of military preparations by Chinese commanders which are considered likely to lead to a siege of Canton, assumed greater consistency yesterday, and led to the advance of Chinese troops under the militarists who now control that city to meet the expected danger from Nanking. This is leaving the city unprotected, and it is feared possibly a prey to a new coup on the part of the Communists to regain control.

The panic in Canton is growing, and great haste is noted in the transference of valuable property to the foreign district of Shameen Island for safety.

There has been a considerable exodus to Hong Kong and elsewhere.

Hankow despatches yesterday told of the execution of more than twenty Chinese Reds, including four bobbed-hair girls, over the week-end.

"Down with Imperialism!" one of the girls shouted before she was executed, while a mob of soldiers and coolies which had gathered shouted, "Kill the Communists. Down with Bolshevism!"

Many Executed.

Advice from Japanese sources say that Communist executions are still going on at Canton averaging over one hundred daily and that bodies are scattered about the streets The bodies of 12 Soviet consular officials were said to be lying in front of the Peace Preservation Bureau.

About 500 bodies were burned by Chinese hospital authorities, while 200 were buried by the police and charitable organizations. The burned areas in Canton are desolate, nothing remaining except shattered walls here and there. Canton itself is now under control of General Chang Fak-Wei, who is being opposed by General Li Chai-Sum, one-time dictator of the city.

Williams Made Pianos

Correct Musical Training Demands a True-Toned Piano

TEACHERS of piano everywhere agree that the progress of the student depends to a large degree upon the kind of practice piano used.

The student's ear must be trained to accurately distinguish the fine variations of tone, and in this training a true-toned instrument is most essential.

WILLIAMS-MADE PIANOS
possess a tone both true and beautiful

Years of concentration on the tone problem have resulted in the development of a remarkably true and perfect tone—which has given to Williams-made instruments the enviable, world-wide reputation they enjoy.

$500 AWARDED IN CIVIL ACTION AFTER ASSAULT

Woman Attacked Gets Damages From Intruder Into Home.

HEARD IN COBOURG.

Mrs. Rose Hill is Plaintiff in Suit Against Alfred Yarrow of Cobourg.

COBOURG, Dec. 21.—In the case of Hill versus Yarrow, a civil action in which Mrs. Hill claimed $1,000.00 damages from Yarrow for the injuries she received when attacked by him, judgment was given awarding Hill $500.00 and Yarrow to pay the costs of the court, just half the amount for which the plaintiffs had sued for. Some very sordid evidence was given by both sides of the case. Not till ten o'clock on Monday night did the bench complete the charge to the jury and allow them to retire from the court to deliberate as to their verdict. A minute or two before 10.30 they returned and judgment was given as above.

This civil action arises as the result of a criminal action previously heard in the courts here, in which Yarrow was charged with indecent assault and improper conduct against Mrs. Rose Hill. The offence was alleged to have been committed on the night of July 15th last, when Hill was on night duty at the C.N.R. station or yards. Both men are railway employees in the town of Cobourg. Hill is a married man with three small children. His wife was alone in the house with the children when the offence was committed.

Of the twelve jurors whose names were called, two were challenged by F. M. Field, K.C., counsel for the plaintiff. A. R. Willmott, for the defence, had no objections to any of the selected men.

Mr. Field asked His Honor to have the public excluded from the court, but Judge Huycke ruled that the courts were public affairs, and that he saw no reason for such action as yet. He did agree, however, that he might ask the public to leave later on in the case.

Mr. Field then began his case with a lengthy address to the jury, in which he enumerated the numerous details of the case and incidents adherent thereto. Mr. Willmott, for the defence, interrupted to ask that all witnesses who had not given evidence be asked to leave the court. This removed all but one man, who had given evidence in the criminal proceedings on a previous occasion. Another appeal to His Honor to exclude the public was not granted. Judge Huycke replied that he did not see why he should do it, and Mr. Field continued to read portions of evidence from the criminal proceedings and from the examination for discovery. This brought an occasional objection from Mr. Willmott, who claimed that Mr. Field was not reading enough of this evidence to make the statements fully understood. Some of the objections were sustained, but the majority were ruled out by the Judge.

Dr. E. Hayden was the first witness called. He stated that he had been a medical practitioner in the town of Cobourg for thirty years and that Mrs. Hill was one of his patients. When called to the Hill home on July 16, he had found her rather pale and nervous, but not hysterical. There were scratches and bruises at various places about her body, which were described by him. He thought Mrs. Hill was the sort of woman who would suffer a great deal without complaining. She was not inclined to be uncommonly nervous, and her physical condition was usually good.

As Mr. Willmott did not wish to question Dr. Hayden, Mrs. Hill was the next witness called. Mindful of her weakened physical and nervous condition, Mr. Field asked that a chair be placed in the witness box for her, but Mrs. Hill preferred to stand, although His Honor Judge Huycke did not hesitate to grant the request. She did, however, accept the glass of water which was offered her by Mr. Field.

She testified that she had met her husband, Frank Hill, after he had returned from overseas service during the war. They were married ten years ago, and had three children, aged 6 years, 3 years and an infant of 9 months. During their ten years of married life, they had resided continuously in the town of Cobourg.

On the night in question, July 15, she had returned to her home shortly after ten o'clock, and put her children to bed. Then she had lain down, fully clothed, with them to await her husband's arrival for his usual midnight supper.

Questioned by her counsel, she said that they made home brew for their own consumption, but did not sell any of it. Her husband drank on an average two bottles a day. It was not intoxicating in the least.

The first intimation she had of Yarrow's presence was when she saw him peeking in at the bedroom door. When she got up from the bed, he seized her and grappled with her, trying to choke her, and twice throwing her to the floor. Her two children were crying, but the baby was still asleep. The struggle led to the kitchen, and she received a bruise on her back where she was pushed against the stove. Her attempt to seize the electric iron as a weapon of defence was frustrated by Yarrow, but her screams had attracted the neighbors. Mrs. Joseph Andrews was the first to arrive, and with her arrival, Yarrow took a hasty departure, vanishing into the darkness of the night.

Questioned further Mrs. Hill admitted that on one occasion she had given a bottle of home brew to Yarrow but stoutly denied that he had ever paid fifty cents for it. It was something which Yarrow had said that caused Hill to come to court the next morning. Later in the day her women friends returned to assist in caring for her injuries, and Dr. Hayden had been summoned to examine and dress them. They were very sore she said, and healed slowly. She had felt their effects "nearly all summer." As a result of the ordeal she was a nervous wreck and afraid to be left alone in the house.

Mrs. Hill descriped Yarrow as being dark, complexioned and short of stature. He was wearing a dark suit, and light peak cap, she said. She identified him when the police brought him to her home for that purpose following the alleged assault.

Mr. Willmott for the defence took over the questioning of Mrs. Hill.

Police Court.

Gordon Althouse, who was brought before Magistrate Floyd, Cobourg, charged with a serious offence against a girl of Healey Falls, will be sent up for trial in the higher courts. After taking evidence in a closed session of the court, Magistrate Floyd allowed Althouse out on three thousand dollars bail. Of this amount one thousand was furnished by his mother and the remainder by a friend of the family.

Lorne Kenneth Wicke Stratford, appeared before His Honor Judge Huycke in court here yesterday, and was allowed to go on suspended sentence. He was charged with breaking into a store in Bowmanville and the strong evidence favorable to the boy's character played a major part in securing the mercy of the bench. He is, however, under bond of $500 to appear in court whenever called upon by the Crown Attorney to do so.

George Murphy found guilty on the same charge, could not display such a good character as Wicke and was remanded in custody till Friday, Dec. 23, when sentence will be passed on him.

CHRISTMAS CONCERTS

CAMPBELLFORD UNITED CHURCH.

The annual Christmas entertainment of the Sunday school of St. John's United church was held in the auditorium of the church last night. The program was of its usual exceptionally good and interesting calibre.

Miss Tuite elocutionist from Belleville, contributed five numbers of the program. Miss Tuite is very popular as an elocutionist where Campbellford audiences are concerned and last night's numbers served to add greatly to the favor which she has already won here.

The junior choir supplied the greater part of the musical numbers and these were very pleasing indeed. Among their numbers were: Star of Peace, This Christmas Time, in which the solo part was taken by Miss Essie Cassan, Bethlehem Town and Judah Sing. The Wondrous Story, a quartette, was sung by Misses Thelma Hall, Nellie Haig, Dorothy Hensen and Essie Cassan, all members of the junior or Sunday school choir of the church. The choir also sang, "Sing We Merry Christmas," as the final number before the Crismas tree gifts were distributed. Rose, Wonderful Rose, an orchestra number, played by the church orchestra, was also very well received.

Perhaps the most pleasant number on the program was the presentations made by the Rev. Ernest Harston to Miss Enid Richardson, Miss Dorothy Henson and Eric Scott of a five dollar gold piece each for the three best essays on alcohol and the Human Body. These essays were exceptionally well written and showed a considerable amount of study and preparation on the part of each and every participant and particularly those who were the prize winners. George Lucy was pleasantly surprised when presented with a purse of money as a token of appreciation of the members of the junior choir for his assistance in their work during the past year. Mrs. C. W. Turner, her daughter Miss Cherry Turner, and Mrs. William Ashton also received gifts from their Sunday school classes.

The most interesting number of all for the children was, of course, the Christmas tree and the nuts and candy which it held for them. Since Santa Claus was unable to be present in person, he lent a suit of his clothes to Mr. Maguire and instructed him as to the proper method of distributing the gifts to each child. There were a great many children eager for their donations from good old St. Nicholas and the chairman, G. A. Kingston, was called upon to assist Santa's assistant. When every child present had received a gift, the concert closed with the National Anthem.

S.S. NO. 11, SMITH.

The Christmas concert of S.S. No. 11, Smith, was held in the school on Monday evening, December 19, when a well-rendered program was given by the children under the leadership of the teacher, Miss Victoria Robinson. The children were assisted in their program by local talent. The program is as follows:

Chairman's address—Mr. Elmer Milburn.
Welcome Song—By the School.
A Dialogue—"Billy's Mishap."
Chorus—"Christmas Welcome," by the School.
Dialogue—"Away Down East."
Chorus by School—"Solomon and Levi."
Small Play—"The Marvellous Quack."
Instrumental duet—Mrs. Ernest Rosborough and Mr. Earl Rosborough.
Duet—Mr and Mrs. Harold Lewis.
Reading—"The Courtship of Larry O'Dee," by Ross Harrison.
Chorus by Primer Class—"Away in the Manger."
Solo—"While Shepherds Watched," Elmer Milburn.
Play—"The Shepherds."

The children were delighted with the appearance of Santa Claus, and a very enjoyable half-hour was spent unloading the Christmas tree.

TO BE ELEVATED.

Archbishop R. M. Rouleau of Quebec, who is in line for the next red hat of cardinalship, it is rumored. The appointment is expected at the next consistory of the Sacred College, which is to be held in Rome a few days before Christmas. There has been no Canadian cardinal since the death of Cardinal Begin in Quebec several years ago.

NAVY EXPERTS ABANDON HOPE

inches in diameter and 21 feet long. Such an escape would involve the closing of the inside valve after climbing into the [illegible] opening the outside walve then struggling through the slippery, shiny barrel against the great pressure of the water at the 100 foot depth to be thrown to the surface by the pressure. The man would be unconscious upon reaching the surface, naval men said.

The rescuers had directed their efforts toward a descent to the wreck at low tide at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, but the plan was thwarted by the relentless gale.

New Plan.

Captain King's plan of action was centred upon a new means of entering the steel chamber—through the listening gear, or S-C tube, something which he believed had never been attempted before.

Commander Ellsburg said in discussing the plan: "We are full of bright ideas, if we can only have favorable weather." The commander had planned to don a diver's suit and survey the situation in person yesterday.

Another plan thwarted by the weather was that of raising the prow of the 231 foot submarine with two pontoons until it should project above the surface. Three of six pontoons dispatched from the Brooklyn navy yard were in readiness in the harbor and two more were on the way in tow of the tug Iuka, which lost one in the gale off New London.

Even the hopes pinned upon the presence of an officer among the six men, who would make them lie quietly and thus prolong their lives, waned yesterday when it appeared that Lieut. Fitch may have collapsed from suffocation

In communicating with rescuers Monday, Lieut. Fitch stoutly tapped code messages against the steel chamber wall. The only intelligible message from the men yesterday—the three taps of acknowledgment at 6.20 a.m., was thought to have been sent by some one else, while his superior was too weak to swing the hammer against the wall.

"Is there any hope?" was the pathetic message last received from the lieutenant.

At that time he laboriously tapped out the names of his companions, and perhaps thus spent his remaining strength.

Might Live Until To-day.

With the prediction of Lieut. Charles B. Momson, navy submarine expert at Washington, that the six men might live until this morning, the rescue officers continued to assemble apparatus and plan a campaign of action on the first break of the storm.

The destroyer Sturtevant made a trip to the Charleston Navy Yard and brought back various instruments and gear, including apparatus from Washington for treating divers overcome by suffocation, with helium. Another valuable instrument obtained was a device to clamp to the wall of the submarine and bore a hole communicating with an air line from above.

house and was slugged over the head with a bottle. The thieves took advantage of his momentary stupefaction to effect their escape. In a few seconds Chief Light had recovered and called on Major Bygott to notify Night Constable Duncalfe and instruct him to get a car and come to his assistance at once.

In a very few minutes Constable Duncalfe was on the job and found that the fugitives had a least half a hour start on him. After arranging with the Chief to head them off at a certain point if possible, Constable Duncalfe set out in hot pursuit. The trail led west through the town dump and then took on a southerly direction. The officer followod it through the Kelleher and Scott farms as far as the Sixth concession, where he was to meet Chief Light. Instead he met John Scott, farmer, Mr. Scott stated that the men had passed there and in this statement, Mr. Jones, who had also arrived on the scene, bore him out. He further stated that they had crossed the road and attempted to enter the swamp which borders it. Constable Duncalfe found where the tracks led into the brush and followed quickly. The trail led him in a circular course back to a wire fence. This the fugitives had climbed and walked along for some twenty feet to a post. From the top of the post they had jumped as far as they were able. From there the trail led to the farm house of William Blakely, about a mile further south and east.

In response to the officer's questions, Mrs. Blakeley told of seeing the men pass, and that they were bareheaded. She had given each a serviceable covering for his head.

Across the Dam.

Believing that he was closing the distance between himself and the fleeing man, Duncalfe hurried on toward the Bob Robertson farm. There the trail led him across the road and through the brush over the hill to the summer cottage belonging to T. J. Horkins, Campbellford. This is a two-storey building of frame construction, and is located on the west bank of the river at a point known as Haig's Reach. Mr. Duncalfe, when interviewed last night, said that he expected to find them there, but that the trail led right past and they had not stopped. Instead, they had turned north, toward the paper mill and town. He followed their trail to within a hundred yards of Number 10 power house, and there the trail circled again, leading back to the Horkins cottage. Once more Officer Duncalfe expected to find them there, but once more the trail led past and this time across Number 9 dam, past the power house, across the locks, and directly to the main road.

Here the trailing was not as simple a matter as it had been, and the officer was unable to find it for about a hundred feet. When he picked it up a few minutes later, it was leading in an easterly direction towards the village of Hoards. Darkness was fast closing in, and the trail was becoming more and more difficult to distinguish. Finally it became an absolute possibility to follow it further, and Mr. Duncalfe returned to town, very much disappointed at having to give up the trail when he felt certain that he was but a very few minutes behind the men he wanted to overtake.

In the meantime Chief Light had notified Chief Bain of Trenton that the men and car were in Campbellford. Bain lost no time in coming here along with the owner of the stolen vehicle, a C.N.R. plainclothesman, and a Provincial officer. They took charge of the car and also the only prisoner so far brought in, Wells, and returned to Trenton.

Men Described.

Notice of the presence of these men in the community and district has been sent to all the towns, cities, and villages in the district, and a strict watch is being kept for their appearance. Clarence Hankinson is described as being twenty-three years of age, weight 135 pounds, height 5ft. 9in., and of very fair complexion and blue eyes. He was wearing a blue suit, black shoes, light colored cap, and grey overcoat. His shirt was dirty and his necktie rather shabby. He seemed to be rather shaky, as though his nerves were on edge.

Frank Madden's age seems to be somewhat undecided. He is reported in one place as being between eighteen and nineteen years old, and in another as being twenty-eight. His further description reads: Weight 186 pounds, height 5ft. 11in. He wore a blue suit and did have a black derby hat, but it is in the hands of the local police now. He was wearing a khaki colored suit of pullover overalls, black shoes, light striped shirt and light colored tie.

Until a late hour last night, the local police had no further report of the matter, and it is not expected that these men are in the immediate vicinity. But as both would be easily recognized, it is expected that they will be located in a very few hours. Police departments over a wide range of country are on the look-out for them.

DISTRICT CHURCHES

ST. PAUL'S, MARMORA.

MARMORA, Dec. 21.—Prayers for the peace of the world were offered at St. Paul's on Sunday in the course of Evensong.

The Bishop of Ontario's Pastoral letter was also read and distributed.

My Dear Brethren:

I greet you all, in the Name of our Incarnate Lord, with every good wish for a Happy Chrismas and a prosperous and blessed New Year.

1. At this Season of Christmas when we commemorate the birth of the Prince of Peace, it must bring a sense of special gratitude to the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ that the prospects of world peace have never been brighter since the War than at the present time. If that hope is realized, the world, and our own country particularly, will enter upon a period of constructive industry and prosperity the beginnings of which we are already enjoying.

It is our duty as Christians to work and pray that men everywhere will so submit themselves to the Spirit of the Christ-child that His peace may possess their souls and control their lives By the fervency of our prayers and the unity of our fellowship in the Church let us demonstrate to the world that human Brotherhood is possible through the Redemption that is in Christ Jesus.

To this end are appended special prayers authorized by the House of Bishops in Canada to be used on the Fourth Sunday in Advent. This day has been chosen by the World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship through the Churches. I trust that these prayers will be earnestly offered in all our Churches, not only on the appointed day, but at other times as well.

2. I would also again draw your attention to the fact that your offerings on Christmas Day are to be a gift to your clergyman. This opportunity is thus again presented of expressing in a practical way your appreciation of his self-forgetting labors on your behalf during the past year. What can a man do more for his fellows than give his whole time, thought and energy to their welfare? This is what the clergy are doing for you without stint.

Evidence of personal recognition of a man's work is always an inspiring thing, I urge you to seize this opportunity of such recognition to the utmost of your generosity.

I am, with kindest regards and every good wish,

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES ALLEN ONTARIO

GOOD SERVICE.

Many nice things were said about Mayor Holloway at the farewell session of this year's Council, and while it is customary to speak kindly of a departing colleague under such circumstances it must be admitted that in the case of His Worship the praise showered upon by members of the Council was merited.

Dr. Holloway has made a good Mayor.

His two years in office have been marked by a very evident and very sincere desire on his part that Peterborough's interests should be advanced.

He has been tireless in his efforts to successfully solve the problems that have developed during his tenure of the Mayor's chair.

He has made an excellent presiding officer at the deliberations of the City Council, and at those public functions where as chief magistrate he has been called upon to act as the community's representative, he has conducted himself with ease and dignity.

In short, the regime of Mayor Holloway has been a personal triumph for him, and he will retire from his responsible position at the end of the year with the verdict "well done" from his fellow-citizens ringing in his ears.

GUARDING THE CITY'S HEALTH.

The City Council has shown good judgment in accepting the offer of the Provincial Government to pay $2,500 toward the maintenance of the Provincial Laboratory in this city.

While this arrangement is patently only a temporary one, it will give Peterborough a breathing spell during which adequate consideration may be given to the appointment of a full-time Medical Officer of Health for this city.

Such an appointment cannot be long deferred.

The Minister of Health expressed surprise during the conference last week that Peterborough had not long ago provided for such an official, and Hon. Dr. Godfrey's opinion is that of many local citizens who should be protected as adequately as possible from a health standpoint.

The advantage of having a full-time Health Officer are so obvious as to require no comment, and the cost involved would be an investment that the experience of other municipalities shows would be amply justified.

This question should engage the serious attention of next year's Council, and will probably be one of the most important matters to come before that body.

A MILESTONE FOR OLD PETERBOROUGH BOY.

The Lethbridge Herald, of which a former Peterborough newspaperman, Senator W. A. Buchanan, is President and Managing Director, last week began the twenty-first year of its existence, and the noteworthy event will be of interest to Senator Buchanan's many friends here.

The Herald was started by him twenty years ago, and the story of its growth parallels that of the development of Lethbridge.

Newspaper and city have steadily progressed, and with them too, the newspaperman, who had the courage to strike out for himself in a new field, and made good not only in the publishing line but in the political arena.

The Herald of to-day bears little resemblance to the first issue that came from the old flatbed press two decades ago.

It is a bright, newsy journal, supplied by adequate telegraph services, printed in a modern plant with equipment capable of turning out 30,000 papers an hour, and carrying a quantity of advertising that demonstrates the faith of big firms not only in the value of the paper as a medium for reaching the public but also in the advancement and prosperity of the district so well served by the Herald.

Many friends in Peterborough and elsewhere throughout the country will hope that Senator Buchanan will guide the destinies of his fine paper for many more years.

ONTARIO'S MINERAL WEALTH.

Hon. Charles McCrea's admirable review of the mineral wealth of Ontario has been published in The Ontario Gazette, and should be given wide circulation because of the information it gives in regard to the mining development in this Province.

Figures usually make dry reading, but there is a touch of Aladdin and his lamp in the story that the Minister of Mines tells of the rapid increase in mineral production in Ontario and in the prospects for the future.

Ontario has up to the present produced one and one-quarter billion dollars worth of minerals, and yet the pre-Cambrian region is largely virgin territory, Mr. McCrea points out, with vast sections of mineral-bearing rocks yet to be explored.

The rich silver deposits of Cobalt were unknown a quarter of a century ago, yet the total production of silver from that area has now reached a total of 375 million ounces, in addition to which there has been produced from the silver mines thousands of tons of Cobalt nickel and arsenic.

Fifteen years ago the gold resources of Porcupine were practically untouched, and the rich ores of Kirkland Lake undreamed of, yet today Ontario stands third among the gold-producing communities of the world with an annual production of 31 million dollars, and a total gold output to date of over 215 million dollars.

In twenty-five years Ontario's annual production in minerals have advanced from 13 to 84 million dollars, and the end is by no means in sight.

"TIGER TIM" HEALY.

London despatches tell that the Honorable Timothy Healy, Governor-General of the Irish Free State since 1922, is about to retire. If this be so, then there will vanish from the stage the most colorful of all the picturesque personalities that Anglo-Irish politics has known in the past ten generations. Forty-seven years have passed since Tim Healy, coming over from Cork, took his seat at Westminster. He was just twenty-five years old, and the pressmen who wrote about his maiden speech were very derisive of the adventurous youth that had come to disturb the majestic repose of Parliament. They said that he had been a "ticket nipper" on the railway, that he was needy in pocket and seedy in dress, that he belonged to the ignoble class of those who "have to write for a living." This last reproach was a singular one to come from the gentlemen of the Press Gallery; and most of those who made it (including Sir Henry Lucy) were destined to regret and repent it.

For Tim Healy ("Tiger Tim") soon showed the mettle of which he was made. Parnell, in those days, had around him a group of lieutenants more brilliant than any that Ireland has ever been able to marshal since, but none of them was the equal of Healy. It was said of him that he was the one man in the House who could match subtleties with Balfour, while a duel between him and Chamberlain—flame against rock—was a super-event in Parliament. No one on the Treasury benches or on the Front Opposition seats—and in those years Gladstone and other mighty gladiators were still in Parliament—could so securely grip the House. He could pass from cold invective to a mood of brooding passion, when he would speak the most poignant passages, on to a light raillery and wit that would delight the House.

And behind Tim Healy's eloquence there was a real intelligence. It was significant that at a time when he was being denounced in the British House and press, the London and Northwestern Railway entrusted him with a standing brief for the guardianship of their interests. John Morley wrote of him, too, that through the vast and intricate maze of the Land Laws he and not more than two or three others could act as real guides. He was the author of the famous "Healy Clause," of which it was said that it put millions into the pockets of Irish tenants. And he had a knowledge of the past work of Parliament and of the hidden mysteries of blue-books that was all but incredible.

But he was incapable of party reverence, or discipline. It never mattered to Tim Healy whether he struck friend or foe. Gladstone was a "hypocrite;" Chamberlain a "liar;" Redmond was "pompous;" John Dillon a "melancholy humbug" and "sick raven." It used to be said, and is still said, in Ireland, that "Healy killed Parnell." Certain it was that when Parnell's desolating passion for Kitty O'Shea tore asunder his party, Healy spoke unforgettable, almost unforgivable words that seared across a generation of Irish politics. "The question," said Parnell, in the famous fight for the leadership, "is who is to be the master?" "The question," hissed back Healy, "is who is to be the mistress?" Later on, when Parnell carried his fight to Ireland, Healy followed him and said things about Mrs. O'Shea that every one of his countrymen with an ounce of chivalry despised. "Parnell," he sneered in his first speech, "has thrown his standard to the breeze—the petticoat of Kitty O'Shea." He was horse-whipped in the Courts of Dublin for this and similar remarks; but it was characteristic at least of the courage of the man that on the night of the horse-whipping he reappeared on the platform and repeated his offence word for word.

Healy mellowed with the years. Like D'Arcy McGee, and Gavan Duffy, and many another, he lived to become one of the bulwarks of the Empire against which he fought so stoutly; in 1922 he kissed the royal hand and took his place in Dublin as Irish Free State Governor. There was about his appointment a touch of genius. He took with him to his task the recollection of forty years of personal struggle for the country that he loved. No living man knew in fuller or more intimate detail all the features of that campaign; so long drawn out, so strongly marked with heroism and disgrace, with patience and with fury, with the fortitude that can dare all things and with the futile obstinacy that persists in demanding the impossible. He lived to see the Die-Hard resistance, against which he counselled when the fight seemed hopeless, overborne by the sense of a wiser and better day. And to the control of the fierce spirits of the present he brought that power of understanding them which belonged to one who was himself in days gone by among the fiercest of them all. Ireland—and in later days England—has had few more able friends.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Let us hope that Hon. E. C. Drury and J. J. Morrison will at least exchange Christmas cards.

Municipal candidates who hang up their stockings on Christmas Eve will have to wait until New Year's Day to see whether or not their hopes have been fulfilled.

The Canadian Legion reports a successful year's operations, and the community generally will congratulate the officers upon an excellent showing financially and otherwise.

Newspaper staffs having preached early shopping for the last two months will tomorrow or the next day begin the annual task of doing their own Christmas purchasing.

Kingston's town clock has gone on strike. There are many people in that neighborhood, however, who do not have to worry about what time it is—they are not going anywhere just at present.

Mr. Bennett, new Conservative leader, has put one over the newspapers. His three weeks' absence, during which he made a flying visit to England, was not reported until he was back in Canada.

A contemporary rather sadly remarks that ski-ing should be called a fall pastime rather than a winter recreation.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, December 21 (Canadian Press).—There was no improvement in the foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday. The spot trade was also of a very limited character, the demand being only for odd cars to meet the immediate wants. The tone of the market was steady.

The trade in spring and winter wheat grades of flour was inactive, but values were unchanged.

The undertone to the market for millfeed was firm, with a moderate amount of business passing in all lines. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet, but prices ruled steady.

A moderate amount of business was transacted in all grades of eggs and values were about steady at the recent decline noted. The receipts were 1,298 cases.

Prices for imported beans were firm under a fair demand. Sales of car lots of choice white hand-picked on spot were made at $2.65 per bushel ex-track, and broken lots sold at $2.75 per bushel, ex-store.

The potato trade continued quiet, but the tone of the market was steady. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.15 per bag of 90 pounds; Prince Edward Island white potatoes at $1.05 per bag of 90 pounds; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.00 per bag in bulk; and New Brunswick white potatoes at 95c per bag in bulk, ex-track.

The butter market was without any new feature to note, prices being unchanged with a small demand. The receipts were 55 packages.

The trade in cheese was dull owing to the absence of any demand from either English or United States buyers. The receipts were 848 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 21 (Canadian Press). — Corn plunged wildly downward 3¼ cents a bushel yesterday, but later recovered poise to a notable extent. The Government crop report making an unexpected sensational increase of the 1927 corn production estimate was responsible for the break in values. On the other hand, much commission house buying was done on an assumed basis that the Government had over-estimated the corn yield.

Closing quotations for corn were unsettled, 1⅛ to 2 cents net lower; with wheat ⅝c to ¾c off; oats at ¼c decline to ⅛c advance ;and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to a rise of 7 cents.

Inasmuch as the Government December crop report pointed to a corn yield this season 33,000,000 bushels in excess of the November official estimate, whereas the majority of the traders were looking for a big decrease, heavy selling of corn took place yesterday as soon as the market opened. When the initial big rush to sell wes ended, however, the fact became apparent that many traders were disinclined to accept the new figures as accurate, and that unofficial returns widely at variance with those of the Government were still being given unusual weight.

Announcement of export business in corn yesterday helped to rally the market from the early break in the prices. In this connection, notice was given the fact that for the first time this season the January delivery of corn at Buenos Aires went to a premium yesterday over the December delivery in Chicago. It was also pointed out that last year a leading unofficial authority in his final estimate of the corn crop in the United States was 47,000,000 bushels above the official figures, and that the Government subsequently revised the official figures, raising them to virtually the same as the unofficial estimate.

Wheat and oats sympathized with corn market weakness, but later showed power to rally. The world's available supply of wheat increased 617,000 bushels for the week, and is now 291,641,000 bushels against 234,013,000 bushels a year ago. A bearish construction was generally placed on latest Washington reports as to wheat.

Provisions averaged higher, influenced by strength of hog values. Yesterday's arrivals of hogs here were less numerous than were expected.

TRENT RIVER NEWS.

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 21.—Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rose, Miss Ethyl and Gracie Lewis (Mrs. Rose's granddaughter) left on Sunday for Toronto to spend Christmastide. They will return to "Ye Olde Mill" for the New Year and will remain here for the winter.

The many friends of Mrs. Harold Cotton (nee Marion Kennedy) will regret to hear that she has lost the sight of one eye through playing with her little girl while in bed. The little one struck her mother's eye with her foot accidentally, and the toe nail inflicted a wound in the eye ball which destroyed the sight.

Rehearsals are nearing a close for the cantata for the Sunday school Christmas tree to he held on Thursday, December 22.

Are there going to be any regrets tomorrow about that good meal you're all set to staw away tonight. Better take Seigel's Syrup. Any drug store.

The annual number of divorces per 1000 marriages in the United States was 35 in 1870, 81 in 1900, and 145 in 1924.

Uncle Wiggily

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE MONEY VINE.

"Goodness gracious! Why, it's San——!" began Uncle Wiggily when, after hearing the rustling noise in the bushes he looked around and saw a strange sight, as I told you in the story last night.

"Hush! Not that name! Call me anything but that—at least until December twenty-fifth, or maybe the twenty-fourth!" whispered a short, fat, jolly old gentleman, wearing a red and white suit and whose long, white beard waved in the breeze.

"Oh, so you don't want to be called San——!" began Uncle Wiggily.

"Do please, hush!" begged the jolly old gentleman. "Once the animal children, or the other children, for that matter, hear you use my name they'll be flocking out to see me and it's nearly two weeks until Christmas."

"So it is!" chuckled Uncle Wiggily. "All right, San——, I mean Mr. Whiskers—I'll call you that, if you don't mind."

"No, I don't mind," said the jolly old fellow, shaking some snow out of his beard. "But why are you out here in the woods, Uncle Wiggily, trying to make gold combs out of pine tree cones?"

"I'll tell you," answered the rabbit. So he told San—There, I nearly let his name slip out myself—I mean the rabbit told Mr. Whiskers about coming to the woods to find a gold comb to make Baby Bunty's doll well by combing her tangled hair. And Uncle Wiggily told how he frightened away the Bear by pretending to pull out his gold teeth with a buttonhook.

"But it was no pretending when I scratched his nose with one of these rough pine cones!" chuckled Mr. Longears.

"I should say not!" laughed Mr. Whiskers, as I must call him until Christmas. And if any of you happen to guess his real name will you please not tell, for it's a secret. Mind, now, please!

"But I don't see how I am going to make these pine cones become golden combs to cure Bunty's doll," said the rabbit. "You said you'd show me."

"And so I will!" chuckled the Old Gentleman. "In fact I came here to gather some of those pine cones myself. I want them for ornaments on Christmas trees, and before they can be used for that they must be turned into gold and silver."

"But how can it be done?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"Very easily. I'll show you," offered Mr. Whiskers. "I have some gold and silver paint in my pockets. I brought the stuff along on purpose to use in making gold and silver Christmas tree ornaments. And I can easily make one of these cones golden for you so you can give it to Baby Bunty and she can comb out her doll's hair with it."

"Please do," begged Mr. Longears.

So San—there I go again! What's the matter with me, I wonder? Anyhow, Mr. Whiskers gilded two cones for Uncle Wiggily, one for each side of the head of Shooie the rabbit girl's doll, and then, thanking the Old Gentleman most kindly, Uncle Wiggily hopped back to his hollow stump bungalow, having had some jolly adventures.

"How will these do, Bunty?" asked Uncle Wiggily as he gave the cute little orphan rabbit the gilded pine tree cones.

"Oh, they are lovely!" she cried in delight, clapping her paws. "I'll comb Shooie's hair and I think she will soon get well."

"How can it be done?" asked the rabbit

Surely enough that's just what happened. Shooie was all over her illness in a moment. Of course it was only a make-believe sickness, and that is the very easiest kind to cure. And of course the pine tree cones were only make-believe gold combs, but that is the very kind that were needed. So everything came out all right, and Uncle Wiggily was going to hop away to look for another adventure, when, all of a sudden, his forty 'leven little bunny boys and girls came hopping home from school, crying:

"Give me a penny, Daddicums! Give me a penny!"

"My goodness!" exclaimed Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy. "There aren't pennies enough in all the world to give so many little rabbits one each. Run along and don't bother your Daddy!" squeaked the muskrat lady.

But the little bunnies only cried the louder:

"Give me a penny! I want a penny for a lollypop!

"What in the world shall I do?" asked Mr. Longears, turning his pockets inside out and finding not a penny.

"You had better go look for the money vine," said Nurse Jane. "You can pick bright pennies off that for the boys and girls. Look for the money vine."

"I shall!" decided Mr. Longears.

WOOLER NEWS

WOOLER, Dec. 21.—The members of the finance committee of the United Church met at the parsonage on Monday night to close the special work for the year ending December 31.

On Sunday morning at the United Church, the choir sang "O Give Thanks Unto the Lord." The pastor, the Rev. H. B. Neal, read responsively the twenty-fourth Psalm. He told the young people the story of the loved physician, Dr. Grenfell, working around Labrador, and seeking to go forward and serve others with the message.

The Rev. Mr. Neal gave the message from St. Luke, the sixteenth chapter and second verse, Stewardship being the topic.

The Woman's Institute met at the home of Mrs. W. A. McColl, which was inviting and cheerful with many blooming narcissus, making it appear as spring-time. The President, Mrs. William Arnis, presided. The business was a report from the committee in charge of the lighting system of the village. Another item of interest was the ordering of hand-books, egg-candling circulars, and mothers' books. The meeting was given over to the conveners, Frances Terrill and Stella Nelson for the following program:

Canada, the House Beautiful—was given by Mrs. Ornis. Away down by the sea are the Maritime Provinces. These form the Imperial Arch and a fine entrance porch to the house beautiful. Passing from the porch, one enters the imposing drawing-room, Quebec, with its historic pictures on its walls, its bronzes on its mantlesheff, and the crucifix over its doorway.

Leaving the drawing-room one comes into Ontario with its restful rugs upon the floors, and its comfortable furniture, vistas of trees, shady and fruitful, orchards and vineyards may be seen, and beyond, the clear water of the Great Lakes, from this spacious living-room. From the living room one enters Manitoba, the dining-room. Its great front window looks out upon the Hudson Bay. On its table are found the products of the vast grain-fields, its vegetables, its fish, its poultry, its honey, its beef.

Through the dining-room is Saskatchewan, the huge kitchen, with its enormous wood-box at the north and all kinds of meats and farm products at its south.

Next is Alberta, the vast store-room, where supplies of wheat, coal-oil, and beef are always to be on hand. An entrance is cut into the beautiful sun-room, British Columbia. Its windows look out upon the peaceful waters of the calm Pacific. Here, people come from all parts of the house and neighboring houses for recreation and rest, to enjoy its beauty and its luscious fruits.

Just as a house beautiful can not be a home beautiful unless the various members in it live unselfishly—each striving for the common good of all and the happiness of each and all in the highest sense; neither can this Canada, the House Beautiful, become Canada, the home beautiful, unless its several provinces are united with high ideals and lofty aspirations, ever working together to make this Canada a country whose people are clean and brave and true. No better motto might be kept in mind constantly than that from the good old Book—"Righteousness exalteth a Nation."

Solo—Edith Austin.

A Talk—Miss Frances Terrill, How can a girl best be fitted for happy home-making.

Solo—Mrs. Dr. Anderson, "Lass of Mine."

Reading—Stella Nelson, "Aunt Jemima's Courtship."

A dainty lunch was served by the committee.

Beatrice O'Brien, daughter of Baron Inchiquin.

THE EXAMINER PICTURE PAGE

It is announced from Winnipeg that Elizabeth Wood's design for that city's cenotaph has been accepted. Elizabeth Wood is the wife of Emanuel Hahn, the well-known Toronto sculptor, whose design for the same memorial was disqualified two years ago because of his German birth. The ABOVE pictures show, LEFT to RIGHT, Emanuel Hahn, the design now accepted by Winnipeg, and Elizabeth Wood. Elizabeth Wood, who married Emanuel Hahn a year ago, is Canadian by birth and parentage and comes of Irish stock. She works independently of her husband and this is not the first honor which has come to her. Last year the National Gallery at Ottawa recognized her work by purchasing her head of a negress in bronze. The design is accepted by Winnipeg in the symbolic figure of a soldier, which will be carried out in bronze and will stand sixteen feet in height above a gray granite base, 27 feet in length. The cenotaph will be placed on an island in a Winnipeg street.

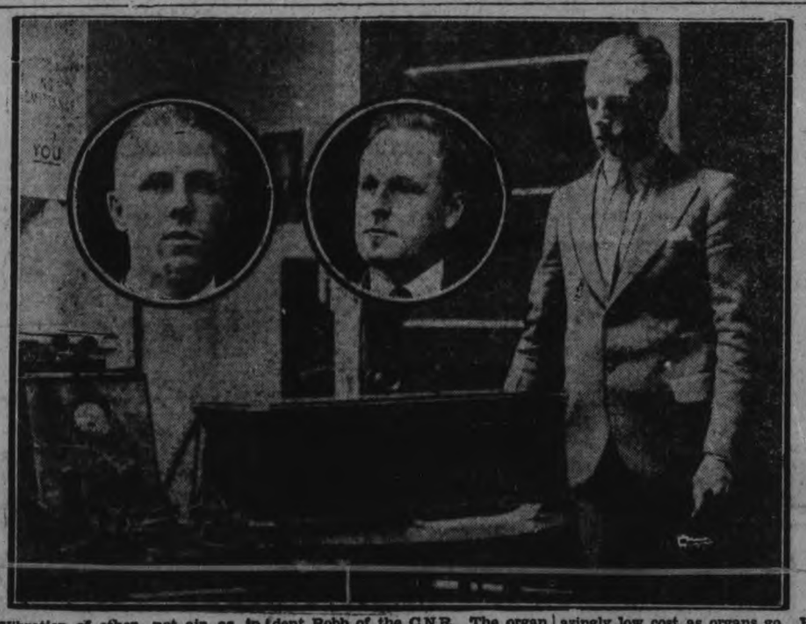
The ABOVE photo shows a zinc and copper cencentrator at the Flin Flon, Manitoba's new land of looked for prosperity. Here it is expected to develop one of the north country's largest mining, pulp and power projects. Its purchase by interests headed by Harry Payne Whitney was announced recently, when it was stated that a sum of around $30,000,000 will be spent in the area. The map shows the size of the development. The branch line to be built from The Pas, Manitoba, is shown to Flin Flon and the range of power sites lying along the Hudson Bay railway (shown in a thick black line) is indicated. At White Mud Falls nearly half a million horsepower will be developed if present estimates are right. Other sites, with their power potentials, are marked on the map. Power from White Mud will be transported 170 miles to Flin Flon to help in the working of the mine and the using of the vast stores of pulp in the nearby country. That Manitoba does not lack for water power sites is evident from the sketch.



Vibration of ether, not air as in ordinary organs, is said to be one of the basic principles of the new pipe less eelctrical wave organ invented by Morris Robb, son of Vice-President Robb of the C.N.R. The organ is along revolutionary lines since it is a diminutive affair, developed in radio and television research, and can be constructed, he says, at amazingly low cost as organs go. Here Robb is shown with his instrument and inset, LEFT, his picture is given with that of his brother, Wallace Robb.

Miss Emlie Mason, who will reign as queen of the forthcoming Banff winter carnival, at Banff, in the early part of February, 1928. Miss Mason is a Calgary girl and a devotee of winter sports.

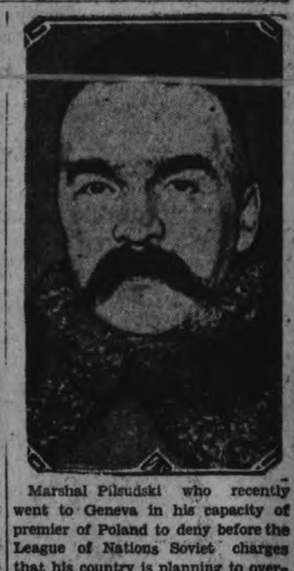
While Princess Ileana and her mother, Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania, were recently staying at the royal palace in Baltchik on the Black Sea, they frequently appeared attired in the flowing and beautiful Turkish national costume, an action which is said to have been decided as a gracious tribute by the Moslems resident in Rumania. Ileana, whose portrait is shown ABOVE, was recently reported to have eloped with a commander in the Rumanian navy, but this story was given official denial in Bucharest.

Unique among November nuptials is the double weddings of Misses Aileen Veronica and Kathleen Mary O'Connor, sisters, to Ernest J. and Norman T. Enright, brothers. In the ceremony performed last month in Toronto, Ontario, Miss Aileen, LEFT CENTRE, wed Ernest, LEFT, while Miss Kathleen, RIGHT CENTRE, became the bride of Norman, RIGHT. Attending the brides were the sisters of the grooms, while the best men were both brothers of the brides. The services were performed by Rev. Father Arthur Enright, brother of the grooms. Two of the ushers were brothers of the grooms.

Sir Vijayaraghayacharya, Diwan Bahadur, member of the Indian legislative assembly and of the public service commission of India, who opened the Canadian National Exhibition in 1923, was erroneously reported to have died last week in Madras, where he was director of industries for the city of Madras. The diwan was born in 1875 and has followed a brilliant public life, becoming diwan (prime minister) of Cochin state in 1918.

Here Mrs. Dorothy Dick, Toronto sculptress, is shown at work on her plaque of the late Lady Beaverbrook, wife of the Canadian publisher-peer, who died recently in London. Last year in the old country Lady Beaverbrook "sat" for Mrs. Dick, it being intended by the latter to secure, before completion of the plaque, another sitting during a forthcoming trip to England. She will now have to finish it with the aid of photographs. Mrs. Stephen Heward, 52 Prince Arthur Avenue, is a sister of Lady Beaverbrook.

Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railway, is soon to resign that post and to become head of the Mexican railway system, according to despatches from New York, published in Mexico City, and said to be based on "insistent rumors" afloat in Wall Street. Neither Sir Henry who is now there for the purpose of reorganizing Mexico's railways—nor officials of the Calles government will confirm or comment on the rumors.



Marshal Pilsudski who recently went to Geneva in his capacity of premier of Poland to deny before the League of Nations Soviet charges that his country is planning to overrun and annex the small Baltic nation of Lithuania.

Here the president of Canadian Pacific Railway is shown in oils, from the portrait recently finished by Joshua Smith, Toronto painter, for whom Mr. Beatty's [illegible] during flying visits to Toronto. It is understood that the painting, which is generally admired by Mr. Beatty's friends because of its [illegible] ity and naturalness, will be hung in the C.P.R. board room at [illegible].

Ahmid Mouktar, newly arrived Turkish envoy to the United States, who is charged by James W. Gerard with being guilty of ill-treating Armenians in his own land, is shown above with Mrs. Bedy Tey. They were guarded on arrival at Washington for fear of Armenian disorders.

Lord Cushendun, who at the Geneva disarmament preliminaries regarded the Russian "peace bomb" of total disarmament as a bluff and subterfuge.

Two of the most camera-shy of Russia's leaders were photographed in Moscow while attending the ceremonies in connection with the tenth anniversary of the Soviet state. They are Clara Zetkin, so-called mother of the revolution and Klementy Voroshilov, commissar of war for the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Robert Jell, aged 103, pioneer of London, Ontario, who is dead. Mr. Jell was an engineer on the old Great Western Railway. He retired over 40 years ago, but on his birthdays, particularly when he reached the century mark, was remembered by railwaymen. Among those who honored him were Sir Henry Thornton, W. D. Robb and officials of the Canadian Railway board.

Prof. J. B. Collip of the University of Alberta, who goes to McGill University as professor of bio-chemistry in the faculty of medicine. Prof. Collip is one of the leading biochemists on the continent, his most outstanding achievement being his discovery of insulin a few years ago in collaboration with Dr. Banting of the University of Toronto. He made the first insulin ever used on a patient.

TWO INQUESTS ARE BEING HELD

Men Believed Marooned on Island Not Sighted By Airmen.

Two inquests will be conducted to-night in the Police Court in this city by Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young. One will be into the death of Keith Blewett, who was shot last week near Buckhorn while out hunting with two other young boys. The second is an inquiry into the death of Henry Stewart, who was hit by a car driven by Clayton Greatrix on Hunter Street on the night of November 21, and who died the following morning.

TWO PLANES FAIL TO FIND FISHERMEN

Inquiries To-night Into Deaths of Keith Blewett and Henry Stewart.

TOLEDO, Ohio Dec. 21.— (Canadian Press.)—Balked in an effort to locate by airplane two fishermen believed marooned on the ice-bound West Sister Island, in Lake Erie, near here, efforts by coast guards and others to bring them to the mainland went forward to-day.

Two airplanes tried yesterday to establish communication with the men, Louis Franke and William Myers, but without success. One ship was disabled in landing, but the other cruised the length of the island without sighting the men. Franke and Myers have not been seen since last Friday, when they put out in the lake to raise their nets. Watchers reported they apparently were having difficulty with their boat and were drifting toward the island.

Trend Is Irregular In New York To-day

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—Frequent shifts of speculative sentiment imparted widespread irregularites to to-day's stock market. An opening outburst of strength was featured by the heavy accumulation of copper shares, nearly a dozen of which attained their highest prices in years. Several of the insurance and surety shares jumped five to fifteen points. The marking up of the call money rate from 4 to 4½ per cent., coincident with the calling in of about $25,000,000 in loans, started a broad selling movement just before mid-day which wiped out many of the earlier gains and sent a number of issues crashing two to eleven points below their earlier high levels. The stiffening of money was attributed to the usual heavy withdrawals of currency in preparation for the holidays.

By early afternoon the market started upward again under the leadership of the oils, buying of which was influenced by the unusually large decrease in crude oil production last week. A subsantial increase in steel mill operations also had a cheerful effect on sentiment, but a sharp drop in freight car loadings in the week ended Dec. 10 compared with the corresponding weeks of the two preceding years aroused some misgivings as to the actual trend of current business.

Mine Market Firm With Good Gains Made

TORONTO, Dec. 21. — The general tone of the market on the Standard Mining Exchange was firm this morning and the feature movement was the climb of 50c in Treadwell, which reached $25.25. Five point advances were shown in Jackson which sold to 85 on a good turnover, Noranda, and Lake Shore. Nipissing sold up 10 and Granada Rouyn on a big turnover sold up 3 to 34. Howay Gold gained 4, and one point gains were made by Crown Reserve, Barry Hollinger and Bidgood. Area and Argonaut eased fractionally while Kirkland and Lake lost 2 at 246.

Liverpool Weakness Affects Chicago Price

CHICAGO, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Unexpected lower quotations at Liverpool led to an early decline today in the wheat market here. Argentine shippers were reported to be offering wheat freely abroad and there was a lack of aggressive support there from buyers. Opening unchanged to ⅝c off, Chicago wheat prices afterwards showed a material setback all around. Corn, oats, and provisions displayed weakness too, corn starting unchanged to ⅝c down and subsequently undergoing a general drop.

Opening prices were:

Wheat, December 127, March 128⅝.
Corn, December 83⅜, March 87¾
Oats, December 51¾, March 54½.

Nickel Dominates Trading At Toronto

TORONTO, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel was the dominating issue on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Trading in the regular list was light and scattered and scarcely heavier in the unlisted section, but a heavy turnover of nickel shares was recorded. Nickel climbed to 80¼ but sagged to 79 at noon, a net loss of half a point. Canadian Canners Old Common and Shredded Wheat both lost a point, while Canadian Oil sold down 1¼ at 43¾. Fractional gains, however, were shown in Massey Harris, Page Hersey, and Brazilian, while C.P.R. gained two at 215. In the oils British American at 36⅛ and International Petroleum at 37⅛ were both slightly higher. Walkers and Carlings firmed fractionally, but Canadian Brewing and Canadian Malting lost fractionally and Seagrams sold down a half at 25.

REPORTS TO CITY COUNCIL

Railways and Parks.

The Railways and Parks Committee reported as follows:

We advertised for applications for the positions of caretakers of the skating rinks and toboggan slide and received thirty-six applications. We referred the applications to the Chairman of this Committee with power to make the appointments.

We received from A. W. Wray an offer to sell to the City the brick part of his mattress factory building on a cement foundation, in the James Stevenson Park, for two hundred and fifty dollars ($250.00) and we recommend that this offer be received.

As A. W. Wray has not used the mattress factory in James Stevenson Park since the middle of November we recommend that he be relieved of paying rent for the ground it occupied from November 30th last.

Board of Works.

The Board of Works reported as follows:

We received a letter from G. R. Langley offering to sell three acres of land West of Concession street and North of Dunlop street for $1,565.00. We recommend that the chairman of this Board and the City Engineer have tests made on the land and report back.

The City Engineer received an account from W. H. Lytle for $228.00 for the rent of a concrete mixer and saying that he would take $175.00 if paid by December 27. We recommend that it be received.

It was reported to your Board that a connection was made on the night of December 12th from the schoolhouse of School Section Number 2, North Monaghan, to the city sewer and we asked the Mayor, the Chairman of this Board and the City Engineer to interview the Council of North Monaghan on the matter and report to the Council this evening.

Fire, Water and Light.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee reported as follows:

Your committee had a confeernce with N. McMillan, Superintendent, and J. Anderson, Agent, of the Canadian Pacific Railway and H. C. Rogers of the Peterborough Canoe Company in regard to an application for a hydrant near the Canadian Pacific Railway freight shed on the railway property. The matter was left with the Mayor to write to Mr. McMillan and outline the views expressed by members of the Committee that, as the hydrant would be on private property, those desiring it should pay the cost.

We recommend that the charge to the Village of Lakefield for the use of the fire truck at a recent fire in that village be $100.00.

We recommend that Border Transit Limited be given permission to erect a temporary galvanized iron garage on the Henthorn property on the south side of Hunter street and to maintain it there until directed by the City Engineer to remove it.

We recommend that the two charges made to the Township of North Monaghan for the Fire Department responding to a call when trucks were on fire be deducted from the accounts and that accounts for these calls be sent to the persons who owned the trucks.

We recommend that the Chairman of this Committee see Mr. McNab, Agent of the Canadian National Railways, with reference to freight trains of that railway standing on the tracks and keeping the alarm bell at Reid street ringing while the train is not moving.

MELLOR REMANDED.

Former Picton Pastor Comes Up For Trial Again Jan. 12.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—J. J. Mellor, former pastor of Picton United Church, charged with a serious offence against a young girl, appeared before County Judge Evans McLean at Picton to-day and was remanded until the 12th day of January. Colonel J. Keller McKay of Toronto, special Crown prosecutor, produced an affidavit from Dr. Craig of Ottawa that the girl was not physically able to attend court to give her evidence, but that she would be on that date. The proceedings were very short. F. L. Ward, counsel for Mellor, made no application for bail.

COUNCIL HOLDS LONG SESSIONS

Final Regular Meeting of Year Lasts All Afternoon and Evening.

SPECIAL MEETING LATER.

The North Monaghan Council held its last regular meeting at the Court House, Peterboro, on December 15. All the members of the Council were present, Reeve Lillico in the chair. Mayor Holloway, Alderman Stocker and City Solicitor Wearing were present, representing the City Council in regard to the action of the School Board for School Section No. 2, connecting the new Confederation School with the City Sewage System. Reeve Lillico reported that the special committee had visited the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, on November 24 and had received very favorable consideration from all departments visited. The matter of an amendment to Municipal Act, Chapter 59, Section 7, was taken up with Mr. Wilkinson, who spoke very much in favor of the proposed amendment enabling the municipality to assess the special tax for fire protection against a special area set aside by by-law. The deputation visited the Deputy Minister of Mines and Forests in regard to a patent for Park Lot 1. This matter is to be followed up by special requests from the Township Solicitor.

Assessments Adjusted.

Charles James came before the Council and requested it to apportion the taxes on the north forty feet of Lots 130, 131, plan 30, also on lots 55 and 56, plan 55, assessed to J. James. H. Castle be apportioned as follows: That W. H. Castle pay the taxes on lots 30 and 31 and Ed. Lynch pay the taxes on lots 32, plan 30, the assessor to determine the proportion of amounts.

Moved by Mr. Hunter and seconded by Mr. Kent that the Township of Smith be paid $102.70, North Monaghan Township's share of the boundary road account for 1927. Norman Moncrief was present and complained to the Council about the condition of Concession 11, opposite his property. Mr. Moncrief stated that the road was almost impassable in muddy weather on account of the recent grading of the hill by the Dufferin Construction Company. Roland Vass came before the Council and asked for an adjustment to his assessment. The schedule showed an assessment of $700 while the roll showed $1000. Moved by Mr. Hunter and seconded by Mr. Dobbin that a reduction be made in the assessment to comply with the assessment notice.

T. B. Henry, Township Relief Officer and Sanitary Inspector was present and made his report in regard to charity cases now pending. Mr. Henry also reported that the sanitary condition of the township was good. Moved by Mr. Hunter and seconded by Mr. Dobbin that the following bills be passed for payment: Charity, $50; R. C. Smith, County Constable, $3.00.

The Council adjourned for lunch, 5:45, and resumed business again at 7 p.m.

The secretary of the Township Board of Health wrote the Council suggesting that all shacks not fit for human habitation should be so placarded and, asking the Township Council to endorse this action.

By-law No. 905 was introduced and regularly read appointing deputy-returning officer and poll clerks and to define places where polls shall be held, should an election be necessary on January 2, 1928. The name of William J. Lang as Deputy-returning officer was suggested in place of Herbert Bourne for polling subdivision No. 2, Davidson's Store, it being intimated that Mr. Bourne should probably run for the office of councillor.

The Township of Cavan rendered a statement that the amount expended on the boundary road for 1927 was $138.35 and that North Monaghan's share was $69.17. Inventor of Fly Poison Holds Service To Pray For Souls of Flies Killed By It

OSAKA, Japan, December 21 (United Press).—A special mass for countless millions of flies killed through him was held here by Dr. Imazu, who grew rich from the sale of a deadly fly poison he invented.

A devout Buddhist, Dr. Imazu decided to hold a mass for the souls of the flies whose deaths he had caused.

He invited priests, newspaper men, and friends to the solemn ceremony and himself presented a funeral scroll asking the pardon of the slain flies. Priests chanted the funeral mass and the assembled mourners joined in chanted prayers for the repose of the flies' souls.

After the ceremony Dr. Imazu paid the priests liberally and invited the mourners to an elaborate dinner.

Stopped at Gas Station

Belief that Hickman was still in Los Angeles or vicinity was strengthened when Jack Woods attendant of a filling station, identified the hunted youth's photograph as that of the driver of a blue automobile which eluded a hot pursuit here at dawn yesterday.

The driver of the car obtained five gallons of gasoline from Woods and sped away without paying for it. Woods gave chase in another car, but was outdistanced. Squads of police joined in the hunt for the machine without success.

Crowds of curious persons gathered in front of the Central Police Station during the day watching officers come and go, but no unruliness was displayed.

In reconstructing the crime yesterday, police assigned vengeance as an obvious motive for the slaying, but hinted that degeneracy may have been at the bottom of the case.

Hickman was employed as a messenger in the bank of which Mr. Parker is assitant cashier. He was arrested on a forgery charge last summer, but was paroled.

Police expressed the belief that Hickman erroneously thought that Parker had opposed his application for parole and had killed the bank official's daughter out of revenge. Parker did not oppose the parole, it developed yesterday.

The nature of the crime led investigators to the conclusion that sex perversion may have entered into it, and that several youths besides Hickman may have been involved.

IN POLICE COURT.

COBOURG, Dec. 21.—Gordon Althouse appeared before Magistrate Floyd in police court here this morning to answer to a charge of a serious offence which he is alleged to have committed some months ago in the region of Healey Falls, near Campbellford.

The magistrate ruled everyone out of the court but those directly concerned with the case at the moment. An interview with an official of the court after the proceedings had been concluded, disclosed the fact that Althouse would be committed for trial by the higher court at a date not yet definitely fixed.

BUSES TRAVEL 700,000 MILES EVERY MONTH

Business is Growing Rapidly in Province—480 Vehicles Operated.

LONG ROUTES COVERED.

Daily Service Given in Many Parts of Province—North Benefitted.

TORONTO, December 20.—Ontario's motor bus business is going ahead by leaps and bounds. According to statistics made available yesterday by Hon George S. Henry, the Minister of Highways, 120 more licenses were issued this year than last; 480 licensed vehicles are now in operation; and more than 3400 miles of highway are traversed daily with a monthly bus mileage of more than 700,000 miles.

Mr. Henry points out that not only has progress been shown in point of number of vehicles operated, but that considerable improvement has been made in the efficiency of the services. Some of the busses now travelling the roads cost as much as $17,000. Co-ordination on the part of individual companies has been evidenced also, and through services have been established and connections between many towns have been improved.

Many Through Services.

One company for instance operates a through service of 140 miles, and connections can be made from it for other distant points. It is possible to travel now from Toronto to Windsor on No. 2 highway, a distance of 244 miles with a single change.

Through services are also in operation between Toronto and Buffalo, Toronto to Guelph, and Toronto to Owen Sound. Kitchener, Orillia and Belleville likewise have daily services from Toronto. Farther east Ottawa is connected with Kingston by a one company service.

The advent of the bus in Northern Ontario, where train services are as Mr. Henry states, "few and far between," has done much, he adds, to solve the transportation difficulties. As far north as Timmins there are 11 busses operating between that town and the neighboring gold fields, Kirkland Lake, another of the gold mining areas, has a number of licensed vehicles. The service there meets all trains at Swastika for passengers to Kirkland Lake, a distance of five miles.

Sightseeing Increase.

Apart from the regular service operated, there has been a noteworthy increase during the year in sightseeing and chartered bus business. Some companies confine themselves solely to this class of trade—a mode of travel appealing especially to tourist visitors from the United States.

To clear up any misunderstanding that may exist regarding the licensing and operation of busses, Mr. Henry explained yesterday that such public vehicles cannot be run anywhere and anyhow, but that the applicant who wishes to operate has to prove first that there is a necessity for the service. Once he has taken out a license, it becomes the Department of Highway's policy to protect him from competition, providing he lives up to the requirements of the Public Vehicles' Act. If the necessity for additional service arises, he is required to provide such service.

Act Requirements.

The Act applies to all motor vehicles conducting upon the highways the business of a public carrier of passengers, and governs the operation of such vehicles on all roads, with the exception of the bus which operates solely within the confines of a single urban municipality. The Act requires that drivers of the vehicles be at least 21 years of age, of good moral character, and qualified chauffeurs. It also provides for an inspection of vehicles and brakes, and the carrying oy the busses of a fire-extinguisher, among other things.

Much of the revenue which the department obtains from bus operation, and which is devoted to the upkeep and building of highways, comes from a fee it imposes, varying from one-tenth to one-fifteenth of a cent per passenger mile.

"Despite weather conditions," Mr. Henry said yesterday, "most of the service have been faithfully maintained, and 1928 holds the promise of even greater operation of busses throughout the Province."

LADIES' AID CLOSES WORK FOR THIS YEAR

Millbrook United Church Ladies Hold Annual Election of Officers.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 21.—The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the United Church was held on Monday, December 19, at 3 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Albert Brown, Tupper street, with an attendance that was quite encouraging considering the busy season.

The retiring president, Miss M. E. Needham, occupied the chair, and reports of the work for the past six months were received; the church year ended in March formerly, but according to action of the General Council the financial year now closes in December, hence there was only from the first of April to report.

Six regular, and one special, meeting had been held, and seven new members added to the roll; also there was much cause for gratitude that no deaths had occurred among the eighty members who are connected with the Society. Mrs. F. Smith presented the secretary's report.

Miss May Duncan gave the treasurer's report showing that a total of about $540.00 had been raised since last March, and there are still some funds to come in.

There was considerable discussion regarding remodelling the church kitchen, but it was finally decided to have a staircase put in connecting the east entrance with the kitchen, and buy new silverware and dishes that are necessary to complete the stores already on hand, but to leave the other work until spring. Mrs. G. H. Locke, Mrs. R. H. Edmunds, Mrs. T. H. Aiken, Mrs. W. E. Ball and Miss Needham were appointed a committee to attend to these matters.

Rev. F. H. Howard presided for the election of officers which resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. C. C. Garside.
Vice-Pres.—Miss M. E. Needham.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. H. W. Johnston.
Secretary—Mrs. Fred Smith.
Treasurer—Miss May Duncan.
Organist—Miss Jean Burnham.
Parsonage committee—Mrs. J. L. Byam, Mrs. G. E Burnham, Mrs. F. P. Stinson, Mrs. G. Locke, Mrs. R. H. Edmunds, and the president.

Much regret was felt that Miss Needham insisted upon her resignation being accepted, in spite of repeated urgings that she retain the office of president which she has filled most capably for several years past.

Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard moved that a vote of appreciation of Miss Needham's faithful and efficient work be extended to the retiring president, Miss Burnham seconding the motion; the hearty applause showed how fully the members agreed with the motion.

Miss Needham replied briefly expressing the pleasure she had felt in the work, and her personal appreciation of the willing helpfulness and co-operation of the officers in any undertaking for which the Aid was responsible.

A pleasant social hour was enjoyed at the close with the service of ice cream and cake as one of its features. The Aid will send baskets of Christmas cheer to some of the sick and shut-ins of the congregation again this year.

OBITUARY

H. EGGLETON.

Death came suddenly to Mr. H. Eggleton, Mill street, Saturday forenoon. His winter pastime was fox hunting and while out near Madoc Junction he was suddenly stricken. Dr. Thompson of Marmora was passing that way and found his body by the roadside.

For a number of years Mr. Eggleton had been a sufferer from heart trouble so his death was not unexpected. In politics he was a Conservative and in religion a devotion member of St. Paul's United Church, being one of the official board as well as a teacher in the Sunday school. He was 58 years of age. A widow and two daughters and numerous other relatives are left to mourn his passing. The funeral service took place Monday afternoon at St. Paul's church.

REPORTS GIVEN ON CLINIC WORK

Substantial Balance in Treasury Shown By Financial Statement.

ATTENDANCE GROWS.

At the annual meeting of the Well Babies' Clinic Board, reports of the treasurer, Mrs. F. C. Neal, the supervisor, Dr. Jessie Birnie, and the nurse, Miss Mamie Foote, were given.

Mrs. Neal reported total receipts last year of $711.23. In this amount the balance from the previous year was included, $220.94; also the donation of $101.10 from the Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E., and the city's grant of $350. Expenditures for the year were $485.08, leaving a balance on hand of $226.15.

Dr. Birnie, in her report, spoke of the gratifying increase in attendance at the weekly Clinic meetings throughout the year, and pointed out that, since its inception, six years ago, the attendance was six times greater than when the Clinic was first started, showing a material increase year by year.

Dr. Birnie said that thirty-three per cent. of all babies born in this city eventually passed through the hands of the Clinic authorities, and that all the work done in this way did not transpire at the weekly Clinics, but went on during the week, when she and the nurse, Miss Foote, were called upon in many ways. Last week, no less than sixty-seven telephone calls were answered, most of them having to do with queries regarding diet and special care of infants. Other duties devolving upon Dr. Birnie are supplying reports to the press and gathering samples of drugs and literature for the Clinic.

Among the many cases for which advice is given at the Clinic are those concerning ricket and the particular form of hernia that is rife among young infants. One woman with four children had two suffering from hernia, for which operations were considered necessary. After being examined at the Clinic, the treatment prescribed there cured them. Other diseases encountered are connected with indigestion and diarrhoea. In treatment of under-nourished babies, some samples of cod liver oil have been used with splendid results.

Dr. Birnie spoke of the kindness of the Canadian Legion in providing, free of rental, such fine, warmly-heated, well-lighted rooms, with every convenience in connection with them, also of the assistance given by the King's Daughters in providing tea at the meetings. The donations of the Otonabee and Peter Robinson Chapters, I.O.D.E., were mentioned, also the constant help given by attending physicians and the series of lectures on teeth delivered by Dr. J. J. Craig. The work of voluntary helpers was warmly lauded, in the efforts made weekly by Mrs. W. Galbraith, Mrs. G. Helson and Miss M. Best, also the co-operation afforded by Mrs. J. Mills, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion.

The report of the nurse, Miss Mamie Foot, follows in full:

Calls, 240.

Attendance, 617.

Follow-up work included the preparation and supervision of foods and of which we have cause for enthusiasm by the results obtained in the improvement of some of the very undernourished brought to us.

Lavages, 2.

These were fewer owing to the cool summer and to the early supervision we have had of most of the children, and the careful attention our mothers give to detail work.

Telephone calls, 40.

These were for general information regarding our work and for minor advice.

We have received our usual gift of layettes from the Thursday Club for which we are always grateful. Letters of appreciation have been received from mothers who have been given instruction at our clinic and who have left us to reside elsewhere.

I am happy to say I have been very cordially received in the homes and pleased with the interest shown regarding child welfare work. During the past year we have given valuable service to 1052 mothers and their children, from 3 weeks to 4 years of age, showing an increase of 174 over last year.

MAMIE FOOTE,
Nurse,
Well Babies' Clinic.

At the close of the meeting, a vote of appreciation for their work throughout the year was tendered Dr. Birnie and Miss Foote, on motion of Mrs. A. Stevenson, seconded by Mrs. R. Harstone.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY W.M.S. MEMBERS

Mrs. J. W. Gordon is Again President of St. Andrew's Branch.

The W.M.S. of St. Andrew's United Church held its annual meeting on Tuesday afternoon in the church parlor, the president, Mrs. J. W. Gordon, presiding. The opening devotional period was followed by quite a lengthy business session, when delegates were appointed to the Presbyterial convention which is being held in St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough in January.

The annual reports of the officers were then read, showing most satisfactory progress in all branches of the work. Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland, accompanied by Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, contributed the beautiful Christmas carol, "Away in a Manger," in very sweet voice which was much enjoyed.

Mrs. Frank Ham was the principal speaker of the afternoon, and delivered a very fine address, emphasizing the great need of home mission work which is so greatly needed in cities where the helping hand to those unfortunate, who are down and out so often helps put them on the right path again.

The election of officers for the coming year then took place, with the following results:

Hon. President—Mrs. M. Kerr.
President—Mrs. J. W. Gordon.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. B. L. Barns.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. Porteous.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. C. H. Edwards.

Past Provincial Secretary Officiates at Vimy Ridge L.O.B.A.

The regular meeting of Vimy Ridge, L.O.B.A., No. 344, was held last evening in Victoria Hall. After the yearly reports had been given by the secretary and treasurer, and the routine business concluded, Miss Rose Sexsmith, Past Provincial Grand Secretary, was asked to take the chair and install the officers for the year 1928. She was assisted by Miss Myrtle Frost, W.M. of Eastern Star, L.O.B.A. and Mrs. Thorn, from the Star of Bethlehem, L.O.B.A.

Short speeches were made by the newly installed officers, and the remainder of the evening was sepnt socially. Dainty refreshments were served.

MEN ORGANIZE BROTHERHOOD

Large Attendance at First Session in St. James' Church on Sunday.

An international, interdenominational brotherhood is the definition of an organization formed last Sunday afternoon when a large number of south-end men gathered in the auditorium of St. James' Church. The attendance exceeded the expectation of all concerned.

An enjoyable song service was followed by Scripture reading, prayer, and an address by Rev. J. H. Dudgeon, whose subject was "Is the Church Crumbling, and Should We Let It?"

A business meeting was then conducted, with the result that a membership campaign will be held, with special attention for the fellow who hes felt the lack of a helping hend.

Her memory will long be cherished by the younger generation in Peterborough and by the teachers who met her from day to day. She was an inspiring teacher and her visits were looked forward to by both teachers and pupils alike.

Art under her direction became both a means of culture and a source of lasting joy. She brightened the lives of the children and leaves behind her lasting influences for good.

Her sorrowing relatives will have the heartfelt sympathy of all who knew her.

The funeral wil take place at Belleville on Friday Dec. 23rd.

City of Peterborough.
Mayor's Office,
December 17, 1927
Peterborough Health Association.

Gentlemen.—I hope the citizens generally fully realize their opportunity of not only encouraging the Peterborough Health Association but also to join in the fight against tuberculosis by buying AT ONCE Christmas Seals from the Association.

I fully realize that you can use all the money that may be given you in this great cause and also in the cause of under-privileged children.

I hope the people will buy seals NOW, and use them.

Yours very truly.
(Signed) W. T. Holloway,
Mayor.

As stated above, the Mayor realizes the work the Health Association is doing among the under-privileged children at the Jackson Park Camp, where more than two hundred are given a chance every summer to become stronger and better, under the care of qualified nurses and on the healthful and strengthening diet. This is only one phase of the many activities of the Health Association.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith did not attempt to explain clearly to herself why she pretended to be asleep that night when Bob returned from the opera, to which, at her request and Nils Jonson's, he had escorted Rhoda. Perhaps an obscure vanity over the fact that Nils had chosen her in whom to confide his feelings toward Cherry and his queer campaign to win her made her hug the secret to her breast; perhaps also there was the ever-lurking suspicion of Bob's real feelings toward Cherry.

If Bob still loved her, he would certainly disparage Nils Jonson as a suitor, and Faith believed implicitly that Bob could influence Cherry to reject him when he again asked her to marry him. And now, more than anything in the world, Faith wanted Cherry to marry Nils Jonson.

Aside from the fact it would leave her and Bob alone, free to work out their own problems unhampered by family, she was sure that Nils was an ideal husband for her wilful, impetuous, high strung, adorable little sister. But it would not be fair to Nils to give him away to anyone—not even to Bob. And so she lay very still, with her head tucked under her upflung arm, while Bob tiptoed heavily about the bedroom, yawning gustily now and then.

Poor darling, she grinned to herself he'd probably pinched himself to keep awake during the last of the interminable four hours of "Carmen." And how bored he must have been with Rhoda's conscientious, respectful chatter! But had he been bored? How little she really knew of this man who was her husband! Maybe Rhoda's obvious awe of him and her childish admiration were very soothing to his vanity. Maybe he had enjoyed the evening hugely, far more than if she, his wife, had been along!

At breakfast on Friday, Rhoda chattered eagerly of "Carmen" until Cherry appeared in the dining room, looking astonishingly pretty in a two-piece velveteen dress of golden brown. In the short, straight little suit, with its wide collar of ecru lace, she looked more like the old pictures of Little Lord Fauntelroy than like a woman who had gone through marriage, a murder trial, motherhood and divorce. Rhoda's China-blue eyes flew wide with involuntary admiration, then the girl flushed and turned her face away.

Cherry stood looking down at Nils' sister for a long moment, a queer smile twitching at the corners of her geranium-tinted lips. Then she laughed and pulled out her chair. "You certainly have an awful hate on me, haven't you, Rhoda?"

"Cherry, please!" Faith begged.

"Oh, I just wanted to reassure the poor child," Cherry retorted flippantly. "She's scared to death I'm going to marry that precious brother of hers and I want to set her mind at ease."

"It's not that!" Rhoda blurted out miserably, her face scarlet. "I'm scared to death you won't marry him! I want Nils to be happy."

"Thank you, Rhoda," Cherry's voice was suddenly sweet and tender as she laid a hand over the other girl's, "but fortunately Nils has already found out that the way to be happy is to be free. A remarkable young man—he changes his mind as quickly as he makes it up."

Saturn is in a place supposed to foment unrest and discontent which will be especially strong among workers.

Envy and jealousy are easily awakened under this sway which affects women keenly, disturbing their domestic happiness.

While this configuration prevails, quarrels and misunderstandings are easily precipitated. It is well to remember that a soft answer turns away wrath.

Although it is a season when peace should rule on Earth rumors of wars and actual bloodshed may be expected in certain parts of the world, the seers prophesy.

Extremes of emotion may be experienced under this direction of the stars, which is not favorable to business since big transactions may fall through because of changed decisions.

Amusement should be sought while this government of the stars affects humanity, for it is well to forget that all is not well everywhere.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

A dark silk or cloth frock may be transformed by a length of lace and insertion trimming that may be bought ready put together at the trimming counter—and the result is decidedly smart.

Collars and cuffs of lace or lingerie are returning to fashion slowly but surely. To be sure, they add to the complexity of dress—but they are very becoming. Say what you will, there are few women who can really stand the effect of a dark frock worn directly against the neck and throat and it is only because we have got used to the fashion and have accepted it as part of the mode that we have endured it as long as we have.

Almost any woman's hands look more distinguished and attractive if there is a line of lace or light material between them and the material of the sleeves. Many of the French dressmakers are adding the becoming touch of lace at wrists and throats to the dark velvet frocks so frequently chosen for afternoon wear.

The sketch shows a frock recently worn by a woman noted for her good taste in dress. The neckline was outlined by a strip of lace and insertion of the sort that may be bought by the yard for five or six dollars. Somewhat over a yard was needed to outline the V-neck line of the frock. The same material may be used to make cuffs for the long sleeves. It seems to me that the idea is a good one to apply to the problem of making over a last year's frock or of giving a touch of novelty to this season's frock already worn on many occasions.

Has it ever occurred to you that this fashion for wearing lace or lingerie collars and cuffs is decidedly occidental—something almost exclusively of European origin? You may look in vain through the costumery of China and Japan, Persia, India or old Egypt to find this fashion displayed. Yet for centuries it has been characteristic of the peasant costume of most European countries and part of the more sophisticated mode as well.

Perhaps the reason why, for a decade or so, the separate washable collar has been less evident in our own clothes is because of the Oriental influences that have undoubtedly been brought to bear upon the great dressmakers and which they have handed on to us.

In Peterborough Churches

KNOX UNITED CHURCH.

On Sunday morning at Knox United Church there was enacted the beautiful 'White Gift Service,' carried on by the scholars and teachers of the Sunday-school. Mr. H. Hughes played on the chimes while the members of the school filed into the church. Following this, Mr. McDonald read from the second chapter of St. Matthew the story of the offerings which the wise men brought to the King. Then followed the white gift service, which takes place each year in Knox Church on the Sunday preceding Christmas. At the front of the church was placed a table, covered with white and bearing a large white cross. Members from each class in the Sunday-school, from the primary department up to the Berean Bible class, brought baskets and parcels covered with white, or money, and placed these these on the table as their contributions to the King. During the coming week these gifts will be distributed to homes in Peterborough where they will bring joy to the inmates, both old and young. The music used in the service was both beautiful and appropriate. Miss Jessie Hill sang the old-time carol, "Ring Out Ye Bells," with accompaniment played on the chimes as well as the organ. While the offertory was being taken, Mr. H. Hughes sang "The Gift."

At the commencement of his sermon the Rev. William McDonald, the minister, declared that there was no better way of teaching the fine things of life than by object lessons. "The cross which is placed on the table reminds us of the sacrifice of Jesus Christ," said Mr. McDonald. "He gave Himself for us, so we should give ourselves for Him. The white covering for the cross signifies the purity of the soul which prompts sacrifice and service."

Mr. McDonald took his text from II. Peter, chapter 3, verse 18, "Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

"We grow by doing things, by eating, by sleeping, by performing our ordinary tasks," said Mr. McDonald. "The wish to grow or the thought of it will not bring it about. Motion makes growth. So we grow by service, and by giving. And the secret of our real happiness is our growth in grace."

Mr. McDonald then went on to speak of the curiosity trees which grow in gardens near Tokyo, in Japan. These are dwarfed trees, some over three hundred years old and yet no larger than a potted plant. He spoke of the plum trees, knotted and gnarled, centuries old, not more than a foot high, and yet living and growing, bearing plums in their season. These queer growths are made possible by the pinching of roots, the nipping of branches and the meagre allowance of earth and water. "Some people," said Mr. McDonald, "are like these curiosity trees. They are dwarfed when it comes to the Christian graces. This is because they have never taken thought to do the things and perform the acts that nourish them. They are just 'processional caterpillars,' not looking upward, not developing, merely following the ordinary round of pleasure." Mr. McDonald closed by saying, "The joy that we give to others is surely the joy that comes back to us."

City Hockey League Holds Organization Meeting

PETERBOROUGH TO HAVE CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE

Good Prospects For Loop Seen at Organization Meeting.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Past President of 1925-26 To Occupy Chair For Coming Season.

Peterborough is almost certain to have a City Hockey League this winter. This was made evident at a meeting held last evening in the Chamber of Commerce where a goodly number of citizens gathered to discuss reformation of the loop which operated quite successfully two winters ago. Among those in attendance were representatives of several teams likely to enter and also several of the old officers.

Cecil Wolfe, president in 1925-26, occupied the chair during the meeting and he it was who conducted affairs with a view to stirring up new interest. He referred to the manner in which the League had been operated in the past, mentioning the difficulty in obtaining rink accommodation, financial matters and other phases of the work of the officers and executive. However, he felt that Peterborough should have and would have a city league this year in order to promote hockey locally. He also called upon others to express their opinions and the sentiment of the meeting seemed to be in favor of a new organization.

The election of officers was therefore proceeded with resulting in the old president, Mr. Wolfe again accepting the responsibilities of his old office, W. Perks again filling the office of vice-president V. Rishea assuming the office of secretary-treasurer and an executive comprising William Kay assisted by representatives of the various teams.

During the evening a thorough discussion of available rinks, prospective teams and other topics pertaining to the league was entered into by practically everyone present.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 21.—Canadian Press.) — Clarence "Heinie" Muller of the New York Giants, was sold outright yesterday to the Toledo club in the American Association. The purchase price was not announced.

READY FOR OPENER.

Both Sextets in Good Condition For To-night's Battle.

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—Varsity seniors and Marlboro seniors held their final workouts for the opening O.H.A. game at the Arena tonight, and both sextets showed a lot of class. They are in great condition for so early in the season, and things will keep moving at a rapid pace from start to finish. This is the first season that the Students and the Dukes have been pitted against each other, but there is a great deal of rivalry between the two. One thing is certain, no matter which club is the victor the players will know they have been in a real hectic fixture.

Baxter or Claude Harris will play goal for the Dukes. Both Timpson and Eddie Baker, the senior goalies, are playing against each other in the T. and Y. Mercantile League at the Ravina. Timpson plays for C.C.M. and Baker for Goodyears. However, the junior netminders are pretty smart and they are liable to stand up well in front of the Blue and White bombardments. Two former star juniors will be in front of them. Mart Nugent and Ross Paul. Both are youngsters with plenty of speed and weight, which they know how to use. Then for forwards Watson has Freddie Miller for centre, and Freddie Heintzman and Johnny McPherson for the wings. That is a well-balanced collection of youngsters, and they can all score goals. For subs there is Harry himself, "Red" Foster, Mike Underwood and a host of others.

The Varsity line-up is pretty well known now. Murray Snyder, goal; Whitehead, Kirkpatrick and Carrick, defense; King and Stewart, centre, and Richards, Legon, Harley and McMullen, wings.

LEAFS UNCOVER SCORING PUNCH

RANGERS LEAD SECTION.

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—Some admirer of the Maple Leafs sent a Christmas box to the club in the form of a crate of goals and last night the players decided to open the gift prematurely. As a result they supplied the small crowd that attended the game with five counters, and as their opponents, the New York Americans, notched a pair of counters, the game produced seven goals, equalling the record for the season in the National League, that number of tallies having been registered in nine previous contests. In the opening game of the local season six goals were scored, four by the New York Rangers and when Chicago visited here the Leafs won by 4 to 2, but since then goals have been scarce at the Arena, the totals ranging from three down to nothing. In addition each team had one goal disallowed last night.

Boston 1, Ottawa 0.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 21.— (Canadian Press.)—The Boston Bruins won a fast, tight National League game by a 1 to 0 score from the world's champion Ottawa Senators here last night. The victory tied the count in games for the season between the Stanley Cup rivals of last spring at one all.

The teams battled on even terms throughout 57 minutes of lightning-fast hockey before King Clancy, mainstay of both the Senators' attack and defence, went off for tripping. As he stepped into the penalty pen, Manager Art Ross injected his first string forward line and with Clancy's sentence almost up the new combination produced a score.

N.Y. Rangers 2, Pittsburgh 0.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Just why the Pittsburgh Pirates haven't been able to win a game in elevent starts in the National Hockey League, eight defeats and three ties being their record, wasn't clear to the crowd of 4,000 at the Madison Square Garden rink last night. The yellow jerseyed Buccanneers skated fast, fought with freedom and showed a lot of fast team play, but they simply couldn't keep up with the Rangers. By winning the New York team again moved to the front of the American section as the Detroit Cougars were idle. The score was 2 to 0.

SPORT BITS

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Lefty O'Doul, who failed to make good with the New York Yankees because Manager Miller Huggins said he was too lazy for the big leagues, will make another attempt to get out of the minors next season with the New York Giants.

The Giants owners are said to have paid a fancy price to the San Francisco Pacific Coast League Club for O'Doul because in the 1927 season:

He hit .378 and was second to the leading hitter.

He made 276 hits, 30 more than the second man.

He batted in 158 runs, five less than the leader.

He was second in home-run hitting, with 33.

He stole 40 bases, one less than the league leader.

He was first in run scoring, with 164.

He made 80 extra base hits and 198 single for a total of 438 bases.

He played in 189 games, missing only seven during the season.

Prince of Wales Wins At Squash Racquets

LONDON, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—The Prince of Wales defeated one of the British Navy's star athletes at squash racquets yesterday in eliminating Lieut.-Commander E. A. Kershaw from the Royal Navy championships. The score was 7-9, 9-2, 8-10, 9-7, 9-5.

The victory put the prince into the semi-finals, where he will oppose Lieut.-Commander K. A. I. MacKenzie to-day.

The prince played a brilliant game yesterday. He had his big opponent on the run much of the time and during numerous long and strenuous rallies both players appeared nearly exhausted.

BOGARDIS WINS FOR NEW TEAM

Former Pete Scores Winning Goal Against Stratford For Hamilton.

RAVINAS BEATEN.

HAMILTON December 21. — Hamilton's made over Canpro team, won last night's engagement with Stratford 2 to 1, all three goals being scored in the first period. The game was exciting and the goalkeepers were called upon to turn aside many dead on drives which brought the fans to their feet. The attendance of a few hundred was not as large as expected for it was thought that the trades announced yesterday would create much interest. By the recent deal Mike Neville and Freddie Litzen were given to Stratford in exchange for Kelterborne, Bogardis and Quesnel.

On the night's play one would judge that the locals got the better of the deal Neville was at centre ice for the opposition last night and he was as slow as usual. Bogardis at left wing was aggressive and checked well.

All three counters came in the first twenty minutes of play. Connelly after 13 minutes had been completed, went through the defence and sent one which Taugher failed to touch. The lead of the Stratford team was short lived, however, for two minutes later Lederman took a rebound and shot it into the goal with Dolson sprawled on the ice.

Bogardis Beats Old Team.

The winning goal came from the stick of Bogardis less than a minute after Lederman tallied. Bogardis faked a shot at the defence and then sailed the puck for the goal, the rubber landing in the upper corner of the net. The new Ham arrivals in the camp showed up well, Roth played a consistent game.

Ravinas Beaten.

KITCHENER, Ont., Dec. 21. — Hockey, worthy of league-leading teams, was played at the auditorium here last night, when the Kitchener Millionaires defeated the Toronto's Ravinas 3 to 1 and thus retained their grip on first place in the Canpro, which was somewhat shaken last week for the first time since the season opened.

The best crowd of the season turned out to see the fastest and best played game of the year and the better club won on the night's play, homesters having the condition and the sustained speed and consequently the punch. Two third period goals settled the conflict after the clubs had fought it out on an even basis in the first two periods

JOLIET LEADS LEAGUE SCORING

Comes From Back To Leading Position in N.H.L. Statistics.

MORENZ SECOND.

MONTREAL, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Aurel Joliet, fleshy winger of Canadiens, has flashed from comparatively an obscure position in the scoring list of the National Hockey League to the leading position. This week's scoring and penalty statistics up to and including games of December 18, issued yesterday by President Calder, credit Joliat with eleven goals scored and three assists, for a total of fourteen joints. Close behind him, in second place, is his teammate, Howie Morenz, with seven goals and five assists for a total of twelve points. The Canadien pair have passed Frankie Boucher, of the New York Rangers, in the last week, the Ranger centre having held the leading scoring position almost from the start of the season. Boucher now shares third place in the list with George Hay, left winger of the Detroit Cougars, each having eleven scoring points.

Eddie Shore, Boston defence player, still heads the penalty parade with 66 minutes spent on the timers' bench. He is closely followed by Ching Johnson, of the Ranger defence, who has served 49 minutes. Thereafter there is a distinct drop to Punch Broadbent of Ottawa, who has done 36 minutes, and Hitchman, who has served 33.

PENNOCK PITCHED COURAGEOUS GAME

Gave Sterling Exhibition of Twirling in 1923 World Series.

To Herb Pennock, of the New York Yankees, goes all the credit for pitching the most courageous game I have ever seen a big league register.

This same Pennock, frail of stature, but with a heart of oak, has pitched many remarkable games during his career in the majors. Lacking the burning speed of southpaws like Waddell and Grove, Pennock, with far less stuff, ranks among the five greatest southpaws of the last 25 years.

In the last world series between New York and Pittsburgh, he gave one of his sterling performances when he set down 22 of the Pirates in order. It seemed for a time as if he might pitch a perfect game.

However, just prior to the start of the eighth session, the Yanks had enjoyed a batting rally that took about 10 minutes and Pennock, sitting on the bench, so cooled off that he wasn't at his best when he returned to the rubber.

When one speaks of a courageous exhibition of pitching, the inference is that the game must have been a low score affair, featuring air tight hurling.

Quite to the contrary in the game where Pennock showed me there never was a more lion-hearted pitcher, he was batted hard throughout. And after all, that is when it takes real courage to carry on.

The game I have in mind was the sixth and crucial one of the 1923 world series. Pennock had won one game and saved another by his relief work. Selected to pitch the sixth game, with the count standing three games to two in favor of the Yankees, it was apparent the New York Americans had a great chance to triumph over the Giants, unless Pennock had been overworked.

I had my doubts when Pennock stepped to the mound, for I feared three games in five days, two of which he started, would prove too great a task. After I saw him pitch for an inning, I was positive he was far from the top of his game.

It was evident from the way the Giants slammed away at his offerings that he didn't have his usual stuff. However, he did have his customary poise and uncanny control.

Babe Ruth staked Pennock to a one-run lead with a home run drive in the first inning but three slashing hits by the Giants quickly evened the count in their half.

In the fourth inning, two hits gave the Giants the run that sent McGraw's team into the lead. A home run by Catcher Frank Snyder in the sixth stretched the margin to two runs.

In every inning the Giants pecked away at Pennock's delivery. It seemed they would score in every session but always some brilliant fielding feat or super pinch pitching by the slim southpaw would temporarily avert what seemed to be impending disaster.

Ten hits were made off Pennock's delivery but they fail to tell the story of just how hard he was batted. Yet, through it all, he never once wavered. Realizing he didn't have his stuff, he matched his wits with every batter and as a result was often in trouble trying to make the opposition bite at bad balls.

Pennock kept plugging away when most pitchers would have said, "what's the use", and gotten careless. The break came in the eighth inning. With the score standing 4-1 against the Yanks, his teammates made five runs through a combination of hits and bases on balls, mostly the latter.

New York Americans won the game and the series, 6-4, simply because Pennock never once lost heart, even though he was batted hard in every inning. I have never seen a more courageous exhibition of pitching under such discouraging circumstances.

OWNS CANADIAN STRING

The double blue colors of the stable of H. C. Hatch of Toronto, Ont., promise to be very prominent on the Canadian turf in coming years. Mr. Hatch started last June by purchasing three horses at the Ross dispersal sale but has been adding to his stable all summer and fall and has now gathered together a very formidable string. Mr. Hatch is looking to the future and has established a breeding farm at Agincourt in York county where he will breed his own horses for future racing. The photograph on the top shows Tattling, the Marathon-Intriguante 4-year-old mare, which is to be sent to England to be bred to Coronach, the Derby winner of 1926. Below is H. C. Hatch, owner of the stable.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

PITY THE POOR

Pity the poor. I do not mean
The poor in wealth, for those who lean
On wealth are leaning on a reed
That always breaks in time of need.
The sky has so much more of gold
Than all earth's treasuries can hold,
Yet gold to which the poor are blind,
Pity the poor, the poor in mind.

Pity the poor who never shed
A tear because a dog was dead,
Who never saw, their friend to be,
God walking on a wintry sea,
Who passed a singing robin by
And knew not what he sang, nor way,
Who walked across an autumn moor
And thought it empty—pity the poor.

Pity the poor, who sadly try
A little noisy joy to buy,
Who seek their pleasures in the street,
Poor fools for smarter fools to cheat,
Pity the poor, who spend and spend
For things they cannot comprehend
A man in any ditch can find—
Pity the poor, the poor in mind.

PETES DEFEAT OSHAWA 2 TO 0 IN EXHIBITION

Good and Bad Hockey Mixed in Game in Motor City. . .

BIG CROWD OUT.

Kane and Cripps Score For the Petes in Second and Third Periods.

OSHAWA, Ont., Dec. 21.— On Tuesday evening Eddie Wright's revamped Peterborough Senior team opened the Motor City natural ice hockey season, playing the first of home and home games with Sammy Lowe's Intermediates or "Fire Brands," the latter being the nom de plume they will likely receive after appearing for the first time in their fire red uniforms with bands of black and white. A crowd that far surpassed the expectations of the Oshawa management was out at the hockey arena, more as a chance to give the home team the once over than expecting to see a real hockey game, and the cash customers got the worth of their money, as good and bad hockey was displayed, also a couple of one rounds of the Belanger-Jarvis flyweight stuff, and one of the visiting players trying to hop into the spectators' quarters to take a punch at one who was a little too loose with his tongue.

Both teams used subs at frequent intervals and with the penalties handed out by Ginger Edgar of Bowmanville, who was referee, a path was worn from the time pen to the centre ice.

The Peterborough Wright lads won the fixture by two goals to nothing, and the score indicates just about the difference between the teams on the evening's play No scoring was done in the first period, although both forward lines had many opportunities to bulge the twine, but the man with the disc either shot high, wide or handsome. In the second period Ken Kane, on a lone rush on the Oshawa goal, hit Garrison's pads and the puck glanced over to the side where Kane again grabbed the same and on his second try found the opening and the goal umpire's hand went up. In the third period Peterborough started the "kitty-bar-the-door" defence, with all five men back, while Oshawa shoved up their line on the attack. When about half way through the period the Lowe "firebrands" lost the puck in one of their attacks, Abbie Rose grabbed the disc on "no man's land" and rushed down to the Oshawa end and shot a hot one. When the goalie did not clear wide enough Cripps batted in the rebound, the game ending 2 to 0 for Peterborough.

The return fixture is to be played in Peterborough on Thursday evening of this week.

The line-ups were:

Peterborough— Goal, Lebarr; defence, Clarke and Rose; centre, Williams; wings, McPhee and Kane; subs, Maudsley, Cripps and Foley.

Oshawa — Goal, Smith; defence, Johnston and Chartrand; centre, Joyce; wings, Stephens and Conlin; subs, Rowden, Avery, Houck, Atkinson; sub goalies, Cummings and Garrison.

Referee, Ginger Edgar, Bowmanville.

DEBTS AND DISEASE

Worry and anxiety play a large part in the production of that enervation which impairs functional activity and leads to minor disorders, and even organic diseases.

The insistent call of the installment collector is irritating to those who do not have the money to pay their debts.

Credit men tell me there are four classes of prospects they have to deal with in establishing credit and collecting accounts. The first class are those persons who buy things for which they never expect to pay. Of course, this class is not bothered very much by worrying over its debts. It seems that many people in this class figure that the one they owe does enough worrying, and that two should not worry about the same debt.

Then there is the class that is well able to afford all necessities, as well as luxuries. Members of this class do not worry, but are often very slow pay.

The remaining great mass of the people is divided into two classes—those who carefully plan their budget so they will be able to pay for all necessities, and who do not contract for the purchase of luxuries which are beyond their means. In this rapidly changing age there is the other class which causes the greatest trouble to the collector or credit man. These are the people who live beyond their incomes and, besides buying the necessary things which they can afford to purchase, these people pessimistically run into debt for luxuries which they have a slim chance of paying for. They are essentially honest, but do not know how to figure out a proper balance between their income and expenditures. They are constantly in debt, and because of their honesty, and desire to do the right thing, they are forced to worry and fret over bills they cannot pay. There is no other thing for these people to do in order to avoid worry except to get into the third class I mention, of those who live within their incomes.

Many who are reading this article may be suffering from nervousness, indigestion, headaches, biliousness, or other symptoms and disorders which come from wasted mental effort, and the poisonous effects of such a destructive emotion as worry.

Take an inventory of yourself and your finances, and see if a good deal of your worry is not over the cost of high living. You may have been complaining about the high cost of living, but be honest with yourself; take a paper and pencil and sit down and make a careful analysis of your financial condition. If you are living beyond your means and are worrying about it, you can easily eliminated the worry by a few changes in your everyday habits and a curtailing of your expenditures to fit your purse. You may find that you can really enjoy a thirty-cent picture show as well as a three dollar theatre; that round steak at thirty-five cents a pound is really more tasty and as wholesome as an expensive steak at twice the price.

The installments on the low priced automobile are much easier to meet than when you try to keep up the payments on a car, the price of which would fit only the wealthy man's purse.

The workman who today receives eight and ten dollars for a day's work has a better chance to live within his income than he did a few years ago when he received only two dollars a day. The cost of living has not increased anywhere near in proportion, but still, many create causes for worry over debts by spending much more than they earn.

Questions and Answers.

Question: C. L. T. writes: "A yellowish semi-solid substance collects during the night on the roof of my mouth. Will you please tell me what causes this, and a way to prevent it?"

Answer: The substance which collects in your mouth during the night is probably caused from bacterial growth and no doubt comes from not keeping your teeth and mouth perfectly clean. Brush your teeth two or three times daily, spending at least five minutes each time, after which brushing rinse your mouth with some mild antiseptic, such as those recommended for the prevention of pyorrhea.

Question: Interested writes: "Please give me a list of foods that do not produce fat."

Answer: The foods which produce the most fat are the cereals and the fatty foods. All the rest can be said to be non-fat-forming. There are hundreds of these other foods, and in selecting a diet all you have to do is to eliminate everything made from cereals or flour, and cut down on oils and fats.

Question: Rose Marie asks: "What exercise will help a girl of fifteen to straighten her back? There is a slight hump near the shoulders in the back due to bending over reading."

Answer: All exercises which tenes the muscles of the upper back will help you to straighten up and develop normally shaped shoulders. The best exercises for this purpose are taken while lying face downward. An excellent one to take while lying in this position is to clasp the hands behind the neck and raise the head, arms, and shoulders as high as possible, relaxing to the floor and raising alternately from ten to fifteen times. Do this exercise two or three times daily and others similar, which tend to strengthen the muscles of the upper back.

MIX RIDES PLANE INSTEAD OF TONY IN "SILVER VALLEY"

From horseman to aviator is quite a jump, but Tom Mix in his new production "Silvery Valley" portrays an aviator with surprising finesse. The new picture opens a three day engagement at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow.

Considering that Tom has lived most of his life on the ranges and most of his friends ran around on four feet, he has every reason in the world to feel chesty regarding his new accomplishments.

Shooting the airplane sequences at Frenchman's Ranch, Tom gave the whole company a regular treat in the way of an aerial circus, looping the loop, tail spins, spirals, swooping and dipping and finally, climbing to the height of fifteen thousand feet thrilled the entire company with a terrific nose dive into a stalled car.

In addition to the smashing situations in "Silver Valley", the gorgeous scenic effects leave very little to the imagination. Appearing in support of the star are Dorothy Dwan, Philo McCullough, Jockey Hoefli, Tom Kennedy, Lon Poff, Harry Dunkinson and Clarke Comstock.

When a Man Loves

By ALLIE LOWE MILES

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beauteous orphan, who is coveted by hideous Count Ravoir. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoir. She rejoins Fabien and they live so extravagantly that Fabien is forced to capitalize a genius for cards. The King plays Fabien at cards for Manon, accuses him of cheating. Manon is deported. Fabien stows away on the convict ship, but is thrown with the convicts. An officer takes Manon.

CHAPTER XXIV—Continued.

The taunting laughs of the convicts, their bits of sarcastic advice, caused the term of an idea to form itself in Fabien's maddened brain. It might be possible. At least it seemed to present the only hope of escape. Swiftly he rose to his feet and standing in the midst of the chained men looked at them calmly, yet with a tenseness that for a moment surprised them. He could afford to make no mistakes. Some of the men returned his gaze curiously, some of them openly mocked him while others were utterly indifferent.

"You were once men," shouted Fabien in derision glancing around to be sure that he had caught their attention, "And they have made animals of you! In the early morning we will land—you will be chained to the plow and the millwheel—you will be beasts—driven—driven before the lash until you die!"

Fabien directed his tirade to one huge man in particular. He was a veritable giant with hairy arms and chest and animal-like features. Into his half dead eyes came a sudden gleam. Fascinated he listened attentively.

Fabien noticed this interest and became a perfect dynamo of energy. Moving closer he said craftily, "There is a way of escape—you outnumber the crew two to one—get out of here—take command of the ship and turn back to the high seas where all the gold of commerce can be yours for the taking."

Frowningly, the giant turned this thought over in his mind while Fabien went from one man to another, talking to them, urging them to mutiny. Then he returned to the giant—his best ally. Bending over him, Fabien rattled the chain that held him prisoner and said contemptuously, "Have you grown fond of these chains—or are they too strong for you to break."

With a snarl of rage the giant lurched to his feet. For a moment he held his breath and gropingly found a firm support for his feet, then he twisted the chains around his wrists, took a strong hold with each enormous hand and heaved his huge shoulders forward. Like whip cords the veins stood out on his forehead. His face turned purple with the gigantic effort he was putting forth. Back of him he felt the chains begin to give and suddenly he shot forward half way across the hold! The chains had parted! With a yell of triumph he stagged to his feet, the dangling links clanged threateningly as he held his huge hands above his head for all to see.

With Fabien urging him on, the huge bulk of a man went from one prisoner to another and adding his strength to theirs tugged and pulled at the chains until all the convicts were free.

This sudden release inflamed them like animals gone mad. They milled about like cattle at the beginning of a stampede, just before that awful rush that is followed by devastation and death.

Fabien dominated their will during that first few moments of liberty. They followed his example and swarmed up the iron bars like monkeys. From all sides the crazed men used their combined strength to burst the final gates that held them from their goal.

The very frenzy into which the convicts had worked themselves added tremendous strength to their efforts. Finally, the hatch began to give. With a roar of triumph the men redoubled their efforts. A final snap and the metal doors parted, and clattered back on the deck. The giant's head and shoulders appeared first. As soon as he gained the deck the others followed, madly shouting to each other incoherent bits about taking possession of the ship.

Through this writhing, fighting mass of humanity, Fabien fought his way upward and outward. He suddenly realized that the mutiny he had incited was about to cause unlooked for trouble. Manon was not safe with all the convicts at large. He must find her at once.

The outbreak was a complete surprise and the ship's crew was caught at a cruel disadvantage. Vainly the Captain and the Governor tried to organize them into a semblance of resistance. But the onset was too sudden, too unexpected and the convicts so far outnumbered the sailors that the result was inevitable. Backed as it was with the fury of madmen the half naked demons rushed down the deck. Here and there the battle broke away into hand-to-hand conflicts as one doughty man met another.

The giant was the spirit of the attack. If one of the ship's crew got in his way he picked up the unfortunate sailor and hurled him bodily over the rail into the sea.

Almost crazed with anxiety, Fabien finally succeeded in sidestepping the melee. With a shudder he turned his back on the fighting and ruthless killing going on about deck and made his way to the cabin door where he had last seen Manon. It was locked but he wrenched it open and his face turned livid as he saw her lying helpless across the couch with Synnelet bending over looking toward the door as if suddenly disturbed by the commotion going on outside.

CHAPTER XXV.

With a cry of rage that resembled the snarl of an angry beast, Fabien leaped across the threshold and hurled himself bodily through the air straight at the hated countenance that loomed above Manon's prostrated body.

Terror stricken, Synnelet fled and fear gave him speed enough to slip through another door leading into another cabin. He just had time to shoot the bolt home as Fabien crashed against it and beat furiously but vainly with his fists in an effort to get in.

The commotion and sudden intrusion served to arouse Manon from her death like trance. She opened her eyes and saw—not Synnelet but Fabien! Across her face, transforming it, swept an overpowering emotion of love and with a cry of joy she rose to her feet and rushed into her lover's arms.

The joy of possession, the safety and nearness of the one he loved better than life itself served to calm Fabien as nothing else could have done. Pausing long enough to hold Manon close to him—to press one long, lingering kiss on her lips, he forced himself from her embrace.

"I must go and see what is best for us to do. There is mutiny aboard, but don't fear! I will return. Lock yourself in until I come for you."

As Fabien cautiously let himself out, Manon bolted the lock securely behind him, then she pushed everything that she could move against the door that Synnelet had used a few moments before. There was nothing else she could do, except wait for Fabien's return and pray for his safety.

When Fabien let himself out of the Cabin he was just in time to see Synnelet emerge from the doorway, adjoining, and look furtively about. As he caught sight of Fabien he looked back vainly seeking an avenue of escape, seeing none and not desiring to be trapped in the room he turned and fled toward the bow.

With a bound Fabien was after him. Synnelet paused long enough to get a belaying pin from the rail, then as Fabien drew near he stopped for a moment and hurled it with deadly aim straight at his head. Fabien dodged and missed the blow but it handicapped his time and gave Synnelet a chance to elude him and jump into the rigging.

Synnelet preferred the ship's rigging only to combat with Fabien, but he had no choice and made his way upward never pausing until he had gained the crow's nest.

Like a blood hound that cannot be shaken from his quarry, Fabien went after him. But Synnelet was triumphant. He had drawn a short sword and leered at Fabien across the dangerous blade as he climbed nearer and nearer.

All about them on the deck below the fighting continued, although none of them were more determined to kill than the two men high up in the crow's nest.

THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR — XXXIX — by Nicholas Afonsky

Altitude, speed and duration records were much increased in the years just before the war, and several countries, including the United States, established flying corps or aviation schools in connection with their armies and navies. Mail was carried for the first time by airplane between Ghent and Brussel in 1913.

With the breaking out of the World War in 1914, scientists in the different countries involved worked with concentration on improving airplanes and dirigibles. In Germany the great Zeppelins, that did so much damage and brought so great terror to the Allied non combatants, were wonderfully developed.

The German Zeppelins soon began to make night air raids over England, especially when there was a moon. English cities built up a special raid defense. Streets and houses were darkened, sirens were installed to warn the populace of the coming of raiders, and scout planes were kept in readiness to ascend and chase off the raiders.

One of the famous raids occurred on September 2, 1916, when the big German dirigibles flew over the eastern counties of England and over London. The scout planes jumped into action, pursued the raiders, and succeeded in pumping one so full of shot that it burst into flames and fell to the ground.

FIRST GAME OF SEASON HERE ON THURSDAY

Oshawa Intermediates To Clash With Petes Seniors at Local Rink.

RETURN GAME.

Petes Won First Game of the Series in Oshawa By 2 To Nil.

Eddie Wright's Peterborough Seniors opened their season very auspiciously with a 2—0 victory over the Oshawa Intermediates at Oshawa last night and thus have a good lead in the home and home series between the two clubs. The second game of the series will be played at Brock Street Rink, tomorrow night, and the opening clash of the season should attract a big crowd, as the Peterborough management, to give the fans a chance to see this year's team in action, has decided upon an admission fee of 50c to all parts of the rink. There will be no reserved seats.

The Petes open their O.H.A. season next week against the Marlboros, and tomorrow night's game will help them materially in getting into shape for that battle. Oshawa are strongly favored in the Intermediate series, and they have always been strong opposition for the Petes at Brock Street Rink, which seems to be thoroughly to the liking of Sammy Lowe's boys. The ice will be lightning fast and the game should be well worth seeing.

The Petes showing in Oshawa last night, considering the fact that it was only their second time on ice this season, was most encouraging. LeBarr and Hall did great work in the nets, and Clark, the new defence player, made a most favorable impression. McFee, the new man on the forward line, scored one nice goal and gave a good account of himself, while the old reliable Ray Rose who is captain of the team this year, and Kenny Kane played sterling hockey.

Tomorrow night, the Petes' lineup with Hall and LeBarr in the nets; Rose, Clark and Foley, defence; and Kane, McFee, Williams, Maudsley and Cripps on the forward line.

Their initial game should find the Petes with plenty of support on the sidelines.

Children of Rome Enjoy First Slides When Fountain Spray Freezes In Square

LONDON, December 21, (United Press).—Bitterly cold weather that continued to sweep all Europe yesterday brought death to men at sea and ashore—and in Rome sent children out into the frozen streets for the greatest thrill of their lives.

Ten deaths were reported in Great Britain, most of them from exposure.

Half of historic St. Peter's Square in Rome was converted into the first skating pond the children there ever had seen. High winds carried jets of water from the fountains to the right half of the square, and soon there was a coating of ice. Thousands of children went out and instinctively began making slides. None had skates, for there had been no ice in their memory. It is not recorded that the square was ever frozen over before.

Th Pope stood in his Vatican overlooking the square and enjoyed the shouts of the happy children. Cardinals on the way from Monday's consistory halted their vehicles and watched the fun.

NORMAL STUDENTS PRESENT PAGEANT

"The Spirit of Christmas" Offers Explanations of Many Customs.

A beautiful pageant, "The Spirit of Christmas," was presented by the students in section "C" at the Normal School last evening.

The stage was attractively decorated with two Christmas trees, evergreens, holly wreaths, red streamers, bells and poinsettias, making a suitable background for the presentation of the pageant.

Outstanding features of the performance were the clear enunciation, lack of affectation and absence of self-consciousness of those taking part.

The concert opened by the singing of several bright Christmas carols, some of which were rendered by different sections of the students, others by the whole class in unison. Then followed a reading, "The Angel of the Christmas Tree," which would have delighted the hearts of those responsible for the placing of the trees along George street, explaining away all objections which may have been made in this connection, and rendering, by means of a pretty, whimsical story, the true spirit of the tree at Christmastide.

To the "Spirit of Christmas" fell the task of explaining to an Eskimo girl many Yuletide customs such as the singing of the "waits" in the streets, the setting out of their wooden shoes by the Dutch people, hanging up stockings at the fireplace, the significance of the Yule log, and the quaint but lovely idea of the Danes in placing in a convenient place a bird's Christmas tree adorned with bits of wool for nests, popcorn, apples, and a pan of water underneath. The story of the wise men and the shepherd was told, also the legend of the candle in the window, the kneeling of the oxen; why bells ring on Christmas morning, everything was explained to the delight and amasement of the Eskimo child.

A series of charming tableaux illustrating these customs and legends was presented by a number of the students. Carols and hymns were sung from time to time throughout the pageant ,also short stories told by several students whom the Spirit of Christmas called upon to assist in answering the questions asked by the eager visitor from the north.

The work of the students was splendid and bespoke efficient training as well as considerable practice.

Duncan Walker, principal of the school, gave a short address, in which he reminded the students of their wonderful opportunites in communicating happiness to others. He expressed his good wishes and those of the staff, and urged the students to carry into their homes the real spirit of Christmas.

Santa Claus then appeared with a treat of candy for everyone present, remarking that, on the whole they had been very good boys and girls and deserved some reward for having their swabs taken "like little men and women."

MANY PLAYERS OUT WITH SAINTS

New Junior Team Has Twenty-five Men at First Practice.

St. John's, the new Peterborough junior team, had some twenty-five players out at their initial workout at Brock street rink last night, and it was necessary to work the squad in relays. Most of last year's St. John's team were on the ice, as well as players from all the other Church League teams, and from the talent offering their services the management should be able to select a strong team.

Among those out were Hutchinson, Johnston, Frost, Williams, McGee, White, F. Hall, Jarvis, J. Hall, Hartley, Dunkerly, Cuthbertson, Butcher and Ellis.

SYNOPSIS OF A PROPOSED BY-LAW.

The Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough proposes to pass a by-law entitled "A by-law for fixing the assessment of the property of the Western Clock Company Limited."

The purpose of this by-law is to fix the assessment of the building erected to the south of the main building on part of Block "V" east of Armour Road on Corporate Plan Number One "A" for the City of Peterborough, said building being approximately one hundred and forty feet by eighty feet and being composed of a main floor and basement for a period of ten years from the 1st day of January 1928 at $1.00 excluding assessments for school taxes and local improvements.

Take Notice that the foregoing is a synopsis of a proposed by-law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to be submitted to the votes of the electors qualified to vote thereon at the next annual election for the Municipal Council and the Deputy Returning Officers appointed to hold the said election shall take the vote.

And that the 31st day of December A.D. 1927 at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon at the office of the City Clerk in the Municipality has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and for the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk.

If the assent of the electors is obtained for the said proposed by-law it will be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said Corporation at a meeting thereof to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice and that such first publication was made on the 7th day of December 1927.

Two Verdicts of Accidental Death Returned

DEATH OF HENRY STEWART WAS ACCIDENTAL, JURY FINDS

Clayton Greatrix, Driver of Car Which Struck Him, Freed of Blame.

OCCURRED DEC. 21.

Chauffeur Says He Would Have Missed Man If He Had Not Turned Back.

Clayton Greatrix, the driver of one of Herbert Stinson's taxi cars, which struck Henry Stewart on Hunter Street about 7.10 on the night of November 21st, was last night freed of all blame for the accident by the Coroner's jury . The jury found that the late Henry Stewart came to his death through an unavoidable accident, and that the driver of the car was not to blame.

The night of the accident was misty and foggy, but all the witnesses declared that the bridge was well lighted where the accident took place. The driver was returning from making a call at Driscoll Terrace, and was due at 258 Aylmer Street at 7.15, five minutes after the accident occurred a few feet west of Sheridan Street. He stated that Mr. Stewart attempted to cross the street, and when he got part way across the turned back to the sidewalk and was hit by the car.

Clayton Greatrix, the driver of the taxi, was the first witness called. He said he had been driving cars in this city since March, 1926, and had been with Mr. Stinson for about six weeks when the accident occurred. Before that time he drove a delivery truck for Harry Boyle.

At the time of the accident witness was driving his car west on Hunter Street, and when he had crossed the bridge Mr. Stewart stepped from the sidewalk and went to cross the street. "If he had kept on going I would have missed him, but Mr. Stewart turned, and while he was on his way back to the north sidewalk, I struck him, knocking him down," he said. Witness declared that he did not see the deceased until he was right in front of his car, as it was a wet, foggy night. He was unable to say how fast he was going, but he said he stopped his car in 18 feet.

Dr. MCalcolm J. McCulloch, when called upon to give evidence, said that he found Mr. Stewart in his own home in a dazed condition, and his mental faculties were rather clouded. In describing the injuries witness said there was a bad cut on the right side of Mr. Stewart's head, there were other cuts on the scalp, and several ribs were broken on the same side. He was of the opinion that death was indirectly due to the accident, as he did not believe the injuries were such as to cause death to a man in the prime of life.

Walter Harron, the third witness called, said he had known Mr. Stewart for 18 or 19 years. On the night of the accident the first thing that drew his attention was the noise of a bumper trailing. He saw a man lying on the pavement, and he immediately rushed over with several other men. He identified Mr. Stewart, and helped to remove him to his home. Witness when asked by the Coroner where the body was lying, said it was lying on the pavement directly behind the car, which was about a length away, and it would be about 9 feet from the curb and about the same distance from Sheridan Street.

Constable John Naples told the jury of the investigations he carried out for the Police Department. When the constable arrived where the accident took place he found that the body had been removed. He tested the brakes of the car, and found them in first-class working order.

Laura Stewart, daughter of the deceased, was called to identify the deceased as her father, Henry Stewart.

Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., conducted the inquiry before Coroner T. W. H. Young. Members of the jury were: H. Huffman (foreman), P. Bolton, J. Gillespie, G. Grange, J. Hoggart, H. O'Rourke, William McAuliffe, and W. Koster.

THE WEATHER

Lowest temperature last night 17 degrees; by daylight it had risen to 21 degrees. Highest yesterday 24 degrees. This is the shortest day of the year and the first day of winter. Contrary to what is usually taught in the schools the beginning of the seasons varies a little from year to year and is not always on the 21st day of March June, September and December, although the 21st is the average date. Mr. James Murty, the Hunter street stoveman, told me last night that at the conclusion of the heavy snowfalls in March '870, a man shovelling snow off the roof of Mr. B. Shortley's harness shop on George street, took a leap from the roof of the three storey building to the deep soft snow on George street and landed uninjured. His name has passed into oblivion, but the memory of the dead remains.—W. P.

Red Hats Bestowed On New Cardinals

ROME, Dec. 22. Canadian Press —Red hats were bestowed by the Pope yesterday afternoon upon the four new Cardinals recently created. They were Monsignor Raymond Rouleau, Archbishop of Quebec; Monsignor Charles Joseph Binet, Archbishop of Besancon; Monsignor Alessie Lepiciar, titular Bishop of Tarsus, and Monsignor Justinian Szerrociyi, Archbishop of Gran.

Monsignor Lepicier voicing the thanks of the Cardinals, assured the Pontiff of their filial devotion and their recognition of the grave burdens they are called upon to assume with their new dignity

The Pope replying, alluded to the fact that the new wearers of the purple, were relatively young. He mentioned Cardinal Szerroedyi particularly as the "Benjamin" of the Sacred College.

Of Cardinal Rouleau he recalled his work for education in his dioceses of Valleyfield and Quebec and concluded by exclaiming "What a vast and magnificently-Catholic Country is Canada."

PREMIER COLD PAPER CHARGES

Baldwin's Aloofness Blamed By Liberal Organ For Party Dissension.

TORIES REPLY.

LONDON, Dec. 22. — (United Press.)— The aloofness of Premier Stanley Baldwin and also of Commander Eyres Monsell, chief whip, is said by the Liberal Westminster Gazette to-day to be responsible for increasing discontent in the Tory ranks.

The Prime Minister, adds that paper, does not chat with supporters when the opportunity arises and is quite gruff with some of the newcomers. Moreover, he was recently observed to hold nearly a half hour's conversation with certain Liberals. Conservative headquarters, in replying to the Westminster Gazette, retorts that these allegations are part of the usual Liberal propaganda at this time of year, and that while naturally there are many diverse opinions in a party as large as the Tories, Mr. Baldwin enjoys the fullest confidence, esteem and affection of his colleagues.

Independent observers, however, do not share this optimistic outlook, and Sir William Joynson-Hicks' recent statement that Lord Birkenhead did not treat the prayer book question with the lofty solemnity of the Prime Minister has caused much amusement, showing what these members of the cabinet think of each other.

Around the City

Bank clearings for the week totalled $1,132,587.

The Christmas mails are being handled speedily and efficiently, judging from appearance at the city post office. Extra help has been obtained by Postmaster Lacheur, who is quite pleased and wholly satisfied with the manner in which his staff is swinging into action.

Two more shopping days before Christmas.

Early this morning the fire brigade made a hurried call to 463 Hunter street west, where the curtains in a parlor were burning. Considerable damage to the room and contents resulted from the blaze but there is adequate insurance. The call was rung in at 7.59.

Hickman Is Reported In Former Home Town

TULSA, Okla., December 22. — Acting on a report that William Hickman, the accused slayer of Marian Parker, may be seeking refuge in his former home in Hartford, Ark., the police yesterday threw a guard on the highway east of here after three men declared they had seen a man answering Hickman's description.

A restaurant employee told the police the suspected slayer may have been the man who stopped in his place of business Tuesday night and asserted he had driven from California in three days and nights. The man ordered coffee and left without paying for it, declaring that he had no money.

The other men reported seeing a man resembling photographs of Hickman.

CONTEST LIKELY IN N. MONAGHAN

Nomination Takes Place in May's School To-morrow Afternoon.

STARTS AT ONE.

The North Monaghan township nominations for council will be held to-morrow afternoon from 1 to 2 o'clock, in May's school, and then the nominated candidates will be given an opportunity to address the ratepayers and the members of the old council will be called upon to explain the business of the township during the past year

As Reeve Lillico is retiring, one candidate is already in the field in the person of Councillor T. M. Hunter, who is a former reeve of the township and Warden of the county. Ex-Reeve Rye, also a former Warden, is also expected to be nominated but it has not been intimated whether he will stand or not. If these two enter the contest North Monaghan is assured of a real fight for the reeveship. There are numerous applicants for the other positions on the council and when the nomination is over it is more than likely there will be a contest for every position on the council.

INSPECTOR DENIES HAT PULLED DOWN

Prisoner Was Ahead of Him and Simply Bolted For Liberty.

Provincial Officer Joseph Stewart told The Examiner to-day that Howard, in making his escape from his custody on Wednesday afternoon did not pull his hat down over his face, as was stated last night. He said that he was following directly behind the prisoner, who was coming down the stairs with his wife, and when he came to the bottom of the stairs he beckoned to the prisoner to go to the cells, but he made a dash for freedom.

ONE OF BILLS GIVEN SLAYER IS DISCOVERED

Tendered By Youth Resembling Hickman in Seattle Store.

OFFICERS ON TRAIL.

Case Clinched and Search Near End, in Opinion of Officers.

SEATTLE, Wash., December 22 (Canadian Press). — A hot trail, believed to be that of William Hickman, was followed by six hundred Seattle officers to-day after a youth resembling the suspected kidnapper and slayer of little Marian Parker, left one of the gold notes received as ransom from her father at a store here.

The search for the fiend who mutilated the little daughter of Perry Parker, Los Angeles bank official, and dumped the torn body almost at the feet of the distracted father after receiving $1,500, switched from California to the State of Washington with electrical suddenness last night when an excited haberdasher showed the police a twenty-dollar bill identified as one of those which Parker had given the kidnapper.

The number on the bill which the store proprietor received from his customer was K-68016970. The numbers on the bills given Hickman by Parker were K-68016901 to K-68016955 inclusive.

When notified of the clue, Chief of Detectives Herman Cline, Los Angeles, said, "The search, in my opinion, is near the end. The payment of the $20.00 gold certificate just about clinches the case, I think."

May Be In Canada.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—The belief that William Edward Hickman, accused abductor and slayer of little Marian Parker in Los Angeles, had eluded the hastily drawn police net set for him here and had headed for Canada, was admitted by officers here to-day after a night of search for the youthful fugitive.

Downtown card rooms, apartments, hotels, and rooming houses were searched without avail while deputy sheriffs and state patrol men guarded the highways leading from the city. This morning the search admittedly had been futile and officials directing it believed that Hickman was headed for the north.

Activity Along Border

VANCOUVER, Dec. 22. (Canadian Press).—Greater Vancouver police, officers at the international boundary, and constables in every town and hamlet on the lower mainland of British Columbia joined the intensive man hunt for William Edward Hickman, alleged kidnapper slayer of Los Angeles, when word was received last night that he had made his appearance in Seattle.

City police headquarters was notified of Hickman's appearance and all the forces of the lower mainland were immediately warned by telephone or telegraph. Throughout the roads from the south were kept under surveillance in the event that Hickman is attempting to reach Canada on his headlong flight from the south. The report yesterday that Hickman had been seen in Vancouver was discounted by police after investigation.

Seen in Portland

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press). — William Hickman, accused kidnapper slayer, held up F. Iripeck in Hollywood on Sunday night, taking his green sedan which was seen yesterday by two Portland, Oregon, boys, who identified Hickman as the driver, it became known today.

Air Coming Out of S-4 Now is Less Foul—Signals Not Answered.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press). — Rear Admiral Frank Brumby, in charge of salvage operations at the sunken submarine S-4, admitted at eleven o'clock today that there was no longer hope that life existed on board the submarine.

"I have not the slightest doubt that there is no life on the S-4," Admiral Brumby said.

Try to Raise Vessel

Diving operations at the sunken submarine S-4 were resumed at 8.15 this morning, divers being instructed to survey the position of the wreck preparatory to an attempt to raise it to the surface. No message had been heard from the torpedo room at that hour. When work was resumed today after a five-hour suspension, the air compressor of the Falcon had been forcing air into the torpedo room for more than ten hours.

Air Less Foul

Boston, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press). —A message received by the Navy Yard from Provincetown today stated that the air pumped from the wrecked S-4 was markedly less foul and that no signals nor responses to the hammer taps of the divers had been heard. The message follows.

"Alternate blowing and venting of air lines to the torpedo compartment has been continuing and the vented air is now markedly less foul.

"A second air line was attached and put into use shortly after midnight. Divers have examined the bows of the submarine on both sides and find the upper torpedo tube shutters closed. The lower torpedo tube shutters are closed but a plaster of mud is over them.

"Weather continued good and the Falcon has some lee as the wind had shifted to northward. Examination of the hull and other parts of the S-4 is now in progress.

Stealing Garbage Has No Appeal

MONTREAL, Dec. 21. — Alderman Mathieu, a labor representative, was haranguing his electors on the evils of low pay for city workers. "Little wonder," he said, "a man is inclined to say 'the boss won't pay a living wage, we'll rob him'" "That's so," commented a wizened old fellow at the meeting, "but who the devil wants to steal garbage?"

Winter Wheat Sown This Fall On Largest Acreage Since 1922

WASHINGTON, D.C., December 22 (Canadian Press). — Winter wheat was sown this fall on the largest acreage since 1922, but the area was well below the largest acreage planted in 1918 just before the close of the war. The Department of Agriculture in its first report on the 1928 winter wheat area yesterday placed sowings at 47,897,000 acres, an increase of 10.2 per cent. over that sown a year ago.

The greatest increase over last year's plantings occurred from Ohio west to Minnesota and Missouri, where wet weather last fall prevented the planting of the usual acreage. The condition of the crop on December 1 was 86.0 per cent. of normal, which is more than four points better than a year ago and two points better than the ten-year average.

No estimate was made of probable production owing to the uncertainty as to what percentage of the acreage will be abandoned because of winter killing and for other reasons. Last year's planted area was 43,465,000 acres, of which it is estimated 12.9 per cent. was abandoned, and 37,782,063 acres harvested. The crop last year was 552,384,000 bushels, the acre yield having been 14.6 bushels.

No Inquest Into Trapper's Death

KENORA Ont., December 22. Canadian Press. — There will be no inquest into the death of Jack Presley, a well known trapper, who was found dead a few days ago a short distance from his cabin in the district north of Kenora.

Provincial police who investigated the death stated that Presley accidentally walked into one of his own traps, which consisted of a set gun. The gun, the police believe, exploded, killing the trapper instantly.

ROYAL FAMILY LEAVES LONDON

Will Spend Christmas Season at Sandringham as Usual.

HOUSE ALTERED.

LONDON, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press Cable).—The King and Queen left London to-day in accordance with their usual custom, to spend the Christmas season at Sandringham, a custom which has been followed by King George and his father ever since King Edward Seventh, then Prince of Wales, acquired the Sandringham estate in the early "seventies."

However, this will be King George's second Christmas actually at Sandringham House, for during the lifetime of Queen Alexandra, he occupied the neighboring York House. A good many changes have been made for Their Majesties' comfort and convenience, but none to disturb the pious memories of Queen Alexandra. The King and Queen expect to be joined at Sandringham during Christmas week-end by the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York and Princess Elizabeth and other members of the Royal Family.

ACCIDENTAL SHOOTING CAUSE OF DEATH OF KEITH BLEWETT

Fatal Shot Was Fired By Mossom Montgomery While Hunting, Jury Decides.

BOYS GIVE EVIDENCE.

Jury Warns Parents Against Letting Young Boys Have Access to Firearms.

"We find that Keith Blewett came to his death from gunshot wounds received when a gun in the hands of Mossom Montgomery was accidentally discharged.

"We think the parents of boys of this age should be more careful about giving them access to arms."

This was the verdict of the Coroner's Jury which enquired into the death of Keith Blewett, 14, who died in Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, on the night of December 14 from gunshot wounds received that afternoon in the Buckhorn Road a short distance south of Buckhorn. The accident occurred while Keith Blewett was hunting rabbits with Robert Armstrong, 14, and Mossom Montgomery, 15.

The verdict had to be written twice. The first time it was drawn the name of neither of the boys was included, the verdict merely stating that one of the party had fired the shot. On the Coroner pointing out that this would not be fair to Robert Armstrong, the third member of the party, the jury retired again and rewrote the verdict.

A great deal of questioning was required to get an admission from the Montgomery boy that he thought he had shot his friend. He repeated many times his belief that he could not have hit Blewett as he fired at a rabbit unless Blewett jumped in front of his gun, and that he could not remember him doing that. When Dr. Young pointed out that he had said that Blewett could not have shot himself and that Armstrong had not fired, and asked Montgomery directly did he think he had shot Blewett, he admitted that he did, and began to sob.

Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young presided, with Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., conducting the case. Detective Sergeant W. E. Meagher acted as Coroner's constable. The jury, which was the same as that which heard the Stewart case, consisted of H. C. Huffman, foreman, J. Haggart, H. O'Rourke, J. Gillespie, W. McAuliffe, W. Koster, G. Grange, and P. Boulton.

Robert Armstrong.

Robert Armstrong, the first witness called, and who was one of the boys out on the fatal hunting party gave his age as 14 years. He said he has been out hunting rabbits several times before. On December 14 he was out hunting with Keith Blewett and Mossom Montgomery. Each of the boys had a shot gun and while they were standing on the Peterborough-Buckhorn road Keith Blewett was shot.

Witness described the position of the boys as in a line diagonally across the road. Blewett was in the centre. He was north west of the other two and Montgomery was south east of Blewett. The hounds at the time of the accident were in the woods chasing a rabbit and while the boys were standing there one crossed the road. Blewett and Montgomery discharged their guns and he heard Blewett cry "Oh, my side!" Both boys rushed to Blewett and then the deceased told them that someone must have shot him. Armstrong claimed he did not as he only took four shells out with him. One he fired at a rabbit, another at a stump and the other two he took home with him.

Dr. A. G. Howson.

Dr. A. G. Howson was called to give the injured boy medical aid. He found him about 4 p.m. in a house in Buckhorn. His side was badly shot and he immediately had him removed to Nichols Hospital in this city, where he died that night. Dr. Howson was of the opinion that Blewett was shot from behind as the shots appeared to have entered back of the right medial line. In being shown the shot used in the 20 gauge and 12 gauge guns he said he thought the shot taken from Blewett's body when he was operated on in the hospital resembled the smaller of the two.

Mossom Montgomery.

Mossom Montgomery, 15, works for his grandfather, Albert Montgomery.

BRITISH HOUSE IS PROROGUED

His Majesty the King Says Policy Will Still Be Based on League.

OFFICIATES AT CLOSING.

LONDON, Dec. 22. — (Canadian Press.)—A declaration that the British Government had no intention of embarking upon an increase in its naval building program despite the "temporary failure" of the Geneva Naval Conference to reach a general agreement was contained in the speech from the throne at the prorogation of Parliament to-day.

The section of the speech dealing with the allied war debts emphasizer that the policy of the government was to limit its claims on the allies to such an amount as, together with the reparation receipts would cover the government's own war debt obligations. It was brought out that war debts funding arrangements had been signed by Great Britain with all the countries concerned except Russia.

After brief sittings of both houses to dispose of certain outstanding bills and the reading of the King's speech, parliament was prorogued until February 2.

ITALY RETURNS TO GOLD BASIS

France and Spain Only Larger Countries With Currency Unstabilized.

BULGARIA ON WAY.

LONDON, Dec. 22. — (Canadian Press.)— The return of Italy to the gold standard to-day left France and Spain as the two principal Europeah countries which have not stabilized their currencies since the war. Great Britain, India, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Sweden, and Poland have the gold standard, although in Sweden it is only on a dollar basis. The countries which have not come into line yet are France, Norway, Spain, Rumania, Greece, Turkey and Bulgaria, although Bulgaria is partly on and working toward gold basis.

Ask For Beer Sale During Specific Hours

WINNIPEG, Man., December 22.—Canadian Press. — Re-drafting of the government's new liquor bill so as to permit the sale of beer in hotels' dining rooms, during certain specific hours, was advocated by Mayor R. R. Werr, of Winnipeg, during the consideration of the bill by the law amendments committee of the Provincial Legislature yesterday.

Mayor Werr, who appeared on behalf of the Manioba Hotelmen's Association, also urged that all liquor consumed on the premises by hotel guests should be sold by the hotel management and that for this purpose the hotel should act as the agent or servant of the liquor commission

PROPOSE PEACE CONFERENCE BETWEEN INDUSTRIAL FACTIONS

Purpose of Bringing About "Peace in Industry" Throughout England.

SEEK CO-OPERATION.

Proposals May Involve Complete Re-organization of British Industry.

LONDON, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—The proposed conference of British big business men and employers with the trades union leaders early in the New Year for the purpose of bringing about "peace in industry" is the main subject of conversation in the lobbies of Parliament and in the industrial and commercial circles of the country. The invitation originally extended to the Council of the Trades Union Congress for such a conference was accepted Tuesday, and interest was immediately aroused, particularly among the Labor people, as to what the employers intended to offer the trades unions.

Great Britain's "peace in industry" campaign emerged from the talking stage Tuesday when the General Council of the Trades Union Congress agreed to the suggestion of Sir Alfred Mond, heading a group of big employers, to take part in a discussion for the purpose of ascertaining whether a programme of industrial co-operation could not be formulated and substituted for continuous strife and warfare, which has characterized the relations between British employers and employes for a quarter of a century, culminating in the disastrous general strike of 1926, from which the country is just recovering.

From 1900 to 1925, strikes and lockouts caused Great Britain the loss of 327,000,000 working days; then in 1926 the general strike added another 100,000,000. The year 1927, with the loss of only 1,000,000, constitutes a new low record for the century.

Reorganize Industry

The scope of Sir Alfred Mond's proposals may involve complete reorganization of British industry and an entire new relationship of the trades unions with the employers, with the object of achieving a new standard of production and a better standard of living for the workers.

Thus far, the only serious opposition which has developed to the "peace in industry" movement has come from A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation—"Emperor Cook of the general strike"—who, with the failure of his recent unemployed miners' march on London to influence the British Government's attitude toward the mining industry, is convinced that militant unionism will be hoisting the white flag of unconditional surrender if the union leaders pledge peace with the employers.

Mr. Cook maintains that there will be nothing but disappointment for the workers and disillusionment for the public. His view is not shared generally by Laborites. The Trades Union Congress has named a strong committee of influential Laborites like J. H. Thomas and Ben Turner to act with the industrialists in considering the most suitable subject for discussion and to arrange for the conference.

Meet as Individuals

A vulnerable point in the scheme is that the employers will meet the Laborites only as individuals, not as representatives of responsible employers' organizations. One of the Laborites' first demands will probably be that the employers formulate an organization to enforce any agreement reached.

The industrial interests whom Sir Alfred Mond has enrolled in his peace movement are the biggest employers in the country. They represent a capital of £1,000,000,000 and cover the whole field of steel, coal, transport, chemicals, engineering, shipping, textiles and milling.

"I regard the acceptance of our invitation by the Trades Union Congress," said Sir Alfred yesterday, "as a most happy and important augury for the welfare of industry and the country during the coming year."

STATE POLICE CONTINUE HUNT FOR ABDUCTOR

Believe Slayer Has Second Lair in Foothills Near Alhambra.

SUSPECTS RELEASED.

Reported He Traded Overcoat For Gasoline at Culver City Garage.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—The ever-widening circle of search for Marian Parker's murderer found scores of detectives engaged late yesterday in a hunt for a new "death house" in the foothills near Alhambra.

Though not abandoning entirely their belief that William E. Hickman, accused slayer of the schoolgirl, dismembered her body in his Bellevue apartment quarters here, the hunt for a second lair was vigorously pressed. It was from Alhambra that the slayer sent one of his telegrams to Perry M. Parker, father of Marian, demanding $1,500 ransom.

Another new tip on the trail of the slayer caused orders for an airplane carrying detectives to leave for Arizona late yesterday. George Contreras, chief of the district attorney's detective staff, and Police Detective Lieutenant MacCarron got instructions to fly to Yuma and Nogales. The nature of their mission was held secret.

Numerous suspects were arrested yesterday, but all were released. Among them was Richard O'Neill, of Palms, a town in the Santa Monica district. It was the fifth time he had been arrested, so Norman Cline, chief of detectives, gave him a letter to identify himself to the next officer who should mistake him for Hickman. He is said to be so nearly like the accused man that he could pass for a twin.

Despite information concerning other persons reported seen with Hickman, Herman Cline, detective chief, reiterated his opinion that the slayer carried out his crime alone and unaided.

Cline, backing up his belief that it was a "one man job," declared all other suspects in the case, two of whom still were held, had been exonerated.

The two men held are Earl Smith, said to have been a friend of the Parker family, and George Barnaman, believed to be mentally deranged.

Intense feeling against the slayer gave no signs of abating. When a man who was somewhat similar in appearance to Hickman was arrested at Sixth and Hill Street at noon, a crowd closed in so menacingly that a riot call was sent to Central Station. After a few questions, the suspect, Dick Foell, was released and escorted out of danger by officers who answered the emergency call.

Traded Overcoat.

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Dec. 22.—An exchange of his gray overcoat for five gallons of gasoline was made at a Culver City garage last Thursday by William Edward Hickman, sought as the slayer of Marian Parker, only a few hours after he kidnapped her, investigators announced here yesterday.

The overcoat, originally described as part of the costume worn by Hickman the day he abducted the child from her school, was identified by Los Angeles police as that of the slayer. The discovery was made by Captain C. T. Truschell, Culver City motorcycle officer, who owns the garage.

Hickman was reported by a garage attendant as driving in for five gallons of gasoline. He said he could not pay for it, but would leave his overcoat and redeem it the next day. The attendant turned the coat over to Captain Truschell when its owner failed to return for it. He told the officer that Hickman had a woman with him at the time.

OLD MASTERS

She is not fair to outward view
As many maidens be,
Her loveliness I never knew
Until she smiled on me;
Oh! then I saw her eye was bright,
A well of love, a spring of light.

But now her looks are coy and cold,
To mine they ne'er reply,
And yet I cease not to behold
The love-light in her eye:
Her very frowns are fairer far
Than smiles of other maidens are.

Mexican Boy Scouts Confer Three Highest Decorations on Lindbergh.

MOTHER AT BORDER.

Will Take Same Route as Son Along Gulf Coast To Tampico.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Mexican Boy Scouts, adopting Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as their ideal of youth and manhood, have conferred upon him their three highest decorations—Knight of the Order of the Lion, Knight of the Order of the Eagle, and Knight of the Order of the Tiger.

The little ceremony at the United States' Embassy, in which these honors were bestowed, pleased Lindbergh about as much as anything that has occurred since his arrival in Mexico City a week ago. The development of aviation and the improvement of young manhood are subjects very dear to the heart of the young aviator.

With all the many things that he has to keep in mind, the uppermost thought with Col. Lindbergh is the air journey which his mother is making so that the two may spend Christmas together. Mrs. Lindbergh will probably reach Mexico City this afternoon, and her son will go forth in a plane to meet her and guide her safety to Valbuena Field and thence escort her to the United States' Embassy, where she will be the guest of Ambassador and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow.

Mother At Border.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh arrived here by air at 5.02 o'clock yesterday afternoon and prepared to cross the international border in her flight to Mexico City to spend Christmas with her famous son, Col. Charles E. Lindbergh.

The big tri-colored monoplane carried Mrs. Lindbergh as a passenger, covered approximately 715 miles after taking off from Tulsa, Okla., yesterday morning. It was the third day in the air for the mother of the "Lone Eagle" since she left Detroit.

In entering the land which is feting her son for his non-stop flight from Washington to the Mexican capital and his conquest of the Atlantic Ocean, Mrs. Lindbergh will fly down the Gulf Coast to Tampico, the route taken by Colonel Linbergh. From Tampico the Mexican capital is flight of several hours inland.

Flier's Mother Leaves Tulsa This Morning On Way To Mexico.

LUNCH AT SAN ANTONIO.

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The tri-motored monoplane carrying Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh and party to Mexico City, where she plans to spend Christmas with her son, Col. Charles Lindbergh, hopped off from Tulsa airport at 7.45 this morning for Dallas, Texas. The party will have luncheon at San Antonio.

OBITUARY

EDMUND HERLIHY.

DOWNEYVILLE, Dec. 22. — The funeral of the late Edunmd Herlihy, who died at his home in the village, Friday, took place from his late residence Monday morning to St. Luke's church, where requiem mass was sung by Rev. Father Galvin. Rev. Father McCauley, of Ennismore, preached the funeral sermon, which was a masterpiece of eloquence. The Reverend gentleman in the course of his remarks referred to the exemplary life of the deceased, who endeared himself to all who knew him. It could be truly said that his whole life was a preparation for death. Always ready to assist and comfort those in sorrow and need, he was rewarded with a most beautiful and happy death sanctified with all the rites of his holy religion and surrounded by his family who dearly loved him and gave him all the tender care possible. The late Mr. Herlihy, whose parents came from the Old Land, was born 77 years ago and followed the occupation of farming until eleven years ago, when he retired and purchased his home in the village, where he resided when he passed away Friday after an illness of some months' duration, but his death was unexpected and was a shock to his family and friends. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his wife, whose maiden name was Margaret Carroll, two sons, Martin and William C., of Emily, two daughters, Mrs. Patrick Perdue (Olive) of Emily, and Mrs. Frank Cavanagh (Pearl) of Ennismore, also one sister, Mrs. Thos. Murray of Peterborough, two brothers, Patrick (his twin brother) of Downeyville, and William of Lindsay also sixteen grandchildren.

The cortege at the conclusion of the mass wended its way to the cemetery, where the remains were interred. The services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Father Galvin, assisted by Rev. Father McCauley, of Ennismore. The pallbearers were Messrs. Thomas Flynn, Martin Carroll and William Fitzpatrick of Emily, Joseph Doran of Ennismore and James Carroll and William Herlihy of Lindsay.

DIVERS LOCATE WRECKAGE OF SUNKEN VESSEL

Found on Opposite Side to That Which Experts Went Down.

NO REPLY TO SIGNAL.

Would Attempt To Bore Hole With Compressed Air Drill.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 22 (Associated Press).—The sunken submarine S-4, which was lost when a line leading to a marking buoy became disconnected in a gale, was found late yesterday afternoon. The wreck was located by sailors grappling from a motorboat.

The S-4 was found on the opposite side of the vessel to that on which the first two divers went down. James Ingram, the second diver, remained below over an hour. Diver John Kelly, the third, stayed down about the same time. Diver D. M. Bird was sent down when the grappling detail located the submarine.

Bird, it was said on the mine sweeper Falcon, base of diving operations, was ordered to connect his descending rope with the conning tower of the S-4. He was still under water at 5.45 o'clock.

Commander Edward Ellsberg, directing the diving work, said an attempt would be made to drill a hole into the submarine with a compressed air drill and insert an air line. Bird, the officer said, rapped on the hull of the S-4, but received no answer.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—No word has been received as yet from the tug James Whalen, which left on Monday night on a combined mission to bring the light keepers of the district and look about Isle Royale for the missing lake freighter Kamloops. Had the tug found any trace of the Kamloops, it was expected to return last night, but otherwise the plan was to go on to Battle Island, ninety-four miles along the north shore, pick up the light keeper there and return.

CAMPBELLFORD NEWS.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 22.—Gerald Wilson, faculty of Medicine, Toronto University, and Leslie Clegg, faculty of Applied Science and Engineer, Toronto, have arrived home for the Christmas holidays.

The ice at the curling rink looks as though, after all, there might be curling for Christmas. When permission is given to skate on it, there is usually not very long to wait before the curling stones replace the blades. There has already been the usual amount of skating permitted, and it is expected that in another forty-eight hours the marking will have been put in and the pebble in shape of the opening games.

At the present time, the unemployment question is a very serious one with some of the men in town. The Canadian Legion employment committee has already succeeded in obtaining positions for some of the legonnaires, and anyone who wishes to secure the services of a man for even a short time, would probably find a solution to his problem by applying to the employment committee of the Legion here. Member who are out of work should leave their names and

A radio program which seemed to appeal to the people on the street was reproduced by a power speaker set out in front of a dealer's place of business last night. This particular point on Front Street became crowded to such an extent that the police had to ask some of them to "move along." This request which was really an order, merely caused the listeners to hear the music from points further along the street.

The chief attraction in town yesterday was the new Ford car. This forerunner of, the latest product in the light car field arrived yesterday morning. All day the crowds have thronged the show rooms and inspected every detail of the little car. It is a Tudor sedan and seems to be finding favor with Campbellford people. Already there have been a large number of signed orders taken and as many more have expressed their desire to purchase when the date for delivery is more definite. Mr. Douglas, the dealer, said he expected this would be early in the month of February, but was not certain when his stock would arrive.

So far nothing further has been heard regarding the whereabouts of the two motor car thieves who succeeded by so narrow a margin in escaping capture by the local police officers. Very complete details for their capture have been made in case they put in an appearance here again. This is hardly expected to be the case after their narrow escape Tuesday, but as Hankinson was resident here for most of his early youth and is familiar with the country, there is just a possibility that more may be heard from either one or both of these men.

With the closing of the schools today, Christmas becomes a reality for the smaller children. Then there are still a few Christmas entertainments to take place, which will help the Christmas spirit along to a considerable extent. Tonight, St. Andrew's Sunday School will hold its annual Christmas entertainment, and on Friday night, the Salvation Army. Both concerts will be held in the respective churches.

ONTARIO STATUTE REVISION IS FINISHED BY COMMISSION

Three Years Have Been Taken in Work of Consolidation.

IN FOUR VOLUMES.

Three Ready To Distribute—Index To Be Ready Next Month.

Revision of Ontario statutes, which was begun by a special Commission in 1924, has been completed.

This new revision covers a period of thirteen years, comprises four volumes instead of three volumes issued in 1914, and is the work of Hon. William Edward Middleton, Hon. Hugh Thomas Kelly, Hon. William Nassau Ferguson, and Hon. Robert Smith, Justices of Supreme Court of Ontario; His Honor James Gamble Wallace, Judge of the County Court of Oxford; Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General of the Province; Kenneth W. McKay, St. Thomas, Editor; and Allan Malcolm Dymond, Edward Bayly, and William Bruce Wilkinson, of His Majesty's Counsel.

Working Since April.

During the Legislature session of 1927, an Act was put through to provide for the consolidation of the statutes, and showing the method that should be adopted. Since the House rose in April, the above Commission has been steadily at work completing the revision as outlined by the Act. This extra revision fell more particularly on the chairman, Mr. Justice Middleton, and on Messrs Dymond and Wilkinson, Law Clerks.

The main statutes are to be found in the first three volumes of the 1927 edition. The first volume contains 1,374 pages, the second 1,314, and the third 1,465 pages. The fourth volume contains the index and certain Imperial Acts, and certain appendices. This revision, Parliamentary circles point out, is a very considerable improvement over the 1914 issue, which was a large and cumbersome affair.

Volumes I., II., and II. contain an alphabetical table of statutes under a designation that will enable anyone using the statutes to pick out the required chapter speedily. In this way it is not always necessary to consult the fourth volume and its extended index.

Price of Set $15.00.

The first three volumes have been printed and bound, and are ready for distribution. It is anticipated that these will be sent out at once to the Judges, Police Magistrates, and Attorneys for the Crown in various counties, departments of the Government service, and members of the Legislative Assembly. To others entitled to them they will be despatched at as early a date as possible. The fourth volume, owing to the fact that the index cannot be fully completed until the three volumes are completely paged, will not be out until January 15. The price for the complete set is $15.00.

Attorney-General Price yesterday disclosed two interesting records in connection with the publication of this revision. Mr. Dymond, Senior Law Clerk, has drawn the necessary Orders-in-Council and proclamation for four successive revisions—1887, 1897, 1914, and the present one. Horace Wallis, King's Printer, under whose direction the present issue was got out, was in the employ of Hunter, Ross & Company, as a copyholder in the proofreader's office when the proofreading was done on the statutes of 1877.

Don't drive after drinking.
Do your drinking at home.
Don't drink.

NO SIGN OF LIFE ON SUNKEN S-4

Air Pumped Into Compartment For Five Hours Without Apparent Result.

SIGNALS UNANSWERED.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—No indications of life could be discovered in the torpedo room of the sunken submarine S-4 at three o'clock this morning, after air had been pumped into the compartment for five hours. At that hour, diving operations were suspended by the salvage ships until seven o'clock.

Six divers went down to the sunken vessel after three others had searched for the wreck, which lost its marking buoy in the gales of Monday and Tuesday. The last diver to go down was C. Scott, who submerged at 2.10 and was down for fifty minutes. At fifteen-minute intervals throughout the night the oscillator of the mine sweeper Falcon, flagship of the salvage fleet, sent signals to the S-4 but not a sound came from the torpedo room in which six men had been imprisoned since Saturday afternoon.

BRITISH PRIVATES MAY WEAR MUFTI

Privilege Hitherto Allowed Sergeants and Officers is Extended.

LONDON, December 22 (Canadian Press Cable). — The ordinary British soldier can walk out in mufti now just like an officer or non-commissioned officer, so long as his record is clean, according to an announcement from the War Office.

It is stated that the extension of this privilege to "Tommy" has been decided upon with a view to the continued improvement in the conduct of the soldiers. Heretofore this privilege has not been extended to any soldier below the rank of sergeant. It goes into effect forthwith at the discretion of the commanding officers.

In pre-war days it was often urged that the perpetual appearance of the soldiers in scarlet or blue uniforms constituted a hindrance to recruiting.

FOUR CHARGES LAID AGAINST MADOC MAN

Stone Claims That Not One Shareholder Has Asked Money Back.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Dec. 22.—Faced with a fourth charge of obtaining by false pretense with intent to defraud, Arthur Stone, of Madoc, Ont, reappeared before Magistrate Maxwell in County Police Court yesterday afternoon and pleaded not guilty through his solicitor, Hugh C. Cameron. The hearing of all four charges was enlarged at Mr. Stone's request for two weeks and the $30,000 bail of last week was reduced to $10,000 by consent of Crown Attorney McCrimmon. Stone is required to furnish $5,000 sureties in himself and two other sureties in $2,500 each. He intimated that he can furnish the bail. The latest charge is that Stone on June 9 last obtained $200 from Ernest Ebley, of this city, by false pretense with intent to defraud.

THURSDAY, DEC. 22, 1927.

NOMINATION DAY.

Tomorrow is one of the most important days of the year from a municipal viewpoint, inasmuch as it is the occasion of the nominations for the civic election, the day upon which the electors will be called upon on New Year's Day to select a large part of the municipal government for next year.

It is expected that there will be a fairly large number of candidates nominated; there has been more than the usual pre-nomination interest in the various contests, and aspirants to a greater extent than is normally the case have been frank in the declaration of their intentions.

Several men whose qualifications for office are admitted and who are being pressed by their friends to allow their names to be nominated are still undecided.

It is to be hoped that such citizens will see that there is a very real call for service in connection with municipal positions, and that the duty of assisting in the civic government, in one department or other, is one that should cheerfully be assumed by those who pride themselves upon being good citizens and friends of Peterborough.

THE MAYORALTY RACE.

An interesting feature about the local municipal election is that the question of whether the new Council will be called upon to appoint two Aldermen or three depends entirely upon the result of the mayoralty contest.

That situation has been brought about by the fact that while ex-Ald. Denne, one of the aspirants for the mayoralty, has resigned from the Council, his opponent, Ald. Phelan, has not done so.

Both were elected for two years at the last election, so that should Ald. Phelan fail to make the grade in the contest for the chief magistrate's chair, he would still remain a member of the Council and no appointment would have to be made in his case, it being necessary only to appoint Aldermen in place of Messrs. Denne and Fife, the latter of whom resigned to take charge of the sewage disposal plant.

On the other hand, should Ald. Phelan be elected Mayor, three Aldermen will have to be appointed to fill the vacancies caused by his own promotion and the resignation of ex-Ald. Denne and ex-Ald. Fife.

THE SCHOOL BOARD'S TASK.

The Board of Education during the coming year will be called upon to attend to some unusually important business, which makes the presence in the field again of experienced members of the Board a matter of moment.

Not only will the details in regard to the completion of the new Collegiate Institute have to be attended to, but the Board will have to deal with the question of the staff that will be needed when the enlarged building is ready for service.

In this connection, however, the Board of Education is particularly fortunate in that old and experienced members of the teaching staff, who have for many years produced remarkable results with equipment and under conditions that came close to being discouraging, can be counted upon to do splendid service with the facilities that will be provided by the commodious and well-equipped new building.

The men who have carried on in the face of inadequate accommodation and have achieved results in spite of the handicaps under which they have had to work will undoubtedly receive the favourable consideration of the Board when the new school is being staffed.

They have earned their spurs under fire, as it were, and are fairly entitled to a chance to show what they can do under favourable conditions.

THE SAME RULE FOR ALL.

A situation has arisen in St. Catharines that calls for an explanation from the Ontario Government.

The manager of the Government liquor store in that city is an Alderman whose term expires this year, and who desires to again offer himself as a candidate.

According to a ruling made by D. B. Hanna, Chairman of the Liquor Control Board, any employee of that Board may participate in municipal politics if it does not interfere with his duties.

That paves the way for the St. Catharines vendor to be a candidate.

But the official in charge of the St. Catharines Ontario Government Employment Bureau also desires to stand for the Council, and he has been informed by Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, under whose department he is employed, that he cannot be permitted to enter the municipal field.

Here we have two government departments adopting a diametrically opposite policy on this question.

One Government employee is allowed to take part in municipal politics, while a second is barred

There should be some consistency in the matter.

The Examiner's own opinion is that Government employees should not be permitted to stand for municipal offices, but in any case there should be no discrimination

The same policy should apply to one and all.

WHY THE DIFFERENCE?

We have never been able to understand why it is that people who work for a Government are treated differently from those who work for private companies and individuals. In Thursday's Toronto despatches it was announced that Queen's Park would close for the Christmas holiday on Thursday, December 22nd, and would re-open on Tuesday, December 27th. This announcement was made by Premier Ferguson.

This announcement was no doubt greeted with loud cheers by the employees of Queen's Park. It will be very nice for those who work at Queen's Park to have Friday and Saturday to enjoy themselves as well as Monday, with which the most of us will have to be satisfied. Is there, however, any good reason why the taxpayers of Ontario should put their hands in their pockets to provide these public servants, who are by no means overworked, with two extra days' holidays at Christmas? The majority of those who will contribute the taxes to pay for this extra enjoyment for Ontario's civil servants, will work both Friday and Saturday, and, furthermore, a goodly proportion of them will work until late Saturday night. They will not be able to take Friday and Saturday off to get themselves in proper trim to tackle the Christmas turkey. They will have Sunday and Monday off and will have to be contented with that.

There is altogether too much of a tendency on the part of Governments to play the "Lord Bountiful" with other people's money. At Ottawa the Civil Service takes a holiday on the slightest excuse, and Customs Houses all over Canada and banks close up on days when other businesses carry on as usual.

If the whole Ontario civil service at Queen's Park can take two extra days at Christmas without interfering with the smooth running of the Provincial business it would look as though a few people could be removed from the shoulders of the taxpayer. If not, then the taxpayer will have to pay for extra help to enable the departments to catch up. No matter which way it goes the taxpayer of Ontario is being stuck for several thousand dollars in order to give to the Government employees privileges which he cannot afford to enjoy himself.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

PEACE IN OUR TIME.

The fashion for slogans, each expressing the spirit of a period has this at least to recommend it. By means of such slogans we can "date" the moods and ambitions of yesterday. To recall a series of them is to pass in review the policies which have successively captivated men's minds.

All of us can recall a time not long ago when "reconstruction" was the slogan of the moment. The nations, released from the nightmare of war, were nursing their wounds and contemplating meanwhile the widespread wreckage and havoc around them. The next few years, it was hoped, would see the clearing of the debris, followed by rebuilding on an extensive scale.

The physical rebuilding of the devastated areas is already complete or not far from completion. As thousands of Canadians making their pilgrimage to the battlefields of Flanders have seen for themselves, the cities of Belgium and France are restored and have hidden successfully the scars of battle. But elsewhere in the world, where there was little physical destruction and not much actual building to be done, there are other "devastated areas" which challenge us, and challenge no less sternly because the devastation is not at first sight visible.

There are industrial districts in more than one country, which though far removed from the war zone, suffered the lasting effects of warfare. These districts are still faced with demoralized markets and burdened with idle workers and machinery.

Instead of achieving an all-round restoration in the nine years that have passed since November, 1918, we have patched as best we could the framework of civilization. Meanwhile, we can claim that most of us have realized the problem to be solved; and can see clearly that at bottom it is one of social relationships. The old order has been altered, and altered permanently by the war.

Canada could not but feel the influence of changes which have spared none of the nations. No longer the destination of immigrants in hundreds of thousands annually, no longer engaged in vast schemes of railroad construction, she has shed the mood of fine carelessness so much in evidence in the years before the war. Canada has had to make a tremendous adjustment; and though the conditions making for growth in this country may be as favorable as anywhere else in the world, she, too, has here and there, in industries that are not yet on a profit-making basis, her devastated areas. Not till other countries have solved their pressing problems, found full employment once more, and increased their purchasing power considerably, can she hope to play the great part in the world's trade, which her resources and the aptitudes of her people make possible.

Because these problems are international in their scope, the solution demands continuous and frank co-operation; and the mutual suspicions engendered in the troubled years have been an obstacle to co-operation serious enough to tax the wisest and most patient of statesmen. In the chequered period since the peace was signed, the fear of war has always been present; and not of war only, but of revolutions and the break-up of organized rule in more than one country. Wherever these unsettled conditions exist there is a threat to the world's peace; a threat none the less dangerous because most of the peoples of Central and Eastern Europe are dissatisfied with their new boundaries.

Not only four years of the World War, but the bitter experience of two Balkan wars preceding the great conflagration has taught us that distance from the scene of trouble is not of itself any ground for looking unmoved upon "red ruin and the breaking up of laws." In a world market, the welfare of every nation is threatened when one or more are thrown in turmoil. Canada has—or should have—a keen interest in these European questions, if only because the markets of that continent are indispensable to her own prosperity.

Thus it is at the season which is dedicated, the world over, to peace and goodwill, that men's eyes turn naturally to the centres where equilibrium is least secure, and their hearts go out to those who are responsible for the maintenance of tranquillity. First, because it is prior to the fulfilment of all others, is the need of peace in our time. With peace assured, we can obtain the rest. —Bank of Nova Scotia's Monthly Review.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It won't be long now until we know at least who is running.

Weather experts say today is the shortest day of the year, but a lot of heads of families will probably be of the opinion on Christmas Eve that Saturday deserved such a description.

Citizens who are hesitating whether or not to offer themselves for municipal positions will have to decide soon. It will be too late after tomorrow.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press). — Little business was transacted with foreign buyers in Canadian grain here yesterday, there being practically no demand from any source. No improvement is expected for the balance of the year.

The domestic trade was also slow but the undertone was steady and prices were unchanged.

The trade in Spring and Winter wheat flour continued of a limited character, but prices were steady.

A moderate amount of business was done in all lines of millfeed and the undertone to the market was firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet.

Prices for all grades of fresh and storage eggs were well maintained under an active demand. The receipts were 252 cases.

Extreme dullness again marked the trade in potatoes but values ruled firm. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.15 per bag of 90 pounds; Prince Edward Island white potatoes at $1.05 per bag of 90 pounds; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.00 per bag in bulk, and New Brunswick white potatoes at 95c per bag in bulk, ex-track.

The tone of the market for imported beans was steady, but the volume of business was small. Sales of car lots of choice white hand-picked were quoted at $2.65 per bushel, ex-track, and smaller quantities sold at $2.75 per bushel, ex-store.

The demand for butter showed no improvement and the tone was about steady, the receipts were 206 packages.

The cheese market was featureless, business being dull and prices unchanged. The receipts were 42 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—Active buying of corn developed yesterday, and the market rallied from an early setback. Export bids for corn were at the highest premium so far this season, and estimates were current that Europe will require 68,000,000 bushels of corn from the United States between now and next summer.

Corn closed irregular at ¼ cent net decline to ½ cent advance; with wheat unchanged to ¼ cent lower; oats ⅛ to ¼ off, and provisions varying from 10 cents setback to a rise of 12 cents.

Wheat and oats were influenced toward the last by the corn rally, despite weakness shown earlier in the wheat market owing to unlooked for lower quotations at Liverpool and to reports that Argentine shippers were offering wheat freely abroad. Besides, the United States Government crop report yesterday afternoon as to wheat was expected to make a bearish showing. On the other hand, pessimistic advices were received as to the condition of winter wheat, which has been without snow protection, notably in Kansas and Nebraska.

For the most part provisions were lower, sympathizing with weakness of the hog market.

TRY MY CHRISTMAS DINNER

A great many readers have written in asking that I write out a Christmas menu for them as I did at Thanksgiving. Such letters encourage me in the belief that my readers are taking up the study of diet in a serious way. And the fact that so many want to know how to arrange their HOLIDAY dinners so as to be the most healthful is a sure sign of the desire of the masses for increased knowledge on the subject of practical dietetics.

I never ask my readers or my patients to do anything I would not be willing to do, and the menu I am giving you for Christmas is the one we are going to follow at my house. The cook has already received this menu, and here it is for you:

Ripe Olives Salted Roasted Nuts
Celery
Roasted Turkey or Chicken
Shredded Wheat Dressing
Baked Parsnips Mashed Pumpkin
Pineapple Snow

Shredded Wheat Dressing: For a small turkey, crumble from 10 to 12 Shredded Wheat Biscuits into a bowl and moisten with milk. Add 2 cups of diced celery, a cup and a half of minced ripe olives, and 3-4 cup of seedless raisins which have been soaking in a little warm water. Mix together thoroughly, adding a few whole olives. If the quantity is too much or too little for your own particular needs, reduce or increase the ingredients in proportion. This recipe has been worked out and found to give best results with the above measurements.

Baked Parsnips: Select small tender parsnips and scrub with a vegetable brush, trimming off any tough, fibrous peel. Cut in halves lengthwise and place flat side up in a heavy aluminum baking pan with few spoonfuls of hot water. Cover tightly and bake for ten or fifteen minutes, then remove cover and allow to brown slightly. Serve with butter and chopped parsley.

Mashed Pumpkin: Peel and cut a pumpkin into small pieces and cook until tender, allowing to "cook down" so as to avoid pouring off any excess liquid. Mash as you would potatoes, seasoning with a little salt and the desired amount of cream. If the canned pumpkin is used, take care in the "cooking down" process to keep from burning, adding the cream just before serving.

Pineapple Snow: To the well-beaten whites of 3 eggs, whip in a 9-ounce can of shredded pineapple from which all juice has been drained. Into another bowl measure out ¼ pint of thick cream. Whip the cream and fold into the pineapple and egg white mixture, adding no other "sweetening." You will find that the pineapple contains enough of the natural fruit sugar without making this a "too sweet" dessert. The recipe allows six small portions, and if served in sherbert glasses, topped with a geranium blossom or leaf, the effect is quite festive.

For the guidance of my readers I have prepared a special article on food combinations with tables of food, explanatioss, etc. You may obtain this by writing to me care of this newspaper and asking for my article on "Food Combinations."

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. V. G. M. writes: "My nose, as soon as the cold weather starts feels like it is frozen. Is there any cure for this?"

Answer: Your nose becomes cold so easily because you are suffering from auto-intoxication. It is peculiar how this symptom can be directly traced to poisoning from the colon. Wake up your sluggish intestines, and the trouble will disappear. A cold nose is the sign of health with a dog, but when humans are in good health the nose should be warm.

Question: E. A. L. writes: "Will you kindly print a diet which should be followed by a person sixty years old, of apoplexie build, who is getting rapidly stout? We know that starchy foods are fattening, yet what articles of food are there that will give a varied diet and keep up one's strength?"

Answer: It would be all right for you to follow the weekly menus which appear in this column each Saturday. The only change you need to make is to substitute some one kind of fruit for the meals which contain starches. If you have high blood pressure, it will slowly reduce under this non-starchy diet. You will see that there are plenty of foods other than starches which you can use and which will "keep up your strength" and at the same time, not be fattening.

Question: A Devoted Reader writes: "I am a young woman, but my skin is so dry I am ageing terribly. I use a great deal of cold cream, but I know it must be some inward trouble. When I wash my skin it hurts, and burns and smarts all the time. I know you have helped others, so please tell me what course to take."

Answer: Use plenty of olive oil with your meals, and increase the amount of butter and cream you are using. A temporary treatment which will help is to rub the entire body each day with cocoa-butter, using only a small amount, but rubbing it well into the pores.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

BUS DRIVERS COURTEOUS

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir: I heave read the letters in your paper about the bus drivers and I am of the opinion that some of the people are unduly entering complains which are not just to these men. I ride upon these busses every day twice and sometimes three times a day, and a more obliging lot of chaps I have never met. They are very careful drivers. I have to cross the C.P.R. line and the C.N.R. three times daily, and they are always on the look-out to see if there are any trains approaching, and I have been upon the busses when many a time they could have crossed with safety, but as the train was near at hand they would not take any chance. Then about speeding, I have never found the same to take place. If the people would take the trouble to purchase their tickets at the point of starting instead of waiting until they get off, they could help to make things a lot better. I fancy these people that want to get home do not mind if they did speed up a little, especially if they are in a hurry to get either dinner or supper in a hurry. Of course, Mr. Editor, you know that there are people who seem born to grumble; but I think this is all. The only thing I can truthfully say, the drivers are a splendid lot of chaps, and if they continue on, they will gain the esteem of the general public.

Wishing them all a Happy Christmas and continued success.

Yours sincerely,
WILLIAM STEVENS,
Byersville.

ACCIDENTAL SHOOTING

He does not go to school, but the other boys did.

He was on the east side of the road, to the left of Keith Blewett, who was standing in the middle of the road behind him. They were a few feet apart.

He saw the rabbit and heard Keith Blewett shoot. He himself shot directly afterwards. He did not hear Armstrong shoot.

His gun was a 20 gauge shot gun but he did not know what size he shot were. He had started out with four cartridges and come home with three. Armstrong had not told him how many shells he had nor had he told Armstrong how many he had. He couldn't say how Blewett could have been shot by him, and to the best of his knowledge he hadn't shot him. He had fired at the rabbit.

As soon as he knew Blewett was shot he went to phone.

Answering Dr. Young, Montgomery said he did not see Blewett fall. His attention was drawn by seeing Blewett's gun on the ground. He got closer to Blewett, who said he was shot. Witness said he would go and phone. Armstrong said for someone to go and get somebody. They first moved him off the road.

Armstrong had not shown him his cartridges for some time afterwards, when they were about 2½ miles away. Armstrong showed him the full shell that he said had been in his gun at the time the shots were fired.

He corroborated Armstrong's evidence that he had fired at a rabbit and a stump and had kept one of the empty shells. He didn't believe that Armstrong had showed him the cartridges at the time of the shooting.

He could not have twisted around far enough to have shot in Blewett's direction.

Answering H. C. Huffman, foreman of the jury, Montgomery said he was sure Armstrong didn't shoot. He did not know whether the rabbit had been killed.

Answering the Coroner, the boy said he could not have shot Blewett unless he jumped around or stepped in front of the gun. His gun went off very easily.

George Grange asked the witness whether he had fired after Blewett. He said he had, but couldn't say whether Blewett had jumped in front of his gun at the moment of discharge.

Urged by the Coroner to tax his mind as all the court wished to find out who had fired the shot, the witness said the only possibility was that Blewett had jumped in front of his gun just as he fired.

Mr. Hatton took up the examination again to confirm his belief that the sketch made by Constable Maker had been drawn from his information.

The three guns were brought in for examination by the jury.

Evans Blewett.

Evans Blewett, father of the dead boy, did not see the boy until he was brought to the house at Buckhorn. His son was a right-handed shot. He offered some shot which he took from his son's clothing. These were the same size as those taken by Constable Maker from Montgomery's gun.

Montgomery was recalled and the coroner asked him if he could have accidentally fired the shot, calling attention to the fact that the witness had said before that Armstrong had not fired and Blewett could not have shot himself. "Do you think you could have shot him?" he asked.

"Not unless he jumped in front of my gun just as I was going to pull," was the answer.

"Do you think you did shoot him?" "Yes sir."

This admission brought the evidence to an end, the boy beginning to cry in spite of the admonition of the coroner that it was an accident and that nobody blamed him.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

"My! What a very hot day, it is!" said Mrs. Charles, as she finished tying up a somewhat bulky parcel.

"Yes, indeed it is!" replied Mrs. Weston, who was entertaining two of her friends on the verandah, on this beautiful, though hot June day. All three women were busily engaged in wrapping, tying and addressing bundles of all sizes and shapes imaginable.

"How nice it is to get one's Christmas present ready so early", said the third lady, presently, as she stopped her work to lean back and sip a little of the cold lemonade from the glass on the table at her side. "I used to think that the last-minute bustle was inevitable," said Margaret Weston complacently, "but we've proved, for once and all, that it isn't! How envious all our friends will be when they see our array of gifts all re...."

But the call, "Muzzer! Muzzer! ate up!" rudely interrupted this remark, and Margaret came out of dreamland to find herself stretched out in a big easy chair, hat and coat on, and almost buried under a mass of parcels.

"But I thought....", began Margaret, confusedly, as she sat stiffly up—then memory came flooding back. Her little three-year-old son had awakened her from a pleasant dream to hard realities. Here it was Christmas Eve, and all these bundles to be re-wrapped and sent off, a Christmas tree to trim, and supper to get! Suddenly electrified by these thoughts, Margaret sprang out of her chair, scattering packages right and left. (Luckily there was nothing breakable among them.)

Swiftly casting aside her hat and coat, and giving her small son a toy to amuse himself with, she set feverishly to work.

"Tom will just have to wait for his supper," muttered Margaret, as she sorted out parcels and brought out Christmas ribbon, tissue and wrapping paper.

Tired, completely worn-out, and almost on the verge of that despair which grips every last-minute shopper, she had dropped into the easy-chair and fallen fast asleep, after a long afternoon's tramp in search for suitable gifts for friends, whom she had left till the very last minute to provide for. "Little Tom", as he was called to distinguish him from his big "Daddy", had trotted manfully along at her side, but still he had been a hindrance, however willing he might be.

Poor Margaret's temper was worn to a thin edge, and all the joy was gone from her Christmas. At least so she thought now, as tired both in body and mind, she toiled ceaselessly on. Bitterness filled her soul as she worked. After all, it is often the little things in life that make or mar our happiness. So it was with Margaret. Struggling with a stubborn piece of string, she thought of the delightful things she might have bought for Big Tom or Junior, if she had not lavished all that money on foolish (as she now deemed them) presents for other people. "Who won't even appreciate them" said Margaret aloud, shaking revengefully a most delectable creation in the form of a long silken scarf, which in her inmost soul she coveted for herself. With a final shake, however, she jammed it ruthlessly into a gay-colored box, tied it up, and jabbing down spitefully with her pen she addressed it to "Miss Esther Walker, Mansfield House, Lincoln, N.H." "She'll probably send me a handkerchief, with a horrible crocheted edge and of some hideous color", she reflected vindictively.

Now, Margaret really had a very sincere and deep affection for her old friend, whom she affectionately called "Aunt Esther". Esther Walker had been a very dear friend of Margaret's mother (who was now dead) although some years younger than she was. She had practically devoted her life to the care of a crippled brother, who had just recently died. All her life Esther had retained her youth and her love for "pretties" as she called them. Knowing this, Margaret had chosen the lovely scarf, feeling sure it would charm Aunt Esther's eye. But her afternoon of hard work and worry had, for a time, distorted Margaret's vision, and had made her condemn her old friend to the list of the "ungrateful."

When Big Tom arrived home from his shopping expedition, his habitual good-humor was not in the least disturbed. Seeing his wife's overwrought condition, he good-naturedly volunteered to get supper. Margaret reluctantly stopped her work long enough to "snatch a bite", and then went back to the seemingly endless task. Indeed, Big Tom was secretly relieved that the uncomfortable meal was not prolonged, for Margaret's wrath did not confine itself to her own thoughts.

Junior was put to bed with little ceremony, and without his usual "Good-night" song and story. But he was so full of thoughts of Santa Claus and his marvellous reindeer, that he did not notice the rather strained atmosphere. Margaret snapped so crossly at her husband, when he offered her his assistance, that, quite abashed, the poor fellow set to work at the tree, wondering, himself, if Christmas were really worth all the trouble, and work and worry they usually expended on it.

At last, there stood a very respectable array of parcels in a neat pile on the table, and now, exceedingly tired, Margaret leaned back in her chair with a weary sigh. "I say every year I'll never do it again," she said wearily, "but you see how it is." Then with a little smile, she told her husband of her dream. "Good idea!" said Tom soberly. With sarcastic thoughts about the "absolute density" of men, Margaret dispatched this example of it, to post her numerous packages.

When he returned, he found Margaret seated in the big Chesterfield, surrounded by parcels and letters, all her troubles forgotten in the old, yet new, excitement of opening the gifts and letters from those near and dear. "Oh Tom! come quick!" she called, "Just see all the presents you've got!"

Exclaiming merrily over each gift of their own, and of each other's, the bundles were soon all untied but one small thin one with Margaret's name written on it, in a fine scholarly hand. Margaret immediately recognized in this, the writing of the "Aunt Esther", whom she had so thoroughly denounced such a short time ago. With a little ashamed feeling tugging at the bottom of her heart, Margaret carefully unfolded the layers of tissue paper and disclosed a beautiful little copy of "A Christmas Carol."

On the fly-leaf was a loving little message to Margaret: "Remembering your youthful love for this beautiful little Christmas story, and knowing that you possessed no copy of it, I thought you might enjoy this small gift. May I say with Tiny Tim, 'God bless you every one.?"—Esther Walker.

It was not the value of the gift, but its sweet significance that toughed Margaret's heart. With tear-dimmed eyes she looked up at Tom, who was leaning boyishly over her shoulder, reading with her the Christmas wish. "After all, Tom, it is worth while, isn't it?" said his wife, turning the pages of the little book, that, since her earliest recollection, had stirred her emotion, with a found touch. And so the spirit of happiness was called back to Margaret's heart, over which petty worries had held sway for a time.

Soon the two were engrossed in the story, that has moved men to laughter and tears. Just as they closed the book, with a contented sight,—"Muzzer! Daddy!" came suddenly in eager tones from above "Hast Tanty Klaus tomed yet?" "No, sweetheart", Margaret called back, smiling tremulously at her husband. "Go back to bed dear, and Mother'll call you in time." "All wight" came back the cheerful reply followed by the patter of little feet.

But truy Santa Claus, that dear old emblem of Christmas giving, had come into the hearts of the two, who stood now, before the gleaming tree, with clasped hands, and hearts filled with the spirit of Tiny Tim, the true Christmas Spirit.

The best of many Feeds blended in one

Schumacher Feed is a careful blend of the products of wheat, corn, oats and barley, combined with oilcake meal, and minerals. It is kiln dried and of a uniform, mealy character.

Because it is especially high in carbohydrates Schumacher Feed is recommended as the best grain ration for young cattle and hogs, or as a basic ration for dairy cows. It has less fibre and is more easily digested than oats. Two per cent minerals.

Schumacher Feed is economical because it gives speedy returns in better health and growth. Used by thousands of successful live stock men. No waste. The greatest of all flesh and bone builders.

C. H. ACKERMAN GIVES ADDRESS

Tells Ladies of George Street Bible Classes About the League of Nations.

DESIRE FOR PEACE.

On Sunday afternoon the Onward Bible Class of George Street United Church, of which Mrs. James Stubbs is teacher, invited the members of the Welcome Bible Class, the Co-Workers' Bible Class, and the Unity Club to a meeting in the Board Room of the Sunday School Hall to listen to a very able and interesting address by Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman on "The League of Nations."

Col. Ackerman, in opening his talk, quoted the Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin as saying in a memorable speech made in London, "that lack of adequate information and ignorance on any subject led to suspicion." The same can be said in regard to happenings and individuals of this city. In most cases suspicion is brought about by ignorance of facts. As it is with people and institutions, so it is with nations. The League of Nations, which meets at Geneva, consists of delegates having mandates from the Governments of fifty-five nations, speaking sixty-five languages and many hundreds of dialects, banded together to bring about a better understanding in regard to wars, and to sit around a table and openly discuss questions of international difficulties.

Col Ackerman said he was proud that he was of the Anglo-Saxon race and that the world owes this race a great debt of gratitude. Although it cannot be said that the British Empire was directly responsible for the birth of the League of Nations, it was men of British parentage who were responsible for it. President Wilson even before the Great War was ended, sent letters to all the nations engaged in the war to try and arrange a peace conference, asking them to consider well, "Why engaged in this war?"

When armistice was signed in November, 1918, a gathering was held in Paris to form a peace conference. On January 10 ,1919, they again met, and on January 18, 1919, the League of Nations came into being.

Although the United States is not now a member of the League of Nations, the speaker does not think that they are not in sympathy with it, and most thinking people feel confident that the time is soon coming when they will enter. It must be remembered that the American nation is made up of a large foreign element, with many from the central European countries, and they cannot believe that disputes can be settled by the Anglo-Saxon race or any other race without war. The Mayor of Chicago in a speech recently said times were changing. As knowledge increased and the foreign population was becoming better educated, there was not so much suspicion.

When Sir Robert Cecil visited New York to speak on the League of Nations, Col. Ackerman had the pleasure of hearing him. President Wilson, fearing some of the disturbing element, who did not wish the United States dragged into the League of Nations, might seek to embarrass the speaker, requested that no questions be asked. Sir Robert Cecil jumped to his feet, with a smile on his face, and said he would be delighted to answer any questions. One from the audience, a native of Erin's Isle, asked why the League of Nations did not settle the Irish question.

Sir Robert, in replying, said he was delighted to come to America and meet such a representative gathering and explain the functions of the League of Nations. The League does not interfere with matters within a nation nor does it interfere in civil wars.

Col. Ackerman had written to Sir Robert Cecil in view of his contemplated visit to Canada to have his message boiled down and put in simple language so that the ordinarily educated working man could receive a definite message. This could be commented upon editorially by the leading newspapers and the people would have a more intelligent idea of the object and work of the League. The responsibility of the war did not rest with the Allies. Wherever the British flag waves there are found the British flowers of honour, truth, chastity, self-control, and fear of God.

"The strength of a nation depends more on the character of her people than in the size of her army. If we wish to carry out the high ideal of Britain we can only do so by building up lofty characters in ourselves. To do this we must have true ideals of British and Canadian citizenship, and a true love of the land we live in," said the speaker in conclusion.

When an opportunity was given for asking questions, one of the ladies asekd, "Why was Geneva chosen as the meeting place of the League of Nations?" Col. Ackerman replied: "The delegates want a quiet, restful city in which to reside. Geneva is centrally located; it is a fine city, surrounded by beautiful scenery; in fact, it is an ideal residential City."

Thanks were voiced by Mrs. Stubbs, Mrs. Stinson, Mrs. A. Brown, Mrs. Hagerman ,and Miss McCamus to Col. Ackerman for coming and giving such a wonderful explanation of the League of Nations.

A bill recently introduced in the legislature of the Phillippines provides a fund to be used in fighting the mosquito pest.

COUNTESS OPENS SHOP

Countess Michael Karolyi, wife of the first president of Hungary, and daughter of Count Andrassy, former minister of foreign affairs, has opened an antique shop on the Avenue Malakoff in Paris. Not long ago Countess Karolyi was refused entry to the United States because of her allegedly socialistic views. Failing to carry out her American lecture tour she decided to open the shop in Paris, where she believes she will be able to support herself and her daughter. The photo shows Countess Karolyi and her daughter in their Parisian shop.

Hark, the Herald Angels Sing.
(In which the audience is requested to join).
Hark! the herald angels sing
Glory to the new-born King,
Peace on earth, and mercy mild,
God and sinner reconciled.
Joyful, all ye nations rise;
Join the triumph of the skies;
With the angelic host proclaim,
'Christ is born in Bethlehem.'
Hark! the herald angels sing
Glory to the new-born King.

Christ, by highest heaven adored,
Christ, the Everlasting Lord.
Late in time behold Him come,
Offspring of a Virgin's womb.
Veiled in flesh the Godhead see!
Hail the Incarnate Deity!
Pleased as Man with men to dwell,
Jesus, our Emmanuel.
Hark! the herald angels sing
Glory to the new-born King.

Hail, the heaven-born Prince of Peace!
Hail, the Sun of Righteousness!
Light and life to all He brings,
Risen with healing in His wings.
Mild, He lays His glory by,
Born that man no more may die,
Born to raise the sons of earth,
Born to give them second birth,
Hark! the herald angels sing
Glory to the new-born King.

Yonder where they sweet vigil keep
O'er the Babe who in silent sleep
Rests in heavenly peace,
Rests in heavenly peace,

Holy night! peaceful night!
Only for shepherds' sight
Came blest visions of angel throngs,
With their loud hallelujah songs,
Saying, 'Christ is come.'
Saying, 'Christ is come.'

Holy night! peaceful night!
Child of heaven, O how bright
Thou didst smile on us when Thou wast born,
Blest indeed was that happy morn,
Full of heavenly joy,
Full of heavenly joy. Amen.

PRESENTATION TO REV. WM. ALLAN

Men of St. Paul's Give Surprise Party and Beautiful Gift.

HANDSOME STUDY LAMP.

Members of the executive of the Men of St. Paul's, Messrs. Dodds, Bertram, Anderson, Lyburn, McLeish and Raines, waited upon Mr. Allan at the Manse last night and presented him, on behalf of the men's organization, with a handsome study lamp. The presentation was made by Mr. H. Dodds, who, in a few well chosen words, asked the minister to accept the gift as an expression of the high regard held for him by the Men of St. Paul's.

In accepting the gift, Mr. Allan said that he had never been more completely taken by surprise. Not the slightest inkling had reached him that such a movement was afoot. He said that while he would always treasure their token of affection, he was glad to think that it had not been necessary to wait for this to be assured of the place he occupied in their thoughts and esteem.

OMEMEE NEWS

OMEMEE, Dec. 22.—The A.Y.P.A. of Christ Church, Omemee, held a devotional evening on Monday. There was a good attendance at this meeting, when the Rev. A. T. Weir gave an address on Christianity of the fourth and fifth centuries. The talk was most interesting, being a description of the conditions existing in Palestine in the early days when the Church was forming. The devotional part of the A.Y.P.A. principle was attended to in a pleasing manner by such an address and the president, Miss Dickson, voiced the opinion of the branch when she extended appreciation to the speaker.

WARSAW NEWS.

WARSAW, Dec. 19.—On Friday afternoon the Warsaw school children had a lesson, with demonstration, in bandaging.

The instructress gave illustrations of caring for such accidents as she had met in her own teaching days. The demonstrations were such as are used in emergency work on the field, and in hospitals. She stressed the need of a doctor, if one were to be had, but if not, of doing what could be done and with what what was on hand.

At first the children seemed somewhat shy at being used as models, but it was not long before they were anxious to act. When asked questions, they showed thought in their answers, even when they were not quite correct, and that thought was most desirable. They also undertook to ask questions, and again there was earnest thought. One little laddies, who had evidently been warned not to break his neck, asked what could be done if he broke his neck.

The room was quite crowded, with both classes in the one room; some of the seats held three pupils, but for all the discomfort, the excellent behaviour of the children, and their apparent keen interest, were very noticeable. They looked happy and contented, too.

Soviet Opposition Leaders After Jobs

MOSCOW, Dec. 22.—(United Press).—All opposition leaders, including Leon Trotsky and Gregory Zinovieff, were ousted from their governmental positions yesterday following their expulsion from the communist party.

The men, until recently close co-operators in ruling the country, became ordinary citizens again and some of them went out looking for jobs.

CHRISTMAS TREE HELD FOR CHILDREN

Young People Put on Program —Fire Hall Completed at Madoc.

The Christmas Tree and Entertainment for the Sunday school of the Church of St. John the Baptist (Anglican) was held on Friday evening at the Orange Hall. In spite of the heavy storm there was a good attendance and a very enjoyable time.

The program was put on by the children and young people of the Sunday school. Well-selected Christmas songs and recitations were given and the prizes were awarded, after which the presents from the Christmas Tree were distributed. A beautiful little play, "The Christ-Child" was presented by the senior pupils and was much enjoyed.

Miss Lillian Rivers, of Toronto University is spending the Christmas holidays with her parents at Trinity United parsonage.

Mr. Raymond Rivers has quite recovered from the injury to his knee, received in the gymnasium at Albert College, and will be able to resume his studies at the beginning of the New Year.

Miss Laura Ellis, of Niagara Falls, is spending a few weeks with her aunt Mrs. Horace Taylor.

The new fire hall is completed and makes an imposing addition to the buildings on North St. Lawrence street.

Armstrong's Garage and service Station has been rebuilt in record time. The accommodation is finer and larger than before, and many improvements have been made.

During the past three weeks it has been painted and blocked outside, while inside the office the woodwork has been painted and finished, making a very substantial improvement in the appearance of the block and the street.

MOTHER STILL UPHOLDS SON

Mrs. Eva Hickman Does Not Believe He Could Be Guilty.

KANSAS CITY, December 21 (Canadian Press). — Remaining firm in her contention that her son did not kidnap Marian Parker of Los Angeles, Mrs. Eva Hickman to-day reconsidered her announced desire "to disown him if it is true," and declared "she couldn't do that."

"But if he is guilty—oh, that couldn't be; but if he was, why naturally no mother would want to own him as a son," she said. "If he's guilty, I want him punished."

Then as she seemed to realize the meaning of her statement, she added: "No, of course I would not disown him. No, of course, I couldn't do that. But you know how I feel."

"When you've raised five children, you learn not to expect too much of them. They have their interests. They think they are busier than they are. Perhaps that is why he does not write."

VOICE RECOGNIZED.

LOS ANGELES, December 21 (Canadian Press). — The voice of the man who made arrangements over the telephone last Saturday for the ransom of Marian Parker by her father, Perry Parker, was decraded to-day by him to have been the voice of William Hickman, accused slayer of the child and a discharged employee of the bank of which Parker is an official.

HICKMAN HAD HELP.

LOS ANGELES, December 21 (Canadian Press). — Further substantiation of the theory that William Hickman had aid in the kidnapping and slaying of Marian Parker was disclosed with the announcemen by the police to-day that two persons had seen Hickman and another man carry several bundles from the apartment where Hickman lived and place them in an automobile.

DISTRICT CHURCHES

SPRINGVILLE UNITED

On Sunday, December 18th, the regular morning service was held at Springville United Church, with the pastor, Rev. A. H. McConnachie in charge. The Scripture lesson was read from Matthew, 2nd chapter.

Continuing with the study of "The Lord's Prayer" for the children, Mr. McConnachie briefly reviewed the subject of last Sunday, "Hallowed be thy name," and proceeded to the text for the day, "Thy Kingdom Come."

"God is a mighty Sovereign at the head of a world-wide kingdom," he said, "but, like many earthly kings, He does not reign in every part of His domain. Just as the southern part of Ireland is not submissive to the rule of King George, although Ireland is a part of his kingdom, so India, China, Japan, etc., are part of God's kingdom but He does not reign over the hearts of the people of these countries.

"God reigns where His rule is welcome. We pray this prayer 'Thy Kingdom come' as only subjects of His kingdom have a right to pray, that all the people of the world may recognize God's rule and become His loyal subjects."

This discourse to the children was followed by prayer, led by the pastor, and a solo, sung by Mr. B. Preston, "Somebody Cares."

The text was taken from Luke 2nd chapter and the 14th verse—

"Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good-will toward men."

Mr. McConnachie read five different versions of the text, explaining that it is always wise to notice any difficulties before us, so that our faith may not be dependent on mere words.

Light is thrown on the meaning of the text by all these versions, especially the revised version—Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace among men in whom God is well pleased—and also the Greek version, "Peace on earth to men of good pleasure." The shade of meaning in all these versions does not prevent them from being united in the text for the day.

Beginning his sermon, Mr. McConnachie formed a word picture of the still quiet night over the plains of Bethlehem with the angel talking to the shepherds who were keeping watch over their flocks, and suddenly the burst of song and perfect praise from the angel host saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men."

The gift that the world needs most is peace. God's peace is offered gratuitously; He cannot force us to accept His gifts. Some of God's gifts are conditional and for this reason some of His choicest blessings are unknown to us where the condition of the heart is unfavourable. Inward spiritual faith comes only when the heart is changed.

Righteousness is a greater word than peace, for without righteousness there can be no peace. Many people claim there can be no more war —backing their claim by the following statements:

War does not pay—a lesson has been learned from the last war.

Great financiers will not permit war.

Treaties will serve as a preventative.

War is not possible with advanced civilization.

With the League of Nations there can be no more war.

All of these statements are without weight as there is but one possible preventative of war and that is national and universal peace formed by following Christ's ways of brotherhood and goodwill to all the world.

This was illustrated by showing that, although we belong to different realms, modes of defense are unnecessary along the 3000-mile border line between Canada and the United States, owing to the existence of the spirit of goodwill and brotherhood between the two countries.

Let us, said the pastor, at this Christmas season being greater force to our church by each member cultivating a more God-like spirit of goodwill. Let us at this time of the year think not of our own special friends and relatives, but of all who are in need and thus we may help to bring a better day of peace to all mankind. Combine these thoughts with our text and we will have Peace on earth, good-will toward men.

Mr. McConnachie beautifully concluded his sermon by the reading of a very suitable poem entitled—"A Song of Brotherhood."

Upward Movement Continues At New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Despite sporadic efforts of bear traders to bring about a reaction, the stock markct continued to point upward to-day on heavy buying for both speculative and investment accounts. Sensational gains took place in a few of the insurance company shares, which are reported to have had the best years in their history. Pools were again active in a wide assortment of specialties, but Amusement, Copper, Merchandising and Steel shares gave the best demonstration of group strength.

The marking up of the call money renewal rate to 4½ per cent, was regarded as temporary, due to heavy seasonal demands for currency. Uneasiness developed in some quarters over the volume of brokers' loans which will be announced by the Federal Reserve Bank after the close of the market. Because of the unusually heavy volume of new financing this week and the advance in stock prices, a substantial increase is looked for in many quarters.

International Nickel Is Feature At Toronto

TORONTO, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel was a sensational feature of the morning session of the Toronto Stock Exchange today, advancing to a high of 85¼, on a turnover of upwards of 30,000 shares, highest trading in a listed stock on the exchange for a long time, to close at noon around the high mark. Elsewhere trading was fairly heavy but scattered over a broad list. The Old Canners issues were marked up sharply, the common 3⅞ at 96⅞ and the Preferred 1½ at 119, but an easier tone was shown. City Dairy lost two at 212 and Fishing Preferred was three lower at 70. Industrial Alcohol and Seagrams both lost a point. British American Oil firmed fractionally, but McColl lost a point and Imperial Oil lost a fraction. Carlings was the only firmer liquor stock, gaining fractionally.

Mine Trading Lighter; Trend Is Uncertain

TORONTO, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—In lighter trading price movements were mixed on the Standard Mining Exchange today, and while a number of recessions occurred, many stocks were unchanged from the previous close. The largest movement was the loss of forty cents in Noranda, which lost that much of its recent advance when it sold down to 23.50. Sudbury Basin improved another 10 at 11.50. Tough Oakes gained a point, and another point gain was shown in Barry Hollinger at 117. Crown Reserve sold up six points and Howey Gold two. The easier issues included Teck Hughes, which lost 16 at 10.34, and Bidgood, which sold down ten at 157. Potter Doal, Laval Quebec, Granada, and Area were fractionally lower.

Wheat Prices Fall On News From Abroad

CHICAGO, December 22. — Wheat prices averaged lower early to-day, reflecting bearish figures in the government report as to acreage and condition of domestic winter crop. Increasing shipments of wheat from Argentina were also given notice.

Starting at 1-8c to ¾c decline wheat later held near to the initial range. Corn and oats were firm. Corn opened unchanged to ¼c higher and subsequently showed slight general gains. Provisions tended to sag.

Opening prices were: Wheat, Dec., 126¾, March 128 5-8; corn, Dec., 84¾, March 88; oats, December unquoted, March 54¾.

AYRSHIRE BREEDERS HOLD BIG MEETING

Discuss Work of the Past Year and Elect New Officers.

The annual meeting of the Central Ontario Ayrshir Breeders' Club was held at Campbellford, December 16, in the public library. The president, R. H. Little, occupied the chair. The president, in his address, touched on his work during the year and spoke of the annual field day at J. G. Mann's, at which there had been a good display of cattle which brought up some good points in their placing by Kenneth Hay. He also thought the heifer club in the Peterborough district a good thing.

Mr. Hay, the fieldman, said Ayrshires were in good demand all through the western provinces and in the future the West will need a lot of cows. Before finishing, he wanted to encourage the clubs. He thought the club meetings a good means of doing work and that the committees should work the year round.

Alex Hulme, the president of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association, was called, and outlined the work of the year.

William Stewart of Menie was next to speak. In his remarks he said, according to the constitution, Mr. Hume was retiring from office this year and that the Association will loose a good president. In speaking of the exhibit at the Royal Winter Fair, he said the prizes were rather small and not enough of them for the numbers shown.

The officers for 1928 are as follows: Charles Macoun, president and John Locke, Secretary-Treasurer.

COMMITTEES PLAN FOR ORANGE PARADE

Big Celebration Will Be Held in Peterborough Next Year.

A very enthusiastic and well attended meeting of representatives from the Orange Lodges of West Peterborough was held in Victoria Hall to make arrangements for the celebration to be held here on July 12, 1928.

Formerly these celebrations were held under the auspices of the city district but in future will be under the direction of the County Lodge of West Peterborough.

Fred Brown, County Master, presided, and R. J. Manley, incoming master for next year, was electd as chairman of the committees.

From the representatives present, the following committees were formed: Finance, Invitation, Advertising, Program, Decoration, to look after the different details of the celebration.

The meeting was most optimistic, and they are making big plans and expect to have one of the largest and best celebrations ever held in Peterborough.

Invitations have already been sent to the Orange Lodges of the Counties of East and West Durham, north and South Victoria, North and South Ontario and East and West Hastings, and they feel assured that a large crowd will gather in Peterboro on July 12, 1928.

Archbishop and Other Leaders Confer, Seeking Compromise.

LONDON, Dec. 22. — (United Press.)— It is understood that the Archbishop of Canterbury and other Churchof England leaders are negotiating unofficially with Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Home Secretary, and others of the evangelical faction to try to effect an agreement by which the revised prayer book could be altered to satisfy all parties in the church.

Old Snow By-Law Was Not Repealed

When the City Council repealed the snow by-law at its December session it did not mean that the old snow by-law was done away with also. The old by-law required those in the centre of the city to clean the snow off their sidewalk before 9 am. and according to city officials this law is still in force.

L.O.B.A. BRANCH INSTALS OFFICERS

Miss Flossie Brown is Mistress of Eastern Star Lodge.

The regular meeting of Eastern Star, L.O.B.A., was held in Victoria Hall last evening with a large number of members and visitors present. She was assisted by Mrs. MacLaughlin, P.W.M., of Keene, who acted as Chaplain, and Mr. Grant, Guardian, of Keene Lodge, who acted as the Director of Ceremonies.

After the installation miss Myrtle Frost, Past Mistress of the Lodge, was asked to come forward, and Miss Rose Sexsmith read an address, and she was presented with a jewel by Mrs. C. Wright. The hall had been prettily decorated with red and green streamers, and a beautiful Christmas tree adorned the platform with glittering tinsel and bright Christmas bells. At the previous meeting slips had been drawn with each member's name, so there was a gift for everyone on the tree. Mr. MacLaughlin of Keene made a jolly Santa Claus, and caused a great deal of merriment. The remainder of the evening was spent socially, nuts, candies, and fruit being served.

LEGION NOTES

Last night the Canadian Legion Hall was packed to capacity on the occasion of the grand euchre, dance and draw, which attracted an enormous crowd. It was estimated that some 2,000 persons were present when the draw took place. The first part of the evening was spent in playing euchre. This took place on the first floor, where some 300 people spent a pleasant time endeavouring to secure one of the beautiful prizes alloted for this part of the program. During the time the euchre was in progress the dance floor was packed to capacity. The hall was prettily decorated, the music provided by the orchestra was much enjoyed by all present, and the floor itself was all that could be desired by those who enjoy the favorite recreation of dancing.

At 10 p.m. the chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements was seen to enter the dance auditorium. At once the excitement for the main event of the evening was apparent, and as Norman Crowe ascended the platform to make his announcements, which he did in a humorous and effective way, the huge crowd awaited with an expectant hush for the tit-bit of the evening. The draw itself was made by the president, Comrade J. Abraham, who made a short address and thanked the many patrons present for the support they nad given, the result of which would help to benefit many ex-service men and their dependents in distress.

After these few remarks two independent persons, not members of the Canadian Legion, were called to the platform to thoroughly inspect the bags from which the draws were to be made. Then the great moment arrived, a silence pervaded the room, and as the president made each draw for the many beautiful prizes that were to be awarded, a hearty cheer was accorded the lucky winners.

The result of the draw will be found in another column, and the committee are to be congratulated upon the success they have attained. This has not been done without considerable work, and a great deal of credit reflects upon Comrade Norman Crowe and his able lieutenants for the splendid organization they effected in carrying out the great task which culminated in such a success.

To all who took part in the work the committee wish to extend their thanks, particularly to those who sold tickets and whose work in that direction was a great factor in bringing about such a splendid success.

The officers and members of the local branch of the Legion desire to thank all their many patrons who have supported them in this splendid work, and to also take this opportunity through the medium of The Examiner to extend to them, and all ex-service men, a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

BAND COMPLETING ANNUAL SERENADE

Bandmaster Loses Mouthpiece Carried For Many Years On Active Service.

Band Secretary Stanley Richardson desires to thank the citizens who up to date have so kindly donated to the Christmas Band Fund. The band will be serenading to-night (Thursday) and on George Street on Saturday, and in the residential district on Saturday night. This effort keeps the Peterborough Temple Band in the place so kindly designated by a well-wisher from Chicago, who sent Christmas greetings to what he termed "one of the great bands of the Salvation Army.

Last night Bandmaster Robinson was unfortunate enough to lose a cornet mouthpiece in the vicinity of Simcoe and Park Streets. This mouthpiece is highly valued by the bandmaster, as it was used by him throughout his war service in Canada, England, and France, and he would greatly appreciate the finder, if any, leaving the mouthpiece at the Salvation Army Temple.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)
FRIDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1927.

Benefic aspects prevail today, according to astrology which finds the planetary government favorable for most human activities.

This is read as a time best suited for initiating big projects for the coming year for all the signs indicate tremendous enterprises.

Promoters and organizers are well directed under this sway which promises ready response to well-laid plans.

It is a lucky day for interviewing employers or any one who has control over one's destiny.

Those who seek employment for the new year and those who desire to bespeak preferment or promotion should take advantages of today's opportunities to push their best interests.

Under this rule it is well to wind up business matters and to survey one's financial status.

Good luck attend all who pay bills as well as all who receive money while this configuration prevails.

Juviter is supuposed to frown upon all who start projects at this time, but conditions are favorable for planning future enterprises.

The evening of this day is supposed to be an auspicious time for women to wear new clothing, and it is a lucky time for accepting presents.

Engagement rings presented today should bring stability of affection and harmony of thought, if the stars are rightly read.

Weddings will be many in 1928, when marriage will be discussed from many points of view, which apparently do not change established customs.

Conflict between scientific minds and those that incline toward mysticism will be bitter by and by, but today's stars encourage loyalty to religious ideals, the seers announce.

Persons whose birthdate it is may renew old friendships and even old family ties in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be intensely clever and successful. Subjects of this sign are usually great talkers.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Before she left for the office with Bob that Friday morning, Cherry made no verbal apology to Faith for her atrocious behavior of the night before, but she kissed her sister good-bye with unaccustomed warmth, her arms clinging tightly for a moment, and when Faith went to Cherry's room to bathe and dress the baby she again found that task already performed.

Cherry had not slept particularly well upon her sins. Faith wondered, tenderly and pityingly, what strange battle between the good and evil in her unaccountable little sister's nature had been waged in that pretty bedroom during the long hours after Cherry had fled from the living room the night before, humiliated in the eyes of two men whose devotion to herself she had high-handedly taken for granted.

All that was good and unselfish—however small that might be—had been instantly called to surface of Cherry's volatile nature by that naive confession of Rhoda's. For today, at least, Cherry would remain true to the vow she had visibly registered not to try to fan into a new flame the attraction which Nils had felt for her upon sight, and which she believed had almost helplessly quenched by her badly staged little melodrama to excite his jealousy and to call his chivalry to her defense. Poor little rudderless Cherry!

A few minutes later, after Hope had been given her nine o'clock bottle and was drowsing off to sleep, Faith went to her own room and found another evidence of Cherry's repentance—the three gorgeous pale green orchids which Nils had brought her the night before. The delicate blossoms were thrust into a slim yellow vase, beneath which was a note in Cherry's scrawl:

"Faith, darling: Wear these to Mrs' Harrison's bridge party tonight. Of course, I'll stay home with Hope. Your bad Cherry."

Faith had forgotten about the Harrisons' bridge party, an invitation to which she and Bob had accepted nearly a week before. Frowning she wondred if it were too late for her to beg off, for she felt that Cherry in a chastened, repentant mood might be hungering for a long, confidential talk with her, but as she mused, her tear-misted eyes upon the flowers, it came to her that she had no right to cheat Bob of an evening of bridge, of which he was inordinately fond, and that Cherry might resent having her, generosity thrown back upon herself. In her present mood, Cherry would get a sort of morbid pleasure out of staying chastely at home and playing the devoted mother. And repentance in solitude was undeniably good for her.

At eleven o'clock the telephone rang and Rhoda answered it. A few minutes later she appeared at the door of the sun parlor, where Faith was playing with Hope, her China-blue eyes shining with joy:

"Nils wants to know if I can have the evening out with him. I told him you might want me to take care of the baby, because you and Mr. Hathaway are going to a bridge party."

"Of course you may go, Rhoda," Faith told her. "Tell him that Cherry is going to take care of the baby this evening herself. Be sure to tell him that, Rhoda."

The two girls smiled at each other, a slow, deep smile of understanding, and then Rhoda sped to the telephone.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Designed for one of the important college dances this frock of taffeta and georgette presents a color scheme of pink and blue.

There are certain tastes and tendencies displayed by the young American girl in matter of dress that are quite beyond the comprehension of her mother and older sister. To be sure the older woman has her fads, fancies and notions concerning dress that in another age would seem absurd and amusing—but those of course she takes for granted. Usually she can, if she chooses, trace them back to Paris—she can quote this well-known French dressmaker or milliner—or that fashionable resort of international reputation to give authority. But the young girl's fads so often have no such authority behind them.

It is the young girl—and the American young girl—who keeps alive the present-day interest in the bouffant skirt. Frankly she likes it, and she likes it especially when it is combined with a rather plain bodice of closely fitted contours. And she doesn't care especially about very low cut bodices. It is much more likely to be the older woman who goes to extremes in this respect than the "jeune fille" her daughter.

There is a new evening shade very fashionable in Paris that is described as the color of water seen in a white porcelain bathtub—a sort of water blue with a white cast. To get the effect, of course, your bath water must be of unusual purity and not the sort of weak bouillon-colored liquid that is provided by some city water supplies.

The black evening frock is smart—but just at present is not a great favorite at college dances. White, too, is in favor, but both white and black, this winter, are worn as foundation for brilliant colored jewels or gleaming diamonds—and as the young girl who goes to college dances can hardly be expected to have come into possession of the emeralds or rubies or diamonds formerly worn by some Russian archduchess or other—she usually depends on her frock rather than her jewels to provide the becoming note of color.

'FAMILY TREE' OF CHRISTMAS DOLL TRACED BACK 40 CENTURIES-- BABIES' RATTLES USED IN ANCIENT GREECE

Dolls—From Ancient Egypt To Modern America

EDITOR'S NOTE: William Thompson, fellow of the Royal Geographic Society, and now living in Saugerties, N.Y., has made a long study of ancient toys. He is familiar with the earliest playthings children used; he has examined dolls, tops and other playthings that date back thousands of years. In this Christmas season feature he traces the development of toys from the dawn of history to the present day.

BY WILLIAM THOMPSON
Fellow of the Royal Geographic Society
Written Especially for The Examiner and NEA Service

Thousands of years ago a little baby fell asleep in a dark cave, clutching a small object in its tiny fist. The object was the first toy.

Perhaps it was a weathered bone, or the tooth of some animal the baby's father had killed; or it might have been a bright pebble or a shell. Certainly it was nothing pretentious, but the baby, like all children, treasured its plaything.

Girls Invented Dolls.

These primtive toys developed, as centuries passed, into small bows and arrows, little spears and clubs—models of the weapons the men used in hunting and fighting. And the little girls, watching their mothers take care of the babies, doubtless were responsible for the invention of the first dolls.

All of this happened many thousands of years ago; for by the time civilization had advanced to the earliest stages of which we now have records, there was quite a variety of toys for children. And always there were dolls—dolls not so tremendously unlike those which American children play with to-day.

The oldest toys in existence are those used by the children of ancient Egypt and Greece. In the British museum are playthings that were in use 2,000 years before the Christian era. Among them is an Egyptian doll; a stiff, awkward-looking mannikin of wood, which doubtless was dressed in gay clothes and fondled tenderly by some dusky child in the days when the Nile river was the center of civilization.

A number of toys of ancient Greece exists. The Greeks made better dolls than the Egyptians; there are rag dolls, dolls of ivory and bone, wooden dolls with jointed arms and legs, some of them fully dressed. These latter were probably too costly to be played with every day; consequently they escaped rough usage as most dolls undergo, and have survived for our inspection.

Boys Had Marbles.

Greek boys had their playthings, too. They had marbles, just as modern boys have; and an ancient lead chariot with a little lead horseman, about an inch and a half high, is still in existence. There also is a little lead soldier, mounted on a horse and carrying a spear and shield.

There were also rattles for the very small babies. Toy dogs, monkeys, donkeys and other animals still exist, and balls, hoops and toys have been found in Green and Roman ruins.

In Africa, children of the jungle play with model animals, which they make themselves with considerable skill. Similarly, in Java and Ceylon the children spend hours making elaborate rag dolls. Unfortunately, these dolls are prized so highly by tourists that the children seldom play with them, being driven by poverty to sell them at docks and railway stations.

The most famous doll in the world was Pandora, a sizeable mannikin that existed about the time of the American revolution. Pandora was dressed in the latest Parisian styles and sent across the Atlantic so that the women of the colonies could know what to wear. Her coming was awaited with eagerness, and it is reported that once the ship that carried her was given a safe passage in time of war.

Toys became elaborate as civilization advanced. The little Dauphin of France, whose father, Louis XVI, perished in the French revolution, had a little bureau with blue porcelain panels, with a concealed bird that appeared and sang musically when a hidden spring was touched. Similarly, Napoleon's little son, the young King of Rome, had a device of tri-colored balls which were to be tossed into an open wing beneath the outstretched wings of an eagle.

During the last twenty-five years toys have changed more than in many centuries preceding. The introduction of electricity has been largely responsible; toys are mechanical and complicated now, with elaborate miniature railroad systems ,derricks, boats, engine and the like.

Dolls Are the Same.

But dolls haven't changed greatly. The dolls of today have soft hair, eyes that open and shut, "natural" complexions and filmy dresses; but they are, after all, very much like the stiff wooden dolls which the little children of ancient Egypt played with, back in the days when Rome itself was only a swamp and England and America were undiscovered wildernesses.

For the doll is a universal toy. It probably will exist, unchanged except for minor details, to the end of time.

VOGEL THROWN IN.

NEW YORK, N.Y., December 22 (Canadian Press). — The contract for the management of Jack Delaney, former world's light heavyweight champion, which originally cost Pete Reilly only $900 four years ago, was purchased yesterday by Joe Jacobs, of New York, for $50,000.

The deal announced jointly by Jacobs and Reilly after new contracts had been drawn at the offices of the State Athletic Commission, also included the transfer of the management of Samuel Vogel, New York lightweight. Jacobs, however, declared Delaney was worth the whole price. Delaney's new contract with Jacobs has two years to run, while Vogel's has three.

Delaney, who relinquished the light heavyweight crown several months ago to cast his lot among the heavies, will be pushed forward as a challenger for Gene Tunney's title, Jacobs declared. A match with the winner of the prospective Sharkey-Heeney battle will be sought.

Although Reilly paid only $900 for Delaney's services originally, he paid $15,000 for the fighter's contract little less than three years ago after having released him. Delaney meanwhile had sprung into prominence, knocking out Paul Berlenbach. Under Reilly's management, the French-Canadian progressed rapidly, winning the 175-pound title in July, 1926, from Berlenbach, knocking out Mike McTigue and twice putting the late Tiger Flowers to sleep.

Reilly announced his retirement from boxing, at least temporarily, to devote his time to other business interests. Jacobs already has a stable of boxers that includes Frankie Genaro, Eddie Wagner, Jack McVey, and Joe Glick.

FRENCH STAR IN TITLE MATCH

Echebaster Coming To Oppose Soutar in First International Contest.

SET FOR FEBRUARY.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 22.—Members of the Racquet Club are eagerly looking forward to the first international match for the open court tennis championship of America, to be played between Jack Soutar, the present titleholder, and Pierre Echebaster, French challenger, here February 20, 22 and 25. Announcement of the match has just been made by Joseph W. Wear, chairman of the athletic committee of the Racquet Club.

Echebaster is only twenty-four years old, but has been pronounced by court tennis experts who have seen him in action the most promising young player developed in France or any other country. His play has made such a deep impression on French court tennis enthusiasts a subscription fund to send him in quest of the title was a simple matter.

Sailing from Cherbourg on the Aquitania on January 18, he will arrive in New York January 23, where he is expected to spend some time in practice with Walter Kinsella, the noted New York professional. Soutar, in the meantime, will sharpen his game by stiff practice matches with Fred Tompkins, the Racquet Club professional, and Jay Gould, former national amateur champion.

The match here will open Monday, February 20, with four sets and continue Washington's Birthday with four more sets. It will be concluded with as many sets as are necessary to reach a decision, Saturday, February 25. A substantial side bet and a division of the gate receipts will be at stake.

Chairman Wear has also announced that the annual intercity court tennis and racquet matches between New York and Philadelphia will be held again.

JARVIS ASKS RETURN BOUT

London Flyweight Thinks That He Could Do Better.

FIGHT GENARO.

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—None the worse for his twelve-round grueling, Frenchy Belanger, world's flyweight champion, was around bright and early Tuesday receiving the congratulations of his friends and admirers on his clean-cut triumph. The little titleholder accepted the adulation accorded him with the utmost diffidence, and tried his best to keep in the background. Belanger is a modest youngster, different from the ordinary type of boxer, and it is a certainty that he will not let prosperity carry him off his feet. One of the tributes that he prized most was from Ernie Jarvis, who wished him all the success in the world and hoped that he would long continue to wear the flyweight crown. The sportsmanship displayed by the latter, both in the ring and after the bout, in which he was defeated, made him a host of friends. Jarvis admitted immediately following the verdict against him that he was satisfied that the best boy won and that he had no complaints to make. In a letter the gallant little Englishman thanks everybody for the support and fair play given him, and says that Belanger won on his merits. He is of the opinion, however, that he could reverse the decision over a longer route and mentions the fact that it was his first bout since he injured his ankle six months ago. Incidentally he points out that he took off 16 pounds in 14 days, but stresses the fact that he is not advancing this as an alibi.

"I can safely say that my next bout will be different. I did my best and Belanger was the better man. I also wish to thank the press of Toronto for its utter fairness and co-operation. Wishing Toronto fans the compliments of the season, I remain sincerely, Ernie Jarvis."

Belanger would not be averse to giving Jarvis another bout, but not in the immediate future. He has first his engagement with Frankie Genaro to consider, and until he has disposed of his obligation to the New Yorker, who by the way won a bout on Tuesday night, he is not likely to accept any challenges. The suggestion has been made that a contest between Alex Burlie and Jarvis would prove attractive. Burlie has been out of the picture for some time, but he is keen to get back into the spotlight. There is little doubt but that he would be only too willing to take on the Englishman in a catchweight affair. He was matched with the latter some time ago, but the bout fell through because of an accident to Jarvis, who was making his first trip to this side.

VARSITY WINS OPENING GAME

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—University of Toronto defeated Marlboros by 3 to 1 in the opening game of the O.H.A. senior schedule at Arena Gardens last night.

Neither team was at full strength. "Red" Whitehead was missing from the students' line-up. He is still suffering from the illness that laid him up during the summer, and he has returned to his home in Hagersville to rest up until after the holidays. Marlboros presented only a patch or two of the strong team they mustered earlier in the season. Some of their players were participating in the Mercantile League games. Contrary to expectations, Harry Watson did not appear with the "Dukes," despite repeated announcements to that effect. He stayed on the bench and coached the team. The former Olympic star is apparently through with hockey, except in an advisory capacity. Ross Paul was also missing from Marlboros.

Both teams worked hard, but it was one of those games in which, close though the score was, the fans sat back and had a good laugh. Marlboros appeared to lack condition. The "Dukes" were very shy on team work also. At one time in the third period the Collegians had three men in the penalty box, and Marlboros outnumbered them 5 to 3, but could not combine effectively enough to score. The teams were on even terms until the final period, when Stewart's lift from the blue line entered the net over Baxter's head. The little goalkeeper, who was recruited from the junior team under the rule that permits a junior player to play one game in the senior series in a season, was carried off the ice at the end of the game. He suffered a couple of broken ribs in a recent Industrial League game, and last night's appearance was his first since he was injured.

Late in the game he received a further injury in the ribs, and he was all in when taken off. His work was the only bright spot in the performance of the Marlboros. He kept the collegians off the score sheet repeatedly through brilliant stops. The first goal for the students was no fault of Baxter's. It carooned into the net off Nugent's stick when he tried to block McMullen's shot at the goalmouth. The other two tallies were well earned. Stewart's shot was tricky and just caught the top of the net. Kirkpatrick scored the final goal on a pass from McMullen.

Marlboro's only counter was from Johnny McPherson's stick. It came in the midway period and tied the score. Heintzman passed to McPherson from close in and in the scramble the little right wing found an opening to the net.

Blue and White Defense Good.

Both teams will have to show considerable improvement if they expect to make much headway in the group. The collegains have a fast forward line and Crosby and Kirkpatrick made a formidable defence. Kirkpatrick has a tendency to charge the attackers not always in accordance with the rules. When he curbs this tendency he will be a much better player. He is strong both on the defence and on the attack. Murray Snyder played a fine game in goal and was given plenty to do at times. Mac King, Richards and McMullen gave clever performances on the front line. Stewart is also good, while Harley was too effectively checked to show up prominently.

Underwood and Nugent were the pick of the losers. They were not spectacular but they carried most of the burden of stopping the students' rushes and also helped out the forward line with their rushes. Both will improve when they get into condition. "Red' Foster's determined checking made a hit with the fans. 'Red" lacks style but he is mighty effective at times and one of the hardest workers in the game Johnny McPherson, Heintzman and Miller were nt able to show their usual effectiveness. Miller was the only one of the trio who flashed at any speed but he failed to use it to good advantage. Burry has not yet found his stride He should improve when he has been in more games.

The game provided more than the usual number of penalties but all were for minor offences.

Marlboros' — Baxter, goal; Nugent and Underwood; defense, Miller, McPherson and Heintzman; Foster and Burry, subs

U. of T. — Snyder, goal; Kirkpatrick and Crosby, defence; King, centre; Harley and Richards, wings, McMullen and Stewart, subs.

Referee—Lou Marsh.

MODERN GAMES CALLED BETTER

Landis Sure Present Day Athletics Not Being Over-Emphasized.

BUILD HEALTH.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—"Sports are the safety valve of the present generation. They are just as essential to our physical and mental well-being as wholesome food and academic training. They have done much for our country and those who deplore their growth and howl that they are being over-emphasized are merely talking through their hats."

Thus spake Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of organized baseball. He spoke with great feeling, great sincerity, with his very best judicial delivery, punctuating his remarks with sharp though kindly smacks on the interviewer's knees. For the benefit of the inquisitive, the judge carries quite a wallop in his right hand. It was a little disappointing when the commissioner spoke of people taking through their hats rather than advising them to keep their shirts on. Perhaps, however, the day had something to do with it. It was cold and windy and gusty. He probably knew in advance that they would do this anyway.

Not "Sports Crazy."

He was told that there was a growing group abroad in this country which subscribed to the theory that America was going sport crazy. He was informed still further that this opinion is held mostly among some certain of the intellectual elements; that little groups of serious thinkers everywhere deplore the fact that baseball, golf, football, boxing, tennis and other sports are drawing greater crowds than the recent debates on the progress of the drama and companionate marriage.

The judge waxed furious. His white shock fairly stood on end. He doubled his fists, walked toward his inquisitor and thundered:

"A people must have a healthful outlet. Of course, the specialized sports are growing in favor! Of course, they are attracting greater crowds than ever before! Why not? What else is the populace of the land going to do for healthful amusement? What else will take them out of doors.

"They must turn to the specialized sports. The sports we had when I was a boy, the fishing ponds that abounded throughout the land, have been destroyed greatly by enroaching industrialism. Cities have grown where towns used to be. Great factories now stand where sand lots used to furnish boys with a chance to play ball.

"Factories now pollute the fishing streams, making that noble sport an extinct thing for hundreds of thousands, and the average lad cannot afford to go away for week-end fishing trips.

"It is all well to talk of the finer things. Yes, I, too, like Beethoven and I like fine books. But what of those who don't care for them? A person, after all, is not obliged to like Beethoven.

Times Have Changed.

"Sports give people a chance to have conversational intercourse who otherwise would be bored to death. I have seen people enjoy a day on the golf course and an evening talking about their accomplishments. All this makes for mental stimulation and physical betterment.

"I would much rather not talk about baseball, but how many people really do enjoy waiting for the results of games, talking about their favorite players, arguing about the individuals merits of this pitcher or that one, defending an inexcusable play pulled by the teams who happen to be their chosen favorites.

"Mr. Landis recalled that in his earlier days, just after the natural sports began to go out and just before the specialized games began to come in, people used to sit around stuffy rooms during the day and during the night, specializing in poker.

That was the sport of the era.

"How much better for them to go out to football games, as they are doing these days, or ball games, or tennis matches. And, of course, the value of actual participation in these games is incalculable.

"It is a great thing for the country that its people are turning so whole-heartedly to sports. As I said before, sports are a great safety valve. They make for good natured rivalries between communities. They make for closer contracts.

"Let the criticis criticize. Sports deveop a better brand of men and women."

Third Annual New England Dog Race To Be Staged In February Over New Course

NORTH CONWAY, N.H., December 22 (Canadian Press). — Over a new course that will include 28 to 30 miles of open racing on Lake Winnipesaukee, the third annual point-to-point New England Sled Dog Race will be staged on February 9, 10, and 11 this winter, Harold W. Pendergast, general chairman of the race committee announced yesterday.

The pick of the Canadian and American mushers who in the past two years have brought the race up to rival the famous International Derbies at Quebec and Le Pas, are again expected to enter. Leonhard Seppala, hero of the famous dash to Nome, Alaska ,with diphtheria antitoxin, and winner of the New England race last year, has arrived at Poland Springs, Me., and has begun training. Shorty Russick, the diminutive Russian fur trader from the Canadian North-West, who won the first race two years ago, has written that he intends to compete again this year.

Other probable Canadian entries include Emil St. Goddard from Le Pas, Man., and the picturesque Dupuis brothers from Quebec. In the American group, Arthur T. Walden, president of the New England Sled Dog Club, sponsor of the race, may take enough time from his preparations to accompany Commander Byrd to the South Pole, to race again, while Hi Mason of Tamworth, Walter Channing of Boston, Phil Malloy of Berlin, and others are expected to take the starting line again.

Girl Hears Funeral Service Held For Her

LURAY, Va., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Having listened to a funeral service preached over the coffin in which she spent the night, unable to signal those who believed her dead, Miss Fannie Broyles is alive today. A brother, who stood about the casket with other mourning relatives, noticed the twitching of his sister's eyelid and the funeral services were halted and resuscitation efforts begun. In a short time the girl was able to talk. She said she was aware of all that occurred around her as she lay in the casket but, still stunned from a blow on the head from a tree limb that fell upon her, was unable to move or speak.

JIM HERBERTS SOLD TO LEAFS

Toronto Team Gets Star Bruin Player For $15,000 Cash.

BOSTON, December 22 (Canadian Press). — The much rumored sale of Jim Herberts became an established fact yesterday with the announcement that the star spare forward of the Boston Bruins has been sold to the Toronto Maple Leafs for $15,000 cash. The Bruins also acquired rights to the services of Eric Pittenger ,centre of the Fort William Canadian Amateur Club, finalists with the Toronto Grads in last season's Allan Cup series.

That the sale may have been somewhat of a disciplinary measure was seen in the statement of President Charles F. Adams, of the Bruins, in announcing the deal.

"We think we have players who will be more in accordance with our team morale and training camp rules than Herberts. Jimmy will be better off in his new atmosphere in that he will be nearer his home, business, and family," the clubowner said.

Commenting on a Canadian report that the Bruins were angling for Ralph Welland of the Minneapolis Central Hockey League Club, President Adams announced that the Bruins already have purchased him for delivery in 1928, but that an attempt may be made to bring him to Boston before the New Year.

Herberts, who came to Boston when the Bruins Club was organized in 1924, will report for duty with Toronto immediately. In his three years with Boston, he has been one of the team's leading scorers and most aggressive players. An injury to his hand, sustained in Montreal last Saturday, may keep him from the game for several days.

Drive On Dog Races Gaining In Force; Churches Charge Sport With Betting Increase

LONDON, Dec. 22 (United Press). — The drive against greyhound racing because of the increase in the betting evil is gaining force. Today Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the Home Secretary, is receiving a deputation from all three political parties, who want to know what powers he can exert to put an end to gambling.

"Jicks" already has said that he has no power in the matter, so it is likely Parliament will be asked to legislate to meet the new conditions.

The churches urge that greyhound racing has led to a great growth in gambling, especially among young people and children, and it is argued that, without betting, greyhound racing would rapidly die.

Supporters of the sport retort that the amount of betting is comparatively small compared with the attendance, and ask why a distinction should be drawn against greyhounds when betting at horse races was permitted. They say it is another move to "crab" the sport of the working man.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THIS MAKES A HOUSE

This makes a house (not many rooms
Cluttered with chairs and other wares):
A vase in which one red rose blooms,
A strip of carpet on the stairs,
A simple table simply laid,
Some silver, rather than much plate,
An inglenook, a friendly book,
A seat or two before the grate.

A few good pictures on the wall,
Neither too massive nor too loud,
Better a wall with none at all
Than one where many push and crowd),
Some rugs that scarcely rugs suggest,
So unobtrusive to the sight,
A place the guest may sit and rest,
Or read beside the shaded light.

Your poverty or wealth effaced
By rooms where either is forgot,
That tell of taste, not need nor waste,
Not whether you are rich or not,
A place of beauty, not expense,
Shelter, and not a glittering dome,
The excellence that hearts can sense,
This makes a house, this makes a home.

Uncle Wiggily

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE LOST DOLL

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

"Why are you skiddering around in such cold weather?" asked Uncle Wiggily of the Tickle Bug.

"Pooh! I never feel the cold," buzzed the Bug. "You see I am covered with fuzzy hairs, almost as thick as your fur coat, so the ice and snow never bothers me."

"That is a good thing," said the rabbit gentleman, for there was ice and snow all over Woodland, now, as winter had come to stay for a while. "But what favor did you want to ask me?" went on Mr. Longears.

When he had been running away from the Bear, whom he fooled with chocolate drop acorns, as I told you in the story last night, all of a sudden Uncle Wiggily had heard some calling for him to stop. It was this Tickle Bug who had called.

"The favor I would ask is this," said the Bug as he skiddered around on the icy path. "Please take me into your hollow stump bungalow to live for a while. I am on my vacation and I know I shall like it at your house, with all your little bunny boys and girls."

"You may come to my bungalow, and be quite welcome," said the rabbit gentleman kindly. "But this is a queer time to take a vacation, it seems to me—in the middle of winter."

"Oh, I always take my vacation in December," laughed the Bug.

"Why is that, if I may ask?" inquired Uncle Wiggily.

"Well, you see it's this way," explained the Bug. "I am a Tickler. My work is to go around tickling everyone who is sad, or unhappy, to make them smile, laugh and be glad again."

"A right jolly bit of work I call that!" said the rabbit.

"Yes, I love to tickle folks and make them happy," went on the Bug. "But in December, which is Christmas month, everyone is so happy anyhow, thinking of the presents they are going to get, or give others—and it is more jolly thinking of what you are going to give than of what you are going to get—as I say, everyone is so happy in December that there is nothing for me to do."

"I can well believe that," said Mr. Longears. "I am always happy myself in Christmas month, and so are my little bunnies."

"So it is in December that I always take my vacation," said the Bug. "Then there is no need for me to tickle anyone to make them laugh. Though if I saw anyone, now, who was sad I would tickle them, of course."

"Of course," agreed Uncle Wiggily. "And may I ask," he went on politely, "how you do your tickling?"

"Like this," answered the Bug. He jumped up off the snow and began to crawl on Uncle Wiggily's leg. And at once, even through his trousers, Mr. Longears felt such a funny tickling that he had to laugh.

"Ho! Ho! Ho!" he chuckled. "How jolly I feel! Oh, what a happy tickle. I'm twice as jolly as I was."

"Well, that's the way I do it," said fuzzy Tickle Bug as he hopped down on the snow again. "But could I stay in your bungalow for my vacation? There will be no need of me tickling any one, now that this is Christmas month."

"Of course you may," replied Mr. Longears. "Come along! But as I can probably hop faster than you can crawl and as that Bear may catch up to me if I don't hurry along, I had better put you in my pocket."

"That suits me," said the Tickle Bug and soon he and the rabbit gentleman were at the hollow stump bungalow.

No sooner had Mr. Longears hopped in with his candy cane than he saw Jingle, one of his little bunny girls, in a corner crying.

"Ha! Work for me already, and I thought I was on my vacation!" buzzed

"Ho! Ho! Ho!" he chuckled.

the Tickle Bug as he crawled out of Uncle Wiggily's pocket. "You must not cry, my dear," he told Jingle. "I will make you laugh."

So the Bug tickled Jingle, but though she could not help smiling through her tears, she still looked sad, and the Bug said:

"This is very strange. I cannot make her happy. I wonder if I am losing my power!"

"No—boo hoo—it isn't your fault!" sobbed Jingle. But my doll, Blinky, is lost and I shall never be happy again. Oh, dear!"

"Your doll Blinky lost!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "That's too bad! Where did you lose Blinky?"

"Down through a hole in the ice on the duck pond!" sobbed Jingle. "Oh, Blinky! I'll never see you again!"

"Yes you shall!" cried Tickle Bug. "Quick! I have an idea! I will help you find Blinky and you shall be happy again! Come on!"

COLLINS STARS FOR OIL TEAM

Scores Three Goals Against City Hall in Toronto Mercantile.

PLAYS FOR CHAMPIONS.

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—Canada Cycle and Motors retained their place at the top of the Mercantile Senior Hockey League by defeating Goodyear Tire 2 to 0 at the Ravina Rink last night. In the second game of the mid-week double-header, the champion Imperial Oil Green Shirts ran loose with speedy and effective combination to down City Hall 6 to 1.

Imperial Oil uncovered the season's best combination in winning their game from City Hall. Time after time they swept through the Civicmen's defence, and Claude Harris averted a larger score by his splendid goaltending.

Imperials played unselfish and winning hockey, and are rapidly reaching their sensational stride of last Winter, when they won the all-Toronto title.

"Chick" Garvie was struck in the face by a flying puck in the second period, several stitches being required to close the wound.

Scored Three Goals

Frankie Collins was the night's leading attacker, registering three good goals for the champions, two on neat passes from Clark Heyd.

City Hall's lone goal was scored on a low shot by Jimmy Finlayson. Northam proved a willing mixer with the champions, while Hackett, Bennett and Bond showed flashes of good individual hockey for the Hallers.

Imperial Oil.—Goal, McAllister and Moran; defence, Cain and McKay; centre, Leachman; wings, Heyd and Smythe; subs., Garvie, Collins and Smith.

City Hall.—Goal, Harris; defence Northam and Hayman; centre, Finlayson; wings, Hackett and Bond; subs., McCaffery, Bennett and Murray.

SHARP CONTRASTS IN KEN'S LATEST

From the frenzied shouts of "Ride 'im Cowboy!" to the soft romantic strumming on guitars of "La Paloma," from a scene crammed full of action at a Western rodeo to the winning of a maiden under moonlit Mexican skies—these are some of the contrasts "Somewhere in Sonora," now playing at the Regent Theatre offer.

They are but few of the contrasts. The new First National feature starring Ken Maynard offers many. It offers opportunities for contrast with the average "western" which explain why "Somewhere in Sonora" is in a class all by itself. For it is superior. The usual methods of injecting thrills are avoided. Maynard's sensational ability to do almost the impossible in riding stunts, takes care of this end. His director, Al Rogell, has seen to it that none of the exhibitions of his skill is forced into the picture. There is a logical reason for the use of every one of them.

"Somewhere in Sonora" is a tale of Arizona and Mexico dealing with the troubles the natives had, not merely with the Mexicans, but with a group of American ne'er-do-wells who had organized into a troop of bandits. Naturally with all the action the picture contains, it has not neglected the love theme. Kathleen Collins, who has appeared in former Ken Maynard pictures, is again seen as the lady for whom Ken Maynard fights—and wins!

A review of a Ken Maynard feature would not be complete without mention of Tarzan. It is horses with his intelligence that make many humans appear not much better than Jackasses.

For throwing a kitten at his landlady, Francis Higgins was sentenced to three months' imprisonment in Glasgow prison recently.

LEGON ELECTS TO PLAY WITH HIS HOME TOWN

Peterborough Student Signs With Local Seniors and Will Play To-night.

WELCOME ADDITION.

Red-Topped Pepper Box Will Give Petes Considerably More Punch.

The satisfaction in the Petes' camp over the good showing made on Tuesday night against Oshawa was enhanced last evening when Red Legon, home on holidays from the University of Toronto, announced that he had decided to play for his home town rather than for Varsity, signed a Peterborough certificate and declared himself ready to get into tonight's game at Brock Street Rink.

Accordingly the little pepper box will be seen at centre for the Petes when the teams are sent away tonight. Santa Claus will be no more welcome on Christmas Eve than the arrival of Legon is to the Petes. In his Junior and Intermediate days with the Peterborough outfit, "Red" was always prominent and his years with Queen's University have made him a smart, fast and aggressive player, who will give the local Seniors considerably more punch. He has been coaching the University of Toronto Schools Juniors and working out with Varsity, so that he is in good shape.

Manager Wright's line-up against Oshawa will be as follows:

Goal—LeBarr, Hall.
Defence—Rose (Capt.), Clark.
Centre—Legon.
Right Wing—McFee.
Subs.—Foley, Williams, Maudsley, Cripps.

Oshawa will be at full strength with practically all of last year's team except Lott, and a bunch of new players. Sammy Lowe, the Motorists' manager, can see nothing but the Intermediate championship, and expects his team to prove its ability by winning right here tonight, figuring that Oshawa teams usually do better at Brock Street Rink than at home.

It should be an interesting night all round and a big crowd of Peterborough fans will be out to see the new season ushered in.

ANGLO-CATHOLICS WOULD BREAK BOND

Clergy Start Movement For Disestablishment of Church of England.

LONDON December 22. United Press. — A strong movement for the disestablishment of the Church of England has started among Anglo-Catholic clergy owing to the present position of the Revised Book of Common Prayer.

It is understod however that the movement is not directly the outcome of the Commons' rejection but that it was instituted because the Bishops framing of the revised book was hampered by their connection with the state.

Freedom is being demanded and while it is certain to intensify the schism in the church, it is impossible to tell at present what the fortunes of the movement will be.

That the opium habit in Egypt is less than the use of alcohol was the declaration recently of an Egyptian medical official.

When a Man Loves

By ALLIE LOWE MILES

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beauteous orphan, who is coveted by hideous Count Ravoir. Fabien saves her, but circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoir. She rejoins Fabien, and they live so extravagantly that Fabien is forced to capitalize a genius for cards. Ravoir, in revenge, causes Manon to be deported. Fabien stows away on the convict ship, but is thrown with the convicts. Fabien incites the convicts to mutiny, and chases an officer into the rigging.

CHAPTER XXV—Continued.

The ship was yawing from port to starboard and back again. It headed into the wind and then ran before it. The great sails slatted from side to side with a force that threatened to bring all the rigging down on the heads of the fighters below.

It was precarious footing for both Synnelet and Fabien but their intense fury and hatred for each other caused them to give little thought to anything except their own private grudge. Manon could not belong to both of them! Each man knew this and was determined that he would be the one to claim her.

Synnelet had the advantage and several times made desperate lunges at Fabien with his sword. Each time Fabien was able to get out of reach just in time. A heavy rolling sea almost brought Synnelet on top of Fabien as Synnelet leaned from the crow's nest and Fabien clung to the rigging. With a smile of triumph the pampered nephew thrust forward, fiercely, with all his strength, toward Fabien's breast. The lunging of the ship into a wave caused an abrupt check for which Synnelet was unprepared. He struggled desperately to regain his balance, but his feet lost their foothold and with a great cry of terror he dangled perilously by his hands a hundred feet or more above the deck. Like a luge human pendulum he swung by his hands from side to side at each roll of the ship.

Piteously, Synnelet looked at Fabien and implored mercy. This was not the glorious ending he had planned for their combat, but in his desperation he forgot that just a moment before he had tried to plunge his sword into Fabien's breast.

It was only a question of seconds now. Synnelet's strength was fast waning. A sudden pitch and one hand lost its grip—a roll the other way and Synnelet, with a gasping cry, plunged down—down into the boiling sea below.

Like a man stunned, Fabien clung to the flimsy ladder. God had taken upon Himself the punishment he had sought to mete out. Fabien's lips moved in silent prayer and his thoughts again returned to Manon. He must go to her. Half way down the ladder he paused to look below. The convicts were victorious and the lust of battle had turned into a lust of a baser sort.

The deported women had been taken from their quarters and as Fabien looked he saw one of the convicts pull a woman into his arms. Other women were running, terrified, about the deck—each pursued by a man who saw in her his reward for the battle he had just been through.

"What if one of them was Manon!" Quickly he descended and fought his way through the mad scramble on deck. At last he reached the cabin where he had left her. Softly he knocked on the door and as softly called her name. The bolt slid back and with a muttered, "Thank God!" Fabien took her into his arms. She clung to him in terror, sobbing as if her heart would break.

"Oh, Fabien—my dear! I thought you would never come back—and I was afraid—you were gone so long. The women have been screaming and someone knocked, but I didn't open—I was afraid—" her words died away into a convulsive sob.

Fabien calmed her while he explained all that had happened.

"I must leave you again, dear, to see if the convicts are really in command of the ship. You must be brave, because if they have done away with the old crew they will turn pirates and carry us out to sea. If I can find a boat we can manage to get it overboard and reach America—land is in sight now—remember it is our only chance—I can see no other way of escape.

"Yes—hurry and find out—I would rather go adrift on a raft than stay here any longer." Manon had control of herself again and was thoroughly aware of their precarious outlook.

"I hope I find the convicts either nursing their wounds or cuddling their women. Let them do any thing, just so long as they forget about you. I will return soon, dear!"

Manon stifled a sob. Swiftly their arms went about each other, their lips met—then she bravely sent Fabien out.

He sauntered around the deck. Signs of the conflict were everywhere. His own disheveled appearance failed to attract attention as he walked aft. Neither the Captain nor the Governor were to be seen; they had been imprisoned or slain and thrown overboard. Those of the crew who had not joined the mutinying convicts had met death or had been thrown bodily into the hold.

Fabien's ruse to escape from the hold had been more successful than he anticipated, but the result was appalling. The convicts were in complete charge of the ship and running wild. Manon was in greater danger now than before. He noticed that night was fast approaching. The shore line was faintly discernable. To his horror he discovered that they were headed away from land! From the stern, a life boat lashed to the davits suggested a means of escape. While he was carefully examining the lashings to see how they worked, the giant approached and put his great arm familiarly around Fabien's shoulder.

"Well, friend," he said, "Your plan of escape worked! I've swapped places with the old Captain. I'm going to make him sweat down in the hold and use him for navigating later on." The giant was surprisingly verbose.

"Later on," interrupted Fabien, "What do you mean?"

"Well, you don't think we're heading for the penal colony to be wrapped up in chains again, do you? No!!—Maybe we'll land someplace else—and maybe we won't; but we got our women with us and we'll have a colony of our own, at sea or on land, it don't matter. Keep an eye open on deck for me, friend, while I go below and make sure I got the prettiest—well, while I look things over." With a grand swagger the giant went below.

Fabien waited until he disappeared before darting into another doorway that lead to Manon. After hearing the new Captain's plan there was no doubt about the advisability of escaping in a lifeboat.

"Manon—Manon!" whispered Fabien at the door, "Come dear—quickly!"

Immediately she appeared with a great coat wrapped about her and a man's hat pulled over her curls.

"I am ready—but don't leave me again!"

"You darling! Never." Fabien smiled his approval at her forethought in assuming a partial disguise, but there was no time for conversation or love-making.

Without another word they went on deck, clinging to the shadows to make themselves inconspicuous. Going aft to the stern davits they crawled into the life boat. Fabien handled the ropes, hand over hand, until the boat hit the waves with a hard flat splash: then he loosened the ropes, shot the oars in place and rowed for the dim shore.

Presently a convict sailor spied them and raised an alarm. The deck swarmed with poorly disciplined seamen hurling various missiles at the little black spot in the darkness. Unable to hit the fugitives they cursed their luck and returned to new duties about the ship.

The sea was uncomfortably rough for a small boat but Fabien and Manon did not mind—land, a new land was not far away and it would be their home where they could begin life again—this time as man and wife.

Fabien pulled in the oars and crawled back to the wide stern seat with Manon. He kept one arm around her and the other on the rudder as the waves and tide carried them shoreward.

Smiling into each other's eyes their lips met in a long, wonderful kiss of love and happy fulfillment.

THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR — XL — by Nicholas Afonsky

At the beginning of the war airplanes were used for observation, photographic, bombing and scout work. Before long they were fitted with rapid fire guns and became effective fighting machines. Richthofen, a German, with eighty Allied planes to his credit, was perhaps the greatest of all aces.

He organized a Flying Circus of German fliers. All the planes were painted in bright colors, his own flaming red. He used to drop notes over Allied airdromes, telling the fate of Allied aces he had shot down. So when he was killed the Royal Flying Corps dropped a note on the German airdrome, giving the news.

Colonel William Bishop, with 72 victories to his credit, ranks as the British ace of aces. His engine went dead after he had brought down his first plane. He decided to glide as near his own lines as possible and landed in a deserted German village which he found to his great joy the British had just taken.

Captain Albert Ball was another great British pilot, with at least 44 planes to his credit. He used to get under his enemy and fire up into the engine or gasoline tank, and so send his opponent's plane crashing in flames to earth. He was killed in a spectacular fight with Richthofen's Circus well behind the German lines.

CAR SKIDDED INTO THE DITCH

Peterborough Motorists Have Narrow Escape From Serious Injury.

Mr. and Mrs. John Curtis of Peterborough, motoring to Toronto yesterday to spend Christmas with friends there, had a very narrow escape from serious injury yesterday morning, when their car skidded on the icy road, a short distance east of Bowmanville, turned almost completely around, and then turned over into the ditch.

Dr. E. H. Wood, who was returning to Peterborough from Toronto, was an eye-witness of the accident, which occurred as his car was approaching that occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Curtis. He assisted the occupants in getting out of the overturned car, and found that they had escaped very lightly, several cuts on Mr. Curtis' head being the extent of the injuries sustained. The car was towed into Bowmanville for repairs.

IN MEMORIAM

LEAHY.—In loving memory of our dear son, Harry Leahy, who died December 22nd, 1926:
Last year at the glad Yuletide season
Our Harry was called with the blest,
When the birth of our Saviour was hallowed
He had gone to Eternal rest.
Our sad hearts were lonely and tearful,
And our Christmas was most depressed,
But now we no longer are mournful,
For we know that God's Will is the best.
—Inserted by his parents, sister, and brothers.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving remembrance of Mr. Joseph Burns, who passed away Dec. 22nd, 1926:
"At rest in the home above,
Free from all care and pain,
But my heart for him is yearning
With a love that remains the same.
—Sadly missed by his wife, Mrs. J. Burns.

Safe in Jesus' keeping
Not lost but gone before,
We'll meet again in the Homeland,
United for evermore.
—In loving remembrance by his daughter, Mrs. A. Ward.

IN MEMORIAM.

LEAHY. — In sad and loving memory of Harry L. Leahy, who passed away in Detroit, Mich., December 22nd, 1926.
Those whom we love go out of sight,
But never out of mind;
They are cherished in the hearts
Of those they leave behind.
Loving and kind in all his ways,
Upright and just to the end of his days;
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Beautiful memories he left behind.

OBITUARY

MICHAEL HUBERT GALVIN.

To the many friends and former associates in this city of the late Hubert Galvin, the news of his sudden death in Cleveland Ohio, on Tuesday morning of this week, came as a distinct shock. The young man, who was thirty-eight years of age, was born and brought up in this city, where he was well known and highly respected by a host of friends. He was employed as a machinist at the Canadian General Eleceric Company, previous to leaving this city some years ago to act as electrician for a travelling theatrical troupe, in which capacity he was engaged when he contracted pleuro-pneumonia in Cleveland this week, and died there after three days' illness. The remains are being brought to the city on the noon train to-day, and interment will take place in St. Peter's cemetery on Saturday morning, after funeral services at nine o'clock at St. St. Peter's Cathedral.

The late Mr. Galvin was a member of the Knights of Columbus and of the Theatrical Union.

Survivors are four brothers and four sisters: Elmer J. and Frank E. of Rochester, N. Y., Roy and Kehoe, of Detroit; Mrs. John Barrie, Mrs. I. E. Winchell and Mrs. D. R. Corcoran of Rochester, and Mrs. John H. Deanard, 187 Stewart street, Peterborough. The father of the deceased, Mr. James Galvin, died thirteen years ago, and his mother eight years ago.

PATRICK EDWARD MURPHY

The death occurred in this city on Tuesday of Patrick Edward Murphy, aged 54, of 454 Park Street. Mr. Murphy has been a resident of this city for over 40 years. He was born in Whitby and since coming here has been engaged as a city employee.

He leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing wife; two sons, Frank and Jack, and four daughters, Mildred, Florence, Blanche and Marcelle, all of this city.

The funeral mass will be held on Friday morning at 9.00 o'clock in St. Peter's Cathedral, with interment in St. Peter's Cemetery.

Two Nominated For Each Place On Public Bodies

Aldermen Nagle Phelan and Roland Denne Contest Mayoralty —W. H. Bradburn Seeks Re-election To Utilities Commission, Opposed By John Crane.

TEN CANDIDATES ARE PROPOSED FOR FIVE SEATS ON SCHOOL BOARD

Many Candidates Take Opportunity To Lay Claims Before Electors at Nomination Meeting This Morning in the Council Chamber.

Board of Education

Frank H. Dawson
E. Bruce Fowler
Kate Morris.
H. J. McCannan.

Two men were nominated in the Mayoralty contest, two in the Utilities Commission race, and ten names were brought forward for the Board of Education, when civic nominations were held from ten to eleven o'clock this forenoon. There were no surprises, but the usual last-minute rush occurred when James Dutton was nominated with five minutes to go, Mrs. Morris by a margin of three minutes, and H. J. McCannan with only half a minute to spare. The nominations of candidates in the aldermanic contest take place to-night at 7.30 in the City Council Chamber.

The following were the nominations:

Mayor.

N. E. Phelan, nominated by J. J. Craig and J. Lynch.

R. Denne, nominated by J. G. Graham and E. A. Stinson.

Utilities Commission.

John Crane, nominated by R. Harstone and J. F. H. Wallace.

W. H. Bradburn, nominated by V. Eastwood and H. Gainey.

Board of Education.

John A. McNabb, nominated by H. R. Martin and Wm. Bolton.

William Boulton, nominated by W. Stocker and J. G. Graham.

E. R. Wilson, nominated by J. W. Meyers and E. F. Reid.

H. M. Yelland, nominated by H. C. Huffman and F. H. Dobbin.

J. J. Craig, nominated by J. A. McKone and E. B. Fowler.

F. H. Dawson, nominated by J. W. Beyers and S. A. Lowe.

E. B. Fowler, nominated by V. Eastwood and J. M. Greene.

James Dutton, nominated by E. F. Reid and W. R. Turner, Jr.

Kate Morris, nominated by H. E. Hodgens and A. W. Archibald.

H. J. McCannan, nominated by John Crane and J. F. H. Wallace.

Addresses Made.

Following the official nominations addresses were made by several of the candidates.

Nagle Phelan recalled his eight years service on the City Council, during which he gave seven years as chairman of the Finance Committee. He had only missed one council meeting in his civic career, he said.

"The city is in good condition financially and otherwise," he said, "but we need new industries. If I am elected this will be one of my endeavors. The transportation question will be a live one next year, and must be dealt with. I don't want to preach blue ruin or anything," he remarked, "but if this company doesn't pay dividends it cannot be expected to carry on.

During the past year we sold a debenture issue of $295,000 in connection with the new wing to the Collegiate Institute and we had 14 bids, finally closing at a price that is far better than Windsor received a short time ago. This shows that Peterborough ranks with the larger cities of the Dominion financially."

In closing, Mr. Phelan said he was elected as Alderman for a two year term, and he does not think it would be fair to say "If you don't elect me Mayor, I'm through." What he is asking is for promotion from alderman to mayor.

Roland Denne

"You know my record," Mr. Denne remarked—"twelve years on the Board of Education and three years on the City Council." After thanking Mayor Holloway for his leadership during the past two years, remarking that it was real leadership, Mr. Denne declared, "What Peterborough needs is more factories and more people, and we will have to

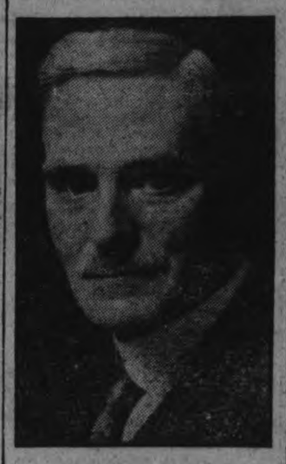
NEW ZEALANDERS TRY LONG FLIGHT

Hope To Cross From Australia To New Zealand By Plane.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 23.—(United Press.)—Three New Zealand airmen, Moncrief, Knight and Hood, arrived here to-day in an endeavor to be the first to fly over the Tasman Sea. They plan to leave for Sydney, N.S.W., on their way to New Zealand, in a few days. Their plane is similar to Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis."

COMMISSION CANDIDATE



JOHN CRANE
Who was nominated to-day for election to the Utilities Commission. He is a newcomer to city electoral campaigns.

ELEVEN NAMED IN N. MONAGHAN

Three Nominated For Reeveship, Two For Deputy, and Seven For Councillors.

CONTEST LIKELY.

If all those nominated for office stand a contest is assured for every place in the Township Council of North Monaghan. Among the candidates are all the members of this year's council.

Three are named for Reeve, all of whom have had experience in that office. They are the present Reeve, R. T. Lillico, who a few days ago announced his intention of retiring, H. B. Rye, reeve for several years and warden in 1925, and T. M. Hunter, who filled both reeveship and wardenship a number of years ago. Mr. Hunter is at present a member of the council.

Two are proposed for the position of deputy reeve. They are the present incumbent, Robert A. Dobbin, and W. G. Waterman, at present a member of the council.

Mr. Waterman is also nominated for councillor, along with Andrew Kent, at present a member, and William Stevens, Herbert Bourne, Geo. Patten, William Whitfield, and John Williams. Three are to be elected.

It took 46 years for England to acquire a million telephones, but the last third of a million has been added in less than five years.

POLICE SEEK ACCOMPLICES OF KIDNAPPER

Doubt Hickman's Story, But Make Vigorous Search.

MAY BE EXECUTED.

Participation in Crime Admitted By Youth Sufficient to Warrant Execution.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—With William E. Hickman under indictment here on a charge of murder and kidnapping, the search got under way to-day for the two purported accomplices named by the confessed abductor of little Marian Parker.

The search for the accomplices was ordered despite the belief of the police that the confederates existed only in the imagination of the youth captured near Pendleton, Oregon.

Working at top speed to capture the alleged accomplices, "Andrew Cramer" and "June Dunning," police and sheriff's officers searched all their records. Numerous "Cramers" were found but the officers declared none of them apparently fitted the case. Of "June Dunning, they found no trace whatever.

Police suspicions of Hickman's story were based on what they declared was their experience with him at the time of his arrest last summer on the forgery charge, which resulted in his discharge from the bank of which Perry Parker, Marian's father, was assistant cashier in charge of personnel.

"Hickman is one of the most plausible liars in the world," said the police detectives who handled that case.

NEW SCHOOL TO BE OPENED NEXT TUESDAY

Meeting Will Be Held at Confederation School For Inspection.

FINE STRUCTURE.

Building Well Planned and Fitted Up—Chairman Seeks Re-election.

On Park street south, some distance beyond the city limits, a splendid new school is being rushed to completion for S. S. No. 2, North Monaghan, school board, building contractors and all concerned, co-operating to the last degree to make possible the official opening next Tuesday evening. The result of their efforts will be a splendid brick structure, of two complete storeys, containing four teaching rooms, teachers' office, several corridors, and, in the basement, playrooms, heating plant, lavatories, store rooms, etc.

When the school board reached a decision in favor of building the new school, Fred Finnie was engaged as general contractor. The wisdom of this choice has been proven. The other contracts have been awarded as follows:

Heating, Archibald and Richmond.

Plumbing, Adamson and Dobbin.

Interior Finish, McDonald Lumber Company.

Frames and Sashes, Peterborough Lumber Company.

Brickwork, Albert Cuff.

Plastering, William Saxby.

From outside, the building is splendid to look pon. It is situated at a considerable distance from the road, faces west and is surrounded by large playgrounds. Within it is complete in every detail. Each teaching room is finished in natural fir, includes a cloakroom, is well lighted, and all the rooms are heated and ventilated by a combination Trane vapor system, to which is attached the large Weil-McLean boiler. The walls are of approved white plastering and the blackboards of asbestos slate. Local labor has been employed throughout.

[illegible], chairman of the school board, expressed himself as being highly pleased with the new school. He is satified with the manner in which the work has been carried on, and is grateful to the other members of the board for their co-operation. They are Messrs. H. H. May and H. Webber. Incidentally Mr. Arnott denied the rumour that he would not stand for the office of trustee. He will be in the field again this year.

The opening of the term on Jan. 3 will see the pupils and teachers in their new quarters. They number over one hundred and the staff will comprise Mrs. H. J. Jackson, principal, and Misses Garbutt and Sanders.

A splendid program is in preparation.

SALVAGE WORK WILL CONTINUE

Unless It Involves Sacrifice of Human Life, Says Admiral.

LEAVES CANCELLED.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—Salvage operations upon the S-4 will be continued as long as it is possible to do so unless the work would "involve the sacrifice of human life to continue," Admiral Hughes, commander-in-chief of the United States Fleet, told Admiral Andrews, Commandant of the First Naval District, in a telephone conversation today.

"I do not know where anyone got the idea we were going to give up the salvage of the S-4," Admiral Hughes was quoted as saying. All Christmas leaves and holidays for officers and men at the navy yard and aboard the ships have been called off."

Air Now Pure

PROVINCETOWN, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—The air within the torpedo room of the sunken submarine S-4, where six men perished because they lacked oxygen, now is pure and sweet, tests conducted on the minesweeper Falcon, flagship of the rescue fleet, indicated today. Although Admiral Brumby, in charge of salvage operations, announced yesterday that there was no longer doubt that the men on board the wreck were dead, the forcing of air into the torpedo room was continued. Early today a test of the air returned through the air hose to the Falcon showed that it contained only a small portion of carbon dioxide.

Youthful Kidnapper Arrested Following Spectacular Pursuit

Offers No Resistance When Captured By Two Pendleton Officers on Old Oregon Trail—Confesses Identity, But Declines to Take Responsibility For Murder of Banker's Daughter.

NAMES LOS ANGELES MAN AS ACCOMPLICE IN BRUTAL SLAYING OF MARIAN PARKER

California Police Launch New Search as Injection of Andrew Cramer's Name Adds More Mystery to Crime—Herman Cline Almost Collapses as Tension of Man Hunt is Ended.

PENDLETON, Ore., December 23 (Canadian Press). — Climaxing the most spectacular man hunt the West has known in years, William Edward Hickman, youthful fugitive wanted as kidnapper and slayer of Marian Parker, 12-year-old Los Angeles girl, was captured at Echo, Ore., near here, yesterday afternoon.

Hickman, trailed closely by reports of his progress from Seattle, where on Wednesday night he had spent one of the $20.00 bills he took from the girl's father in Los Angeles, was found by two Pendleton officers on the old Oregon Trail as he sped along in a large car which had been stolen at Los Angeles.

He was taken without resistance. A sawed-off shotgun was found in the car beside him. Hickman laughed hysterically when he was told at the Pendleton City Jail that he was the murderer of Marian Parker. He at first refused to admit his own name, but later broke down and confessed his identity. He said the girl was killed last Friday, but in his first statement declined to take responsibility for the slaying. He said it was the work of a "fiend." The girl, he said, was strangled with a wire. Later he confessed that he wanted the money obtained in the kidnapping to go to college.

A great crowd gathered about the city jail when news of Hickman's capture spread through the city. There was no indication of vengeful spirit, however.

Reports telling of Hickman's flight east on the Columbia River Highway from Portland, where Hickman was seen early yesterday, apprised officers here of his approach to this section.

Chief of Police Tom Gurdane, of Pendleton, and State Officer Buck Lieuallen saw a big green car approaching as they stopped at a curve on the highway to light their pipes. They observed that the license plates on the car were switched, and that the car corresponded to the description of the one used by the fugitive.

Gave Chase.

They hailed the driver. The car did not stop, and the officers gave chase, drawing up alongside, covering the driver and ordering him to stop. Hickman was immediately brought to Pendleton, where a search revealed bills of the denomination he received from Perry Parker, father of the girl, last Saturday night just before the dismembered body of the child was placed on the curb.

Officers roped off an area around the city jail. The crowd, though milling about to get a glimpse of the prisoner, was orderly and restrained.

Names Accomplice.

Subjected to a grilling at police headquarters, Hickman broke down and sobbed out the name of Andrew Cramar, of Los Angeles, as an accomplice in the crime. Hickman said he himself had no part in the killing and did not know the girl had been slain until her body was delivered to him in his Bellevue apartment last Saturday night.

Injection of Cramer's name added new mystery to the case, and police in Los Angeles, approved of Hickman's statement, launched a new search.

Little Marian was kidnapped last Thursday and Hickman related that he took her to a show on Thursday night. After that, he said, he turned her over to Cramer and did not know where she had been kept until the body was returned to his apartment on Saturday night.

In giving his version of the crime, young Hickman remained calm until

PRAYER BOOK MEASURE AGAIN TO BE SUBMITTED FOR APPROVAL

Conclusion Reached Following Conferences Between Archbishops of Canterbury and York.

MAKE APPEAL.

With Only Such Changes As May Tend To Remove Misapprehensions.

LONDON, December 23 (Canadian Press Cable).—Following conferences of the House of Bishops of the Church of England at Lambeth Palace in the last two days, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York last night issued a joint statement announcing that the revised prayer book would again be submitted to Parliament for approval after certain changes have been made which will "tend to remove misapprehension."

It is suggested in the statement that the rejection of the prayer book by the House of Commons on December 15 last, by a vote of 247 to 205, was due to misunderstandings.

The statement declares that while the situation for the Church is grave, there is no cause for panic, and an appeal is made that the voices of controversy be stilled during the Christmas season.

The statement follows:

"The rejection of the prayer book measure has brought about a position of difficulty and anxiety. While exaggeration must be avoided and there certainly is no ground for panic it cannot be denied that the crisis is grave For two days the diocesan bishops have met at Lambeth, and we can record with thankfulness that the unity which has marked the long deliberations of the last two years was maintained.

"It is impossible within a few days of the vote in the House of Commons to take a just measure of its significance and determine the obligations it imposes on the Church. We therefore found it necessary to adjourn until January 11 for further time for thought and prayer.

Present Proposals.

"When the Church Assembly and convocations meet in February, we hope to present considered proposals. Some word, however, of coun-

INTERESTING EARLY EXPLORATION.

One of the most interesting of the early explorations across Northern Canada was that made in 1711-2 by Samuel Hearne, who travelled from Fort Churchill on Hudson Bay to the Arctic ocean at the mouth of the Coppermine river, and returned by a more southerly route through Great Slave lake.

Christmas Tree For Horses At Montreal

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 23. —Canadian Press. — A brilliantly lighted Christmas tree occupies the centre of Phillips Square, centre of Montreal's busy shopping district—but the tree is not for the delight of the children.

Grouped about its base and in charge of an attendant are bales of hay and bags of oats. The tree is for horses whose owners are unable to provide them with good food, and it has been provided by a society interested in the welfare of animals.

EXECUTIONS CONTINUE IN CANTON CITY

Hankow and Other Cities Are Taking Summary Action.

GRAVE SITUATION.

Chinese Tea Merchants Object To Methods Applied By Government.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 23.—Terror continue to prevail at Canton where in the past ten days the worst destruction of lives and property in the whole Chinese revolt has occurred. It is now possible to check up fairly reliably the figures on the Red revolt, statistics compiled by foreign observers in the devastated area showing that 2,100 were killed and hundreds of others were wounded in the recapture of Canton.

More than one thousand dwellings were burned and countless shops were looted of their entire stocks. The city's streets are strewn with dead bodies lying among the smouldering ruins, while firing squads mow down as many as a hundred suspected Communists daily.

However, the troops are leaving little undone so far as methods designed to put fear into the hearts of the radicals are concerned. Japanese reports are bringing a strange tale of the ends to which the Chinese soldiers have gone in their effort to stamp out the Red elements. It has been verified that the Soviet Vice Consul was killed and the Consul General was arrested while asking mercy for his wife and children. The situation continues chaotic. The lawless elements are rampant, many of the rougher coolie classes taking advantage of the disorder to rob. It is believed that many of the slain were of these rather than of the better citizens, although many cases when the latter were tortured have been reported.

In the meantime the Nanking Government faces a problem resulting from the ousting of all Soviet officials. The Chinese tea merchants are strenuously objecting to the brusk methods followed.

The tea merchants fear that they will be the hardest hit, as they Soviet's total trade is estimated at $50,000,000 (Mexican) annually, most of which is in tea. I understand that foreign concerns, essentially British, are seeking to obtain this lost trade.

Nanking, in the meantime, is permitting Soviet merchants to remain past the period of grace to wind up their affairs. The Dalbank is also continuing indefinitely during a period of liquidation. The first group of Soviet officals and ther families left today for Japan. Those from Hankow have arrived here and are staying at the Consulate. A large party, including Koslovsky, is planning to sail Wednesday, virtually ending Soviet official representation in Nationalist territories, other than those merchants and bankers who are forced to remain temporarily.

Incidentally there are rumors afloat here to the effect that a foreign power is behind the sudden violent anti-Red wave which is sweeping South China, as observers, official and otherwise, seek submerged motives behind the drastic action. There is a possibility that Nanking has been offered a further lenient consideration of the so-called unequal treaties as well as other forms of support in exchange for China's firm anti-Soviet stand.

CANADA'S GOLD PRODUCTION

Gold in some form is found in every province of Canada except Prince Edward Island, and in point of value it is, next to coal, the most important mineral product of the Dominion. Present indications, indeed, point to the possibility of the value of Canada's gold output surpassing even that of her coal within the next few years. Formerly British Columbia and Yukon Territory were the most productive regions, but new discoveries and recent developments have now put Ontario in the lead. Recent developments in Quebec indicate that this province may also become an important producer.

Gallop Case May Go to Jury To-Day

QUEBEC, Que., Dec. 23.—Canadian Press. — The case of Mrs. Amy Sprague Gallop, charged with the murder of her husband, Abraham Gallop, who died at Roberval in 1925, may go to the jury to-day. Mrs. Gallop is being tried for the fourth time on the charge.

Counsel for the Crown began their addresses to the jury yesterday. It is thought the remaining addresses and Chief Justice Sir Francois Lemieux's summing up will be concluded in time for the jury to retire to-day. It is hoped the case will be cleared up in time to let the jury disperse to their homes for Christmas eve.

Another Seriously Injured in Terrible Tragedy at Druryea, Pa.

THREE GIRLS VICTIMS.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.) — Four persons were burned to death and another was seriously injured in a fire that destroyed the home of Martin Krooks in Duryea, near here, late yesterday.

The victims were Anna, 15; Bertha, 16, and Pauline Krooks, 3 years old, and a boarder in the Krooks home, whose name could not be learned. Alex Fishcock, 50, another boarder, was critically burned.

LIVINGSTONE SUES CHICAGO N.H.L. CLUB

Says Officers Conspired To Destroy His Franchise and Get His Players.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—Edward J. Livingstone, pioneer hockey promoter, today filed a suit against Major Frederick McLaughlin, president, and two other officers of the Chicago Black Hawks professional hockey team for seven hundred thousand dollars damages.

The suit, entered in the United States district court, alleges McLaughlin, William Foster, John Keocha, and officers of the American Hockey Association and officers of the National Hockey League conspired to destroy the franchise Livingston held in the association, to obtain players, and to oust him from possession of the Coliseum, where Chicago's hockey games are played.

Livingston declared in his petition that he managed the Chicago "Cardinals" professional team, until his players were induced to break their contracts and join the "Black Hawks."

Closes Doors After Forty Years' Service

LONDON, December 23. Canadian Press Cable. — The Grand Hotel, which is situated on Trafalgar Square, closed its doors yesterday after forty years of honorable service. At least one prominent Canadian stayed there every summer during the past thirty years. The hotel was at its inception, considered the last word in such buildings, and the Lord Mayor of London attended the official opening. The present proprietors own a big chain of hotels and they admit that the Grand Hotel nowadays is behind the times. The staff will be transferred to other hotels and the hotel itself will be converted into office suites.

DOMINION VISITOR TO ADDRESS MANY MEETINGS DURING STAY

Rt. Hon. L. C. Amery To Make Tour Across Canada in January.

ARRIVE AT VANCOUVER.

Expected Will Make Trip To Whitby, Ont., Birthplace of Mrs. Amery.

OTTAWA, Ont., December 23. — Canadian Press. — The Canadian visit of the Rt. Hon. L. C. Amery, Secretary of State for the Dominions, will extend from January 6, when he arrives at Victoria, B.C., to Feb. 3, when he sails from Saint John, N.B.

During his tour of the Dominion, Mr. Amery will address fourteen or fifteen meetings, including Canadian and Empire Club luncheons, Boards of Trade and Alpine Club dinners.

The Minister will be accompanied by Mrs. Amery, who is a Canadian. She was born at Whitby, Ont., a sister of Rt. Hon. Sir Hamar Greenwood, and it is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Amery will break their visit in Toronto by a brief motor trip to Whitby 30 miles along the Lake shore Mr. Amery is also accompanied by G G Whiskard, assistant secretary of the Dominions office. G. Hulley, and Captain V. Brass, Conservative member of the British House of Commons, for the Clitheroe Division of Lancashire.

The actual dates of Mr. Amery's speaking engagements are not final though it is known that he will address the Victoria Canadian Club on the day after his arrival. He will spend two days in Vancouver where a board of trade dinner has been arranged. The party will also spend two days in Banff. These will probably be active days for Mr. Amery, who is an active ski-er, and he has already referred publicly to his keen anticipation of Canadian winter sports. A luncheon has been arranged in Edmonton and another in Calgary by the Canadian club. The Regina Club has arranged for a luncheon about January 16 and the Alpine Club of Winnipeg expects to entertain Mr. Amery on January 19.

Three outstanding engagements have been arranged in Toronto between Jan. 19 and 22. There will be an Empire Club luncheon, a Board of Trade dinner and a tea for Mrs. Amery given by the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire. There will also be a Canadian Club luncheon.

The Minister and his party will spend from January 22 to 26 in Ottawa. They will be the guests of Government House and will no doubt be present at the state dinner on the 25th, the night before the opening of Parliament. In Montreal the Canadian Club and the Chamber of Commerce will both claim Mr. Amery for speeches. Stops will be made in Quebec, Halifax and Saint John, before sailing on Feb. 3rd.

Lottery Winner Gives Money to Poor

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Exchange telegraph despatch from Madrid says that the winner of the first prize in the Spanish Christmas lottery, valued at fifteen million pesetas, (approximately $2,400,000) distributed the money among the poor families in the thickly populated quarters of Madrid. The winners of the Spanish lottery which is held annually were announced yesterday.

CLOTH BURGLAR GETS STIFF TERM

Found Guilty on Charge of Entering Montreal Factories Last Summer.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— Silver Martin, alias Martin Silver, alias Max Zuckerman, ticket-of-leave man and hold-up suspect, was sent to the penitentiary for seven years by Mr. Justice Wilson in the court of King's Bench yesterday, for breaking into two factories and stealing cloth worth about $5,000 last summer.

Martin was brought here from Toronto with two companions to face a back hold-up charge here last August. The three were acquitted but again arrested and ordered to face trial at the February assizes on another hold-up charge.

While awaiting trial on the second hold-up charge Martin was charged with the cloth burglaries. Yesterday he pleaded guilty to the latter crimes and his sentence followed.

Martin was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for a robbery on April 1, 1924. Last March he was released on ticket-of-leave. He reported regularly for some time to the police and then disappeared. Martin was later arrested in Toronto.

CANADIAN PRESS REGRETS ERROR

General Manager Makes Statement About R. B. Bennett Report.

WAS NOT INCOGNITO.

TORONTO, Dec. 23. Canadian Press. — J. F. B. Livesay, general manager of the Canadian Press, made the following statement here last night:

"On Sunday night last, the Canadian Press carried in its news service a despatch from Halifax to the effect that R. B. Bennett, Conservative leader, had arrived incognito on the S. S. Ausonia, being listed under the name of R. B. Parker, and on landing took a special train for Calgary. It now appears that the above statements were incorrect for although Mr. Bennett sailed hurriedly his name appeared on the ship's passenger list, while R. P. Parker was a real person who went on to New York. Mr. Bennett taking the ordinary boat special to Montreal.

"The Canadian Press very much regrets it was made the unwitting agent for the circulation of these incorrect statements throughout Canada."

PROVINCIAL POLICE TO HAVE NEW POSTS

Officers Will Shortly Be Stationed at Bancroft and Picton.

TORONTO, Dec. 23. — Establishment of four new Provincial Police posts was announced yesterday by General Victor Williams, Commissioner of the Ontario force. These will be located at Wallaceburg, in Kent County; Picton, Prince Edward County; Lancaster, Grenville County, and Bancroft, Hastings County. Authorization for same has already gone forward, and officers will be appointed to them within the next few days.

These appointments are but the forerunner, it is understood, of a rather general rearrangement of the force. General Williams and Attorney-General Price are working at present toward making the system as effective and far-reaching as it is possible to make it, and it would not be surprising if further posts were established and a number of transfers of officers made before the New Year.

WOMAN DEAD; FAMILY SICK

Some Form of Poisoning Blamed For Illness, Though Heart Failure Caused Death.

ILL FOR SOME HOURS.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 23.—According to Dr. George Hassard, coroner, an autopsy performed last night on Mrs. May Low, found dead in bed in her home at 745 Pelissier Street, early yesterday afternoon, with her husband, James Low, and her son, Alex., aged 6, critically ill with what was thought to be poisoning of some sort, revealed the fact that the woman died of heart failure.

Both Low and his son are expected to recover, it was said last night at Grace Hospital, where they were taken after the stricken family was found at 1.30 yesterday afternoon. However, they are still too ill to talk.

The cause of Mrs. Low's death was definitely established, the coroner said, by Dr. St. John Douglas Wigle, who reported after he had performed an autopsy on the dead woman that her death was due to heart failure, whatever may have been the cause of the illness of Low and the little boy.

First Thought Poisoned.

BETHEL FAMILY RECEIVES CHAIRS

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Patterson Are Moving Into Peterborough.

BETHEL, Dec. 23. — A very pleasing surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Patterson when about 95 of their friends and neighbors from the surrounding neighborhood gathered at their home to say farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Patterson and family on the eve of their departure for their home in Peterborough.

After a couple of hours spent in friendly conversation and amusements, Mr. and Mrs. Patterson were called to the floor, and the following address was read by Miss Helen Armstrong:

"Mr. and Mrs. Patterson and family: We, your friends and acquaintances desire to take this opportunity of expressing to you in some tangible way the love and respect in which you are held and our appreciation of the valuable services which you have given during your whole lifetime.

"We wish you to know that we do deeply regret your removal from our midst, but we do realize that our loss will be the gain of another community. From early childhood you have always taken a deep interest in the church, Sunday school, and all other worthy institutions. We know that you have given of your [illegible] to every good cause, and your Christian influence has inspired many. Therefore we ask you to accept this token of our appreciation, not for its value, but rather as a remembrance of the host of friends you have made and the pleasant connections you have formed in this community.

"We trust you may long be spared to continue to give the same splendid service to a new circle of friends.

"We wish you Godspeed in your new sphere of work and hope that health and prosperity shall be your lot for the future."

Mr. Pallin and Mr. A. Evans presented Mr. and Mrs. Patterson with two beautiful upholstered wicker chairs. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson replied in a few well chosen words, thanking their friends after which the Rev. Mr. Archibald of Keene, gave a short address. Refreshments were served by the ladies, and a general good time was enjoyed by every one.

ORITUARY

MISS MARGARET ARMOUR.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 23.—The death of Miss Margaret Armour, which occurred on Sunday, December 18, in her eighty-second year, removes a highly-respected resident whose family has been intimately connected with Cavan history over a long period of years.

Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Armour, the family homestead being on the Ninth Line, Cavan. She was also a granddaughter of the Rev. Samuel Armour, the first rector of Cavan parish who was the spiritual guide of the people for over twenty years, from 1833 to 1853. A beautiful memorial window to the Rev. Mr. Armour and his wife, Margaret Douglas, who died in 1873, has been placed by the family at the end of the chancel of Saint John's church, North Cavan; it illustrates "The Good Shepherd" and adds greatly to the beauty of the interior of the church.

After the rector's decease the late Mrs. Armour removed with her family to Bowmanville and here Miss Armour grew up and made her home for several years, removing from there to Millbrook in 1914, purchasing the home on Anne street where she lived until her death.

Retaining a warm affection for Saint John's church because of the close connection of her family therewith, deceased continued to worship with this congregation after coming again into this vicinity to live.

Cheerful in disposition, interested in church and community welfare, Miss Armour's decease leaves a vacancy that is keenly felt by a large circle of friends. She was the sole surviving member of her family, one sister, Mrs. Warren, of Toronto, and two brothers, William and Samuel, having predeceased her; another sister died in early life.

A niece, Miss Daisy Armour, has for a number of years lived with her aunt, and her two sisters, Miss Amy, of Hartford, Conn., and Mrs. Westrop, of Calgary, Alberta, are the more immediate surviving relatives.

The funeral took place from her late residence on Tuesday at 2 p.m., Rev. P. C. Howard having charge of the brief service at the house, and afterward at Saint John's church, Ida. The rector, Rev. Canon Allen, was too ill to attend. The favorite hymns of the late Miss Armour, "Rock of Ages", and "Nearer My God to Thee", were sung.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. G. Fowler, L. H. Winslow, Beatty Fee, A. A. Needler, S. E. Eakins, and Rupert Winslow. Interment was in the cemetery in which Saint John's church stands.

Among the friends from out of town who attended the funeral were E. A. Peck, M.P., and the Misses Peck, and Mr. Curtiss, of Peterboro.

180 BRITISH ENTER STATES AFTER JAN. 1

Recent Ruling Permits Entry of That Many at Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—The latest ruling of the United States on immigration laws, governing the admittance of British born immigrants to this country will allow the entrance of 180 additional British born immigrants at this port after January 1, G. C. Fuller, acting United States Consul at Niagara Falls, Ontario, said today. The Consul's staff is busy sending notices to those on the waiting list. They will be asked to present themselves for examination and entry papers will be presented to the first 180. About 250 are on the list.

YOUTHFUL KIDNAPPER

he mentioned the name of the slain girl. "Marian and I were good friends," he sobbed, "and we had a good time when we were together, and I really liked her. I am sorry that she was killed."

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press.)— Extradition papers whereby Governor Young will seek the return of William Edward Hickman, Los Angeles slayer, from Oregon, were being rushed here yesterday afternoon by airplane by Los Angeles officers.

A request was also telephoned to the office of Clarence S. Merrill, superintendent of the bureau of criminal identification and investigation, asking him to remain in his office until the plane arrived, to verify certain finger prints and records in connection with the case.

Almost Collapses.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press.)— Herman Cline, chief of police detectives, told by the Associated Press that the alleged slayer of Marian Parker had been captured, almost collapsed as the tension of a man-hunt probably unparallelled in the history of the west, was relieved.

Cline trembled with emotion as he got the details of how William E. Hickman, accused kidnapper of the school girl, had been caught at Echo, Ore, and admitted his identity.

"Well, well——" was all he could say.

To others who called to give the information to him, Cline said:

"Thanks, I already have it from the Associated Press."

As the news of the capture passed out from press rooms, an air of celebration was apparent in the city. Thousands upon thousands of Christmas shoppers rushed newsboys on the corners for extra editions.

Makes Confession

PENDLETON, Oregon, Dec. 23. — The following confession of William Edward Hickman was made to Parker Branin, city editor of The Pendleton East Oregonian, yesterday afternoon:

Q.—"Where is your partner?"

A.—"He said for me to meet him at the Harris Hotel in San Francisco, Sunday. But he was not there; so Tuesday morning I saw they had my name, so I got real scared then and I planned to get away myself. I thought I would get away north because they were searching in San Francisco, as I read about it in the papers and there was nothing I could do. After I saw him in Los Angeles, according to our appointment, I said: 'Where is the girl?' and he just kind of grinned and I said: 'Where—'

Meeting With Father

"When the father met me by appointment, he spoke and said: 'I want to see my daughter,' and I said: 'She is here.' And I think I said she was asleep and I told him to give me the money, I have had trouble with her, and then he gave me the money right there and I told him I would drive up there a little way and let her out, and I drove out a little way."

Q.—"Who was it cut her that way?"

A.—"This fellow named Andrew Cramer. His part was—I ran away from home, and I was in California and had been working in the First National Bank and forged cheques and got paroled and went back to Kansas City with my mother and I wanted to go back again, so I then—so I got this coupe in Kansas City, which belonged to—Dr. Mantz, I think, was the doctor, and I got out here.

Went to Chicago

"At first I didn't come direct out here; I went to Chicago before I came here and I rented that apartment in Los Angeles at the Bellevue Arms, I think it was, on Nov. 23 or just before Thanksgiving, and on Thanksgiving I went down to San Diego and when I came back the next day I picked this man and a lady up. He said his name was Andrew Cramer and the lady's name was June Dunning, I think it was. I was by myself. I didn't know any one here. I was making my living by hold-ups, and I thought if I could get acquainted with some older man we could work to better advantage and it wouldn't be as much risk, as we probably could get away with hold-ups easier.

"We just held up drug stores and places like that. That is the reason I had all these guns. That .30-30 belong to Andrew. He left there, so it didn't make any difference. We worked several places.

"He wanted me to get some chloroform for him and ether. I didn't ask him what for. So in one of our hold ups I would get out and he would drive the car. He would sit in the car and I would get the money and whatever we wanted and go out and then he would drive away.

"I really had not intended being a crook because you will find out soon enough you will get caught, but because I wanted to go back to Kansas City and go to work and save enough money to go to college — Park College near Kansas City. And I thought if I could get enough money to go to the school and by working some time during the day, an hour or two every day, in that way I could pay the tuition. I thought if I could save a thousand dollars I thought I could start next September, and no matter how I got it I would go straight from then on.

Remembered Marian.

"And this man asked me what I thought of kidnapping some one, and I thought I would not mind doing it. I happened to remember that Mr. Parker had a daughter, because in working at the bank this girl came with him. I did not know just what date it was. I was there in the bank several days, and I noticed especially and I remember it was his daughter because she was his favorite daughter and he would take her down and buy her lunch, and she was around the bank like she was a big man.

"I didn't think of her, however, before I thought of Mr. Hayes, who is chief teller of the First National Bank, and I think he has a very young child, and I thought of that at first, and thought we would be able to get the money from him much easier, easier because he is a chief officer of the bank, and handles hundreds of thousands of dollars, and while I was in the bank I saw all the money shipments come in and used to go around the vaults and any place in the bank and knew practically every one in the bank.

"Meant No Harm."

"Well, in order to get this little girl, this younger girl, I was afraid it would be harder to handle her. She was a baby and would probably cry. I thought either Mr. Hayes or Mr. Parker, either one would have sense enough to consider $1,500 an easy settlement in consideration of their own daughters. I meant no harm to either one, but I thought it would be easier to handle the older girl than a little child. So this man and I both went out and he wanted to see her and get a look at her and I looked in the telephone book to see where Mr. Parker lived. I went to a house to see her when she came from school and I saw her riding on a bicycle, but I didn't know she had a twin sister until Thursday morning.

"I parked by the house early so I could see her leave for school and could see what school she went to, and it popped into my mind that if I went for her at the school I could get her that way. There was no plan. But I had been thinking about it and it popped in my mind when I saw the girl that morning. I did not plan out the results ahead of that until I saw her that morning and that afternoon— you have read in the paper now how it all happened. I went and told the teacher that her father had been in an accident, and this other girl came over to see which one of the girls I wanted, and I said I wanted the younger one. She looked younger, but it turned out they were twins, but she did not question me in any way.

Episode at School.

"They asked what was her first name, so I told them. I didnt think I remembered, but I told them I worked at the bank. I didn't give my real name—I forget the name I did give them—and they asked me which girl I wanted and I said the younger one, and she said, "Marian," and I said, 'Yes, that is the one the father was calling for,' and one of the other teachers went and got the girl, and I saw that it was the same girl I had seen in front of the house, and I called at the school house that morning, and I think they got on a street car and went to the Mount Vernon school and when I went up in the car I learned that the Franklin school is right near a fence, and after we came out of the schoolhouse we got into the car and we left and she started asking questions about what had happened and how it appened and who hit him and I made answers to all of her questions.

"Kind of Liked Her."

"I answered evrything and she got in and we then started back, and was just having a general conversation and talking about picture shows and merchants and school, and anything that came up in conversation generally with people, and we got well and closely acquainted, and I really kind of liked her. I could not look her in the face when I told her she was kidnapped, as though nothing had happened. I told her nothing had really happened to her father. She didn't worry or scream or anything.

"She took it calm as could be, and I told her she could realize if I got caught what I would have to suffer, and I would have to tie her nose and tie her mouth so she couldn't make any noise, and she said: "Please don't do it. I will promise not to make any noise.' So I didn't tie her, and we drove around all that afternoon, and went to a show that night — even went to a picture show — the Rialto Theatre in Alhambra, and she didn't do or say anything much, and I really didn't intend to do her any harm, and here is where this other man's part of it played in. He was to have the hiding place for the girl and to keep her quiet, and I was supposed to get the money.

Wanted $300.

"He only wanted two or three hundred dollars out of the fifteen hundred. He said he didn't want much money, anyway. He seemed to like the idea of kidnapping the girl and holding her rather than getting the money.

"Thursday, that night after the show, I met this man and he took the girl in charge. He took her and the next day I saw her; that was Friday evening. Well, I kept writing all these letters and had her write a letter to her father, making it seem like she was being treated bad, and, I don't know, she didn't seem to like this man and didn't want to go with him and wanted to stay with me instead, but I couldn't do a thing like that. We had to go through with the plans."

With reference to the attempts he had made to collect the money while the girl was still alive, Hickman described how he had observed police surveillance of her father, and had been warned thereby.

Did Not Want to Die.

"And if there had not been any detectives he would have gotten her back. And if this fellow had not killed her it would have come out all right as we had planned, because I am sure she didn't want to die, because when she was with me she said:

"'I wonder what the school kids will say when I go back to school? They will want to know what I did and everything.'

"I am terribly sorry she was killed myself, because I sure liked her." (Hickman wept here).

"Give us the description of this fellow that you say killed her."

Hickman—He was about 5 feet 8 or 9 inches tall, and had almost back hair and I don't remember the color of his eyes. The times I saw him when I picked him up he had on a kind of gray overcoat, and he just had the one suit—a sort of tan suit, or brown. He had a kind of rough face.

Q.—How old was here?

"He looked to be not over 28 . . . but he looked older, because I think he had been leading a kind of hard life."

Q.—Where was he staying?

"He would not tell me that, because he was to have his part in the plans and I my part. Crooks sometimes will go back on each other if any one knew what the other one did, and it makes everything safer and less dangerous than if we knew where each other stayed, and I don't know where he kept himself."

Q.—He didn't stay in the same apartment with you,

"No. I was in that apartment all by myself."

Suitcase to Apartment

"When was the last time you saw him?"

"The last time I saw him was when he brought the suitcase up to the apartment and he told me when I got the money—if I got the money—to go to San Francisco as soon as I could safely get away, as the policemen were awfully suspicious here anyway.

"Well, one thing that did happen Sunday morning I was there was about 200 detectives came up to the apartment and looked over the apartment and started searching it. One of the fellows had the name of the apartment written on a paper and they searched every place.

"When they came to my apartment, it is interesting the way I was singing and playing the phonograph. The detectives came in and looked around and did not express any suspicion of me at all.

"I went out in the hallway and talked to seven or eight of the best detectives in Los Angeles. I asked them if there was anything I could do and of course there was nothing I could do, and they searched the apartment."

"He had the girl or part of the effects of the girl when he came up to the apartment?"

"Yes, sir. I guess he threw the other parts away where they said they were thrown away."

"He opened the suitcase so you might see what he had there?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where were you when he did that?"

"That was in the apartment."

"What did you say to him when you saw that?"

"I let a yell of surprise, and wanted to know why he did a thing like that. It was quite a shock to me."

WOMAN DEAD

who were called to the Low home that all three had been affected by some poison which might have come from food eaten at their dinner on Tuesday night. Low lay on the floor when found, and it was evident that he had collapsed there while trying to answer the telephone. The lad was helpless in bed, and the woman had died seven or eight hours previous to the discovery of the family's plight, Dr. Robert M. Powell of Riverside, who was first called to the Low home, said when he found her.

Low must have lain in bed with his wife for some hours not knowing that she was dead, and unable to summon help, or possibly unconscious from the effects of his mysterious illness. The fact that the autopsy shows that Mrs. Low's death was due to a bad heart does not preclude the poison theory, doctors say. She might have been as ill as they, and from the same cause, with her heart unable to stand the extra work imposed on it by some such cause as ptomaine poison.

James Andrews, partner of Low in a downtown newspaper and magazine stand, made the discovery of the family's plight. He had repeatedly called his partner on the phone during the forenoon, he said, after Low had failed to show up at the stand at his usual hours. Thinking possibly that the phone was out of order, he waited until after noon for his partner's arrival, and then sent William Wise, who works about the stand, to try and get Low on the phone.

Managed to Answer Phone.

Low answered this time, Wise reported, but in a way that led him to think that Low was very sick. Andrews determined to make an investigation, and when he arrived at his partner's home he found Low lying stretched out on the floor. Low was too sick to talk or explain, so his partner hurriedly helped him to bed beside his wife, taking no time to examine the woman, and rushed out to call Dr. Powell of Riverside. The latter pronounced the woman dead, and ordered the father and son to the hospital.

The coroner said that an inquest was probable. He intends to interview Low as soon as the stricken man is far enough recovered to talk.

There is no evidence to show that there had been any trouble in the family. Mrs. Low is known to have prepared a big dinner and to have done considerable baking. She had only recently returned from a visit to her former home in Glasgow.

PRAIRIE SWINE HERDS

During the five years between 1921 and 1926 the number of swine on farms in the Prairie Provinces of Canada increased by 547,244 according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The figures for the two census years follow: 1921, 1,055,245; 1926, 1,602,489.

PRAYER BOOK MEASURE, ETC.

sel and assurance must at once be spoken. It was within the right of the House of Commons to reject the revised prayer book measure. On the other hand the more acquiescence in its decision would in our judgment be inconsistent with the responsibilities of the Church as a spiritual society. The bishops fully recognize that there are circumstances in which it would be their duty to take action in accordance with the Church's inherent spiritual authority. But we believe the recent decision of the House of Commons was influenced by certain avoidable misunderstandings as to the character of the proposals before it and we cannot, therefore, take the responsibility of accepting as final the vote of December 15. The House of Bishops has accordingly resolved to reintroduce the measure into the Church Assembly as soon as possible with such changes and such changes only as may tend to remove these misapprehensions and make clearer and more explicit its intentions and limitations.

"In the meantime we make an earnest appeal to the whole Church for that corporate loyalty whereby alone it can meet the dangers and rise to the opportunities of this critical time. With all the authority which belongs to our office we ask that until the deposited book is fully authorized by the Church, no change in the accustomed order of service nor usages that would have been sanctioned by it be introduced."

Make Appeal.

The statement continues: "If any clergy have adopted usages which the book would forbid we ask them to be willing henceforth to discontinue such usages for the sake of the peace and unity of the Church. We make bold to believe that our fellow-churchmen who have conscientiously opposed the measure will not do or say anything now to increase our difficulties.

"At a time when in a special degree the well being of the Church in this land for many generations may depend on things we do or refrain from doing, it is clear that self-restraint and self-sacrifice will be the truest proofs of loyalty and calmness the highest form of courage. During the holy season of Christmas let no hasty words or acts disturb its peace. Let the voices of controversy be hushed, and let us enter the New Year fraught with issues so grave, in a spirit of united prayer.

"In these happenings God must have some purpose for His Church. May we have the humility and faith to discern it and the strength and steadfastness to obey it. We believe these very anxieties have set a new tide moving within the Church of England of eager and generous devotion. Let it raise and bear along with it a new love of loyalty as a thing in itself, true and beautiful, a new care for unity and a new constraint of charity within the fellowship of Christ, a new zeal in His service both at home and abroad. Then this tide may prove a means which God will use to cleanse and defend His Church."

CAMPBELLFORD CLERGYMEN SEND CHRISTMAS MESSAGES

Captain A. B. MacMillan, Salvation Army.

"Jesus, the Deliverer." Christmas comes to us all in different ways: some thoughtfully, some careless, and to others indifferent, but in my mind there are two thoughts about Christmas:

It comes, with gladness.

When we think of the birth of the Saviour, Jesus Christ, the Righteous, in Whom no fault was found, we rejoice not only in the name, "Thou shalt call His name, Jesus," but what this name means to us as individuals. Through this name we can be delivered from the bondage of sin. We can be free creatures, "Whom the Son sets free, is free indeed." With gladness we accept this freedom.

With Sadness.

The birth of the Saviour also reminds us of the purpose of His coming into this world. The sad fact of sin is on every hand. Man has wandered, gone astray, has sinned and because of this fact the world had a Soviour promised. He came and was without sin, but He willingly bore our sins on the Cross that we might again be able to think of Christmas as a happy time. May we see the star and come and worship. May this Christmas be a time not only of giving to each other but in following the example of the wise men, give of our best, give ourselves for service.

May the gladness of Christmas Day stay with you and yours throughout the days to come and may your plans and hopes for the New Year reach a glorious fulfilment.

N. Clarke Wallace, Christ Church.

The Christmas message is still summed up in the message of the angels, "Peace on earth, goodwill to men." The angels carried the message; man's duty is to fulfill it. The way to fulfill it it is for each of us to learn to be men of goodwill. Peace on earth will follow.

Ever and again on this anniversary of the birth of the Saviour rings out the message, "Peace on earth, goodwill to men."

Rev. James Grier
St. Andrew's Church.

"Peace on earth to men of good will!" Thus sang the angels long, long ago. Surely a welcome benediction then, and none the less welcome now.

Will it ever be? Can it ever be? In a world of suspicion and distrust is such a lofty ideal realizable? Even where no formal declaration of war has been made there is so much handling of the spear; where there are no open animosities so much recourse to the sword! We seem so very far removed from real peace and active good will at times that in moments of dejection we doubt its possibility. But the doubt is only momentary We may not yet have gained possession of that Canaan, but we are on the way towards the fair land. Mankind by slow and faltering step, is learning the way to Bethlehem, and with stammering lip is learning to sing the angel's song.

Let me cite but two great fields of endeavor where I find this so. First, I find it true internationally. All nations and races are beginning more clearly to see the futility of war. It settles nothing, but rather creates new problems. It is meant to punish and humiliate the enemy, but it hurts its aggressive author worst of all. The victor and the vanquished suffer irreparably. This growing conviction finds expression in a more pronounced will to peace—a willingness to shape public policy, as far as may be, definitely towards that end, a feeling that no more dreadful calamity could possibly overtake us than another war. It is, therefore, possible for this generation to do much constructive work in this regard, in moulding the thoughts of the next. Thus may the beautiful ideal become a realized part of our active and public life.

Secondly, this is true—I make bold to say it — within the Christian church. Some, I know, will feel horrified at such a suggestion— war within the body of those who claim allegiance to the King of Peace. How else characterize the unholy condition of and spirit within the church? For centuries it has existed and persisted. A most un-Christlike temper has pervaded the ranks of certain branches of His church towards certain other branches, all unmindful that (to use His own figure) all the branches draw their life and sustenance from the same parent Vine. We will work and pray for better things, and seek, within all diversity of gifts, that true spiritual oneness that knows no terminological bounds. For many that goal is more clearly in sight than heretofore, and we believe that His indwelling love and His guiding spirit will yet make possible for all men, not on Christmas day alone, but throughout the whole year, a real spirit of peace and good will.

"Pray for the peace of Jerusalem They shall prosper that love thee."

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

The endeavor to restore a widespread interest in Peterborough in the singing of Christmas carols is a praiseworthy one that should be supported by a large attendance at St. Paul's Church tonight for the community concert that will feature some of the most popular carols ever written.

This concert has been made possible by fine co-operation on the part of many of the city's singers and musicians, and has been arranged in the hope that the carol will be restored to its place in the celebration of Christmas.

The spirit displayed by all those associated with the effort is thoroughly in line with that atmosphere of community goodwill that made its appearance here during the planning and carrying out of the jubilee celebration, and fortunately has been preserved throughout the year.

It should be rewarded by an attendance that will show that the people are genuinely interested.

PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION.

It is interesting to note that in the city of Edmonton where proportional representation has been in force for five years, a substantial majority of the electors voted in favor of abandoning this method of conducting municipal elections.

This scrapping of their pet plan by a municipality that had given it a trial over a number of years will give advocates of proportional representation something to think over.

If there are advantages in this system of electing candidates they do not seem to have impressed themselves very firmly upon the people of the Alberta capital, who have shown little hesitation in throwing proportional representation overboard once they were given an opportunity to express their opinion by means of the ballot.

The Edmonton Journal is right when it declares that no electoral plan can obviate the necessity of an active, well-informed and broad-minded public opinion.

Good government, civic, Provincial or Federal, cannot be obtained through any other medium no matter what system may be chosen to regulate elections.

WHERE ARE THE REST?

A question that calls for some consideration has been raised by The Ottawa Journal in regard to the annual report of the Secretary of State, which has just been issued.

Pointing out that this report shows that Canada gained 16917 citizens by naturalization between March 1, 1926, and March 1, 1927, and that five years' residence is required before naturalization can take place, The Journal assumes that the figures must refer to immigrants who came to Canada in 1922.

What happened then to the remainder of the 23,000 immigrants, exclusive of those from the United States, who settled in this country five years ago? the Ottawa paper pertinently asked.

Incidentally in the same year some 29,000 immigrants came here from the United States, and the report shows that only 2,350 have become Canadians.

Altogether 52,000 people entered Canada as immigrants five years ago, and apparently only 19,267 have become naturalized.

What about the others?

And why should there be such a descrepancy between the number entering and the number who became citizens when the opportunity was open to them?

THE DAYLIGHT SAVING BYLAW.

The citizens of Peterborough will be called upon on New Year's Day to indicate whether or not they have changed their minds in regard to the desirability of daylight saving.

Some opposition was offered to the submission of the bylaw on the ground that the people have twice rejected a similar proposal, but there is not much in that.

Public opinion changes rapidly—witness the fate of the Ontario Temperance Act—and when a question of this nature is involved and an opportunity is offered to sound the views of the people without much expense being occasioned, it is perhaps just as well that the issue should be voted on again.

The period of daylight saving proposed now is shorter than before, and it is possible that this new factor entering into the situation may cause a different verdict.

At any rate a vote on the matter can be taken at small expense and with little inconvenience at the municipal election, and the vote will dispose of the issue, no matter what the result will be, for the present.

Despite the two previous rejections, there has always been an undercurrent in favor of a modified form of daylight saving, and the submission of the bylaw will give an opportunity to decide just how strong that feeling is in the community.

TRYING TO DESCRIBE CANADA.

There is probably not much use in wasting a great deal of energy in denouncing the writer who gave so inaccurate an account of Canada in The New Statesman. The article is useful as showing a danger into which any writer is likely to fall in attempting to describe a country of such vast extent and such varieties both of products and of races as Canada. Each section would require at least one article—say the Maritime Provinces, Quebec, Old Ontario, New Ontario, the Prairies and British Columbia. A book might be written about Quebec, and this could not be done by a flying visit to Quebec City and Montreal, which would convey no idea of the picturesque rural districts, and the distinctive customs and modes of thought of the habitants. Ontario cannot be described as a result of a motor drive through Toronto and a talk with a few of its leading citizens.

And Northern and Northwestern Ontario the visitor is likely to hear a good deal because of the keen interest in the mineral resources of these regions. He may hear less of rural Ontario, because the sensational development of the West in agriculture has a tendency to overshadow the older Provinces. But Ontario is still the leading agricultural Province of Canada, and Quebec is in third place, Saskatchewan coming in between the two. The visitor who follows the transcontinental lines of travel may see nothing of Southern Ontario west of Toronto, and thus miss many thriving industrial centres and one of the finest agricultural districts in the world. Even our native modesty will not prevent us from mentioning the country of which London is the centre, and extending a cordial invitation to any one who wants to make a real survey of Canada to visit this city and the adjacent counties.

But we are not actuated by petty jealousy of other regions. All we ask is that the visitor shall either do the job of observation thoroughly, or tell exactly where he has been and on what his generalizations are founded, what were his limitations as well as his opportunities. Besides sending out special representatives of their own, English journals could give their readers much useful and accurate information by keeping in touch with trustworthy correspondents residing in various parts of Canada—men or women who could supply not only facts and opinions but local color and sentiment. A journal thus equipped would have a check upon careless or sensational articles submitted to the editor.

Canada will probably not suffer a great deal from the wild stories which cause temporary irritation, but English journals owe it to their readers to supply them with accurate and interesting information about this country.—London Advertiser.

DEMOCRACY AFTER THE WAR.

Friends of democracy may be excused if they feel a little despondent over the conditions arising after the war which was to have made the world safe for that principle. Russia has exchanged czarism for a tyranny of another kind. In Italy there is for the time being an eclipse of government by the people, free institutions and free speech. These may be regarded as direct results of the war. In war free speech is forbidden, perhaps necessarily. Swift action takes the place of the slow processes of deliberation. The ruthless class war advocated by Bolshevists is an imitation of international war. The enemy, according to this teaching, is not another nation, but the capitalistic class or the "bourgeoisie." In Italy socialists and liberals are repressed with the same rigor. Chinese nationalists have turned against communism and slaughtered its adherents.

But the outlook for democracy is not so dark as might at first be supposed. There is no general tendency to follow either the Russian or the Italian example. In particular the English-speaking communities have experienced no revolutions or violent reactionary movements. Bolshevism and Fascism have their admirers in the British Empire and in the United States, but there is no serious attempt to apply either method. Representative institutions are maintained as they were before the war.

Perfection need not be claimed for these institutions or for their working. It may be admitted that democracy in the full sense does not exist. The people do not rule as they might if there were a more constant widespread interest in public affairs. Tyranny and injustice have not been banished. There is plenty of food for the critic and the satirist. But the system has the great merit of working, and of leaving family life, industrial life, business life undisturbed, or at least not subject to violent convulsions.

There is some danger, indeed, that conservatism—using that word in its broad, not its party, sense—may be carried too far. Bolshevism is so terrifying a spectacle that proposals for moderate and constitutional reform are looked upon with suspicion. Men of business in the United States are particularly timid in this respect. In Canada there is a class of colonial-minded people who think on the lines of the Tories of a hundred years ago, and are afraid of the awakening national consciousness.

One is reminded that the French revolution drove British Governments into violent repressive measures against political reformers, and that it was not until a considerable time after the Napoleonic wars that the reforming impulse was revived. In this respect history has only faintly repeated itself An alarm as to Bolshevism had no more serious result than the return of a Conservative Government under a leader of moderate views and a temporary eclipse of the Liberal party. When we deplore the excesses of party spirit, we must not forget that the party struggle provides a comparatively harmless channel for feelings which might otherwise find vent in civil war. The more rabid utterances of partisans are discounted. Satirists may say that there is a certain element of unreality, even of humbug, about the conflict, but this is a minor evil compared with the fanaticism which would be satisfied only with violence and bloodshed.

Alison and Carlyle wrote of Democracy as a fire-breathing monster, but experience has shown that its faults are exactly of the opposite kind. It is tolerant, easy-going and forgiving—possibly too forgiving, and sometimes lacking in steadfastness of purpose. Its anger, even when heated white hot, is usually satisfied by defeating a Government at the polls. But we confess to a preference for this good-natured "monster" over both Bolshevism and Fascism.—London Advertiser.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—The demand from foreign buyers for Canadian grain here yesterday was again extremely dull. There was an improved inquiry from local buyers for oats and sales of about twenty cars were made for nearby and January shipment from Fort William. Prices were steady.

The flour market was without any new feature to note, prices being steady under a moderate demand.

An active business was done in all lines of millfeed and prices ruled firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but prices were steady.

The egg market was moderately active and firm. The receipts were 1,394 cases.

Extreme dullness marked the trade in potatoes but as supplies were not large the undertone remained steady, car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.15 per bag of 90 pounds; Prince Edward Island white potatoes at $1.05 per bag of 90 pounds; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.00 per bag in bulk, and New Brunswick white potatoes at 95c per bag in bulk, ex-track.

A firm feeling prevailed in the market for imported beans owing to the fact that supplies coming forward are none too large to meet the daily requirements. Sales of car lots of choice white hand picked were made at $2.65 per bushel, ex-track, and broken lots at $2.75 per bushel, ex-store.

Owing to the continued limited demand for butter and the increased supplies coming forward from New Zealand an easier feeling developed and prices were reduced ¼c per pound. The receipts were 145 packages.

The demand for cheese continued of an indifferent character and business was dull. Prices were unchanged. The receipts were 90 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press). — Notwithstanding general anticipation that the government report on Winter wheat would prove bearish, the actual official figures led yesterday to a fresh decline in prices. Considerable attention was also given to the fact that Argentine wheat exports for the week were nearly double those of the week previous and that export demand yesterday for wheat from North America was slow.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, ½ to ⅞c net lower; corn ¼ to ⅝ down; oats ⅛ to ¼ off, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 10 cents.

Special stress on the part of sellers of wheat yesterday was laid on the circumstance that the latest government information pointed both to much larger 1927 acreage of fall-sown wheat than was the case in 1924 and also to a higher condition for the present crop as compared with last year and with a ten-year average as well. Furthermore, the same comparisons were officially made in regard to rye. Largely as a result, wheat values yesterday were lower from start to finish, with the close at the day's bottom level.

A good deal of comment was heard nevertheless that the wheat trade appeared to be ignoring much wheat territory west and southwest has been unusually dry since Fall seeding was completed, and that snow protection during low temperatures had been lacking. It was likewise pointed out that mills continued to absorb good milling grades of domestic wheat and that no urgent pressure of cash wheat offerings is not anywhere in evidence just now.

Rallies in the corn market failed to hold. About 50,000 bushels of export corn was sold at the Gulf of Mexico yesterday, 2½ cents over the Chicago May delivery, the best basis yet this season. However, corn belt weather yesterday was favorable, and the weakness of wheat values had likewise a bearish effect. Moreover, a leading crop expert was out with a statement that the surplus producing corn states this season show a relatively larger yield than the non-surplus states. Oats followed corn.

Provisions were irregular, but averaged higher at the last on account of a forecast that receipts of hogs today would be of less volume than had been looked for.

NEEDED!

To the Editor:
Dear sir:

Those of us that have witnessed the crowded market for the past few months and saw the great community spirit displayed there, both rural and urban alike, are just wondering if the man that introduced a by-law a few months ago, if it had been continued would have possibly destroyed our market, is ready to see that a by-law is passed to enlarge this market and furnish a properly equipped rest room for women, accommodating rural and urban alike.

Just think of a city of over twenty thousand that is at present displaying the most beautiful appearance having no public accommodation for women. This is something for every citizen to consider as they mark their ballot.

This is my contribution to this present campaign. Thanking you, I remain,

W. H. MERRELL.

A SUGGESTION.

To the Editor:

As I have been a constant reader of the Daily Examiner I have read with great interest the criticism of the Kiwanis Club decorating the streets whereas the money should be spent on the poor.

I wish to express my opinion whereby a method could be planned out with the Kiwanis Club and The Examiner.

Why not have The Examiner play Santa Claus, the little girls and boys could write a letter to Santa Claus addressed in care of The Examiner, suggesting what gifts they would like to have Santa Claus to send them. In turn The Examiner could devote a small space daily and publish the first name only of a number could be added, for example:

101 Alice—Doll.
102 John—Sled.
103 Mary—Doll.
104 Edward—Skates.

In this way an appeal could be made to the public and in turn the public looking over the list could choose whoever they like and bring the gift to The Examiner office to be delivered on Christmas Day.

We shall assume that number 101 receives two dolls, number 103 none, who also wishes a doll and this way toys could be distributed equally among other. Each letter could be investigated to make sure that the real needy are take care of.

The Examiner could do their part in the way of publicity and the Kiwanis Club could do their part on Christmas Day could employ a man dressed as Santa Claus or could do without the Santa Claus. To cause no further expense a truck could be engaged for the day for about $10 to deliver the gifts.

I am sure the Kiwanis Club is not concerned with any religion except the common religion on which all creeds are based, The Golden Rule, and I think this Golden Rule idea of the Kiwanis Club is the only thing needed to bring about the harmony and peace in the city of Peterboro.

I trust this will find space in your paper. I remain,

Yours very truly,
M. E. HUTCHINSON,
Fraserville, Ont.

RE DAYLIGHT SAVING.

To the Editor of The Examiner:
Sir:

The City Council has done their duty in placing this matter again before the people for a vote on election day. It is truly a very unseasonable time to take a vote of this nature but due to our municipal elections coming in winter, it is apparently about the only time that the feeling of the people can be reached.

It requires a great deal of our imagination to rightfully weigh this question these dark mornings. If there is any person in Peterborough who delights to get up in the dark and get breakfast and get away to work, they should be given a prize. Therefore, it is necessary for everybody to forget the winter and these mornings and think of the beautiful daylight mornings in June, July and August. In June to wake up in the morning and hear the birds call nature it is sometimes difficult to turn over for further sleep and such sleep is not as valuable as it would be earlier in the night.

The party most interested is the employees of factories who have to be ready to come into work at seven in the morning. They always have taken a decided stand in favor of Daylight Saving. In many towns where a vote was not successful they have demanded and compelled Daylight Saving by opening the factories earlier, thus changing the noon hour. This, of course, leads to very bitter feelings and destructable more or less to business and it is not advisable for Peterborough to take such a stand.

In April of 1925 a vote was taken among the employees of factory and this also included the employees' wives and families at home as it was felt that they were vitally interested in this subject. It had been stated that the ladies were opposed to Daylight Saving. This vote proved such was not the case. Men in favor, 830; ladies in favor, 720; men against, 387; ladies against, 376. The vote in favor of Daylight Saving in factories at that time was as follows:

Quaker Oats Company	72%
Ontario Marble Company	100
The Examiner Ltd.	88
G. W. Green Co.	90
Raybestos Company	100
Westclox	100
Can. Nashua Paper Co.	70
Canadian Woollens	75
De Laval Company	80
J. J. Turner & Sons	70
Can. Packing Company	75
Peterborough Cereal	75
C.G.E.	67

Due to lack of organization there was no interest taken in vote in three other small factories. This had no effect on the total. Altogether the factories voted 67% in favor of Daylight Saving or a total vote in favor of Daylight Saving 1,550 votes and against 763.

In analysing this vote and also vote taken by public later on in which the Daylight Saving was defeated, the following points will be of interest.

Included in this vote is a large number of ladies, young men and young ladies who have no vote in municipal affairs but surely they are entitled to an expression of opinion of such vital interest to them. This vote only included persons who were eighteen years and over. Unfortunately at that time there was opposition to it by the Retail Merchants Association and the rural communities, possible some of this opposition has ceased as the threats made by rural communities as illustrated by a few letters that were in the paper, take place anyway, that is, the dealing with the large departmental stores through mail order houses and distribution, etc. This was an economic question in which Daylight Saving had nothing whatever to do.

There is a large number of retired people also persons of leisure who can take extended holidays in the summer, while the vast majority of our citizens have only their evenings, weeks ends and holidays at their disposal. It would be a generous act of those who are opposed to Daylight Saving to turn out on election day and vote for it. At this season of good will and do for others spirit, think of the vast good this extra hour of daylight in the evening would accomplish, whether it is spent at home in the garden or sport, or short trips.

Parents and older people should consider our young people. We all regret that so many of our young men and women are leaving the town. Why not encourage them with twilight evenings. Cast your mind back to evenings when you have seen a softball game in the park and think what another hour of this will do for our young people. While they have no vote, they will appreciate you who have a vote, getting out and doing your bit to grant them this boon in the summer time.

Those who think their business interests would be injured, consider is it worth while for a few dollars loss, to incur ill will of such a vast number of young people. In this matter why can't we continue the spirit that was displayed on Confederation Day when all ages, classes, creeds and vocations joined together in Peterborough.

IN PETERBORO CHURCHES.

GEORGE STREET UNITED CHURCH

There was a very large attendance at George Street United Church, at both Sunday morning and Sunday evening services. The music was exceptionally good at the morning service. Mr. Douglas Carlisle rendered a beautiful solo, his fine baritone voice being heard to splendid advantage in "Nazareth" by Gounod. The anthems, "And the Glory" (Handel) and "O Come to My Heart, Lord Jesus" (Ambrose) were excellent. Miss Daisy Murray's rich soprano voice in the solo part was as usual much appreciated.

The Rev. J. E. Todd, pastor, had charge of both services. His subject at the morning service was "Dreams Coming True." His text was taken from the 25th chapter of Isaiah and he referred to the bitter disappointment of the prophet Isaiah, when the children of Israel had the opportunity which they had been praying for so long, of leaving the Babylonian Empire and returning to Jerusalem, how they began to make excuses of the long journey, danger of robbers and wild beasts.

So the greater number refused to return, only a small number of old men, like as an oasis in the desert, who loved their own land, decided to return in spite of all the promises made by Isaiah of safety and the rebuilding of Jerusalem.

Mr. Todd spoke of Isaiah's disappointment and said, "Disappointment always comes in proportion to our expectation.

"Men are the same today, with only this difference. Man has become infected with a dream. Life is a strange thing. In prosperity we are apt to become lax and indifferent but when adversity comes we turn to God and make high resolves for the future. We are confronted today with conditions which are startlingly similar. The same spiritual menace we meet in our everyday world today, such as shutting our eyes, hardening our hearts, wanting our comforts, interests all absorbing.

"Men of this type are not bad men but men who hate to be torn from their moorings and comforts of life just as the Jews hated to leave Babylon. Isaiah's dream that the door opened and so many refused to enter and the door swung to again never to be re-opened is a pessimistic dream. The hardest thing in the world," Mr. Todd said, "is to be an optimist and we find the majority of people are pessimists in their outlook of life, in regard to relations between nations, the political situation in our country and other countries, the economic system—what has taken place through the ages.

"We want right established but are we very anxious for it? Are we willing to work for it and to stand for right? We have men in our pulpits, in our pews and some of our presses, who are sounding the pessimistic note. This is a surrender, a holding up of the white flag, saying we are beaten. It is better to go down fighting, and nourishing our dream, that the Lord will return to Zion, than to throw down the weapons of war."

In conclusion Mr. Todd said: "God help us as a church and a people that we may hand down this dream that has been delivered to us by the stalwarts of the faith."

In the evening G. F. Liddle, organist and choir leader, gave a splendid organ recital of the following numbers:

Christmas (Mendelssohn); My Heart is Ever Faithful" (Bach); Processional (Sethier); Offertory, "Pastorale" (Merker); Postlude, "Sonata" (Rheinberger).

The contralto solo, "Night of Nights" (Van Der Water) by Mrs. G. Liddle, was very beautiful and the anthems, Inflamatus (Rossini), O Come to My Heart Lord Jesus (Ambrose) deserve special mention. Altogether it was a very fine musical offering.

The pastor's subject was "The Good News which Jesus Brought". With the coming of Jesus and the Gospels which were written by his disciples a new note was sounded in religion.

"In old times a man was the victim of circumstances", he said. "Now we boast of our freedom but are we free. What about fashion, environment? Do not these effect every one of us? Has the world mastered us? Are we no longer masters but victims?" asked Mr. Todd.

"No! no! The message comes ringing down through the ages. Be of good cheer. I am with you always. Man was made for God. Only let him work out his best work in your hearts."

KIDNAPPER-SLAYER UNDER ARREST AT PENDLETON, OREGON

William Edward Hickman, alleged slayer of little Marian Parker, was captured by two Pendleton officers, a few miles east of Echo on the Oregon trial last night as a climax to the most spectacular man-hunt that the west has known in years. Above are shown (1) Edward Hickman, 17, who has been identified by Los Angeles police as tht "Fox," kidnapper slayer of Marian Parker. (2) A suitcase found a block from the locality where the dead body of the 12-year-girl was delivered to her father. It contained torn linen, blood-stained newspapers, and thread, thought to have been used in piercing the child's eyelids. SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

CHRISTMAS LESSONS

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for December 25. Christmas Lesson, Luke 2:7-20.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D. Editor of The Congregationalist.

Text: Luke 2-7-20.

And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

* * *

One would despair of making any new or interesting comment upon a Christmas lesson were it not that the Christmas story is itself one that is ever new. The inherent simplicity and charm of the story give it unending interest.

We read it again and again and never grow weary of its human atmosphere, its contrast in the lowliness of the birth of the supreme figure of all history and its fidelity to the deepest springs of all that the heart can feel. The unending reality and interest of motherhood in each succeeding age and in every life imparts to the story a symbolic glory.

But even were the story old and worn threadbare by repetition every sincere and devout soul would find in it new meanings and ever awakening and enriching interests in the thought of its application to the changing scenes and experiences of life both of the individual and of the world.

Book Doesn't Tell All.

Dr. J. D. Jones of Bournemouth, England, some years ago, published a sermon which he called "The Incomplete Biography." Taking the verses in the conclusion of the Gospel of John, which suggest that if all the things that Jesus did were written down the world could not contain the books. Dr. Jones developed the thought that we have in the gospel narratives with all their beauty of the story of the earthly life of Jesus only an incomplete biography.

The full story of that life is told only in the persistence of that life in the thoughts and actions of men. If Christ lives in the souls of believers, their expressions of character and their works of grace are all a part of that great life. When the Christ spirit moves men to larger deeds of mercy and kindness, a new chapter is written in the biography of our Lord.

It is in connection with this thought that we may survey the first Christmas and the coming of Jesus into the world. A birth is a mere beginning which takes on its significance and glory from all that the later life reveals. In a mother's heart there may be the hope and expectancy that filled the heart of Mary.

There may be in her thought of her babe and in her prayer for her babe things that others could not comprehend. According as she may be herself a woman of soul and spirit responsive to the great truths and inspirations of life, she will have in her thought of her babe the dream of some possible path of glory and achievement for her unborn child; but to the Iyes of the world the babe will be very much like any other babe.

Mother's Prayer.

Should we not pray for something of the mother's spirit and the mother's prayer in our attitude toward children and in all our relationship to our fellow men—an attitude of that faith and hope and expectancy that ever looks for the best and helps to bring it into actuality?

Would that we had the vision of wise men to understand that even a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger may have in him the inherent power and strength of kings and prophets! Would that we might have responsive souls like the shepherds of Bethlehem's plains to hear in the humdrum duties of life the angelic voices that speak if we will but listen!

A Christian Christmas.

There is one other thought that is worth emphasizing—the glory of Christmas does not always come to us; it is something that we have to seek. The wise men and the shepherds journeyed to Bethlehem. Many revelations of truth and beauty are denied to men because they will not follow the beckoning star or the voices of inspiration.

If we would have a Christian Christmas, it must be through a willingness to follow the gleam. A religion that leads nowhwere is not Christian either in spirit or fact. There are places as lowly as ancient Bethlehem where we shall find a glory akin to that which filled the manger stall if we shall go forth in the Christmas spirit to find these places of revelation even as the wise men journeyed of old.

It may be that like them we shall have to take our gifts with us, meeting the need of others in the spirit of Christian love and brotherhood. But if our hearts are quickened with the impulse, "let us now go even unto Bethlehem," we shall find Bethlehem, even in a modern day and so far across the sea from the Bethlehem of our story.

NIGHT WINDS IN MOUNTAINS.

A meteorological phenomenon found among the high mountains and noticeable in many places in Waterton Lakes national park in southern Alberta is the night wind from the mountain tops. During the the heat of the day the warm air rises from the valleys but at sunset a current of air from the peaks rushes downwards, bringing with it the scents of pines and larches and it may be of the flowers of some alpine meadow a couple of thousand feet above.

F. G. STINSON RE-APPOINTED

Will Again Issue Automobile Licenses and Operators' Permits.

WORK RECOMMENDED.

A letter has been received by Frank G. Stinson, Motor License and Permit Issuer for Peterborough and District during the past three years, announcing his re-appointment:

"I am in receipt of your letter of the 14th inst., and note that the un-used supply of markers, etc., have been shipped to the Department. Also that a final summary with reference to your bank account has been forwarded.

"According to the Order-in-council recently passed you have been re-appointed Issuer of Motor Vehicle Permits for the year 1928. Official notice of this appointment and instructions will be forwarded to you in the course of a day or two.

"I am taking this opportunity of advising that the work of issuing from our Peterborough office has been entirely satisfactory to the Department for the past year, and in view of this your re-appointment was recommended."

The total of passenger car, truck, and motor cycle licenses isued in the past year was 5,724, and 5,603 operators' permits, with a resultant handling of cash in the amount of roughty $70,000.00. The fact that this volume of business has been handled in a manner satisfactory to the government should reflect great credit upon the license issuing organization in Peterborough.

This work was very strenuous during the rush season, mostly done under pressure, and there is a very great opportunity for errors to creep in.

Mr. Stinson points out that every effort will be made during the coming season to facilitate the issuance of licenses, and that extra help will be put on when needed. In conversation with Mr. Bickell, the Registrar of Motor ehicles, Mr. Stinson was able to obtain the information that 1928 markers will not be issued in Peterborough until the first of the year or shortly afterwards. Markers are not at present being issued in Toronto.

THE STAR GIFT

The pageant, "The Star Gift," will be given in Murray Street Baptist Church on Sunday evening by a number of young people of the church. The pageant was written and is directed by Mrs. L. J. Pettit.

"There shall come a star out of Jacob and a sceptre shall arise out of Israel."

"And it came to pass that the words of the prophecy were fulfilled when the lowly virgin of David's royal race brought forth her first-born Son and laid Him in a manger." A new star shines with heaven's light, The shepherds seek Him through the night;
While angel carols fill the air
As they, to earth, glad tidings bear.

Then as their silvery trumpet tones dissolved themselves into the pulsating expectancy of the midnight hush, and heaven and earth seemed blended into one, the Spirit of the Christmas Peace came to abide in the hearts of men, as long as the Star-heralded Gift of Israel should rule the world with His sceptre of righteousness and peace.

The opening episode of the pageant reveals the Christmas Spirit, accompanied by her pages, joy, peace, etc. She recalls with her audience, in song, story, and pantomime, the marvellous accompaniments of the Saviour's birth. She is expressing the Christmas thought in the hearts and minds of the peoples of earth, as the chimes ring out their joyful message, centuries old, yet ever new.

To enjoy this pageant of the ages, the audience must dream with her those scenes of distant Palestine, with Nazareth nestling in the vale, and Bethlehem on her vine-clad heights.

The pantomime of the centuries introduces the Spirit of the year (1927). She assures this blessed Spirit that the Christmas peace and goodwill still lives in the hearts of men, and then presents her offerings of loyalty and love.

A prophecy for the future concludes the pageant as the Rainbow Vision unveils the Star of Hope and reveals Truth, Righteousness, and Peace abiding in a world swayed by the Sceptre of Love.

Selling Of Wheat Sends Price Down

CHICAGO, December 23 (Canadian Press). — Selling on the part of the houses with connections in the North-West tended to ease wheat values down to-day in the early dealings here. The relative firmness of Liverpool wheat quotations, however, despite enlarged shipments from Argentina, acted as something of an offset. Starting unchanged to ⅜c lower, Chicago wheat held near to the initial range. Corn, oats, and provisions were also easier, corn opening unchanged to ⅜c off and subsequently showing a moderate general setback.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 126, March 128¼. Corn, December 84⅛, March 87⅛. Oats, December 55⅞, March 54¼.

Mine Market Firm With Small Gains

TORONTO, Dec. 23.— (Canadian Press.)— Crown Reserve was an active and strong feature of this morning's busy session of the standard mining exchange. It touched 74 and at noon at 72 showed a net gain of two points. Howey Gold gained another point at 159 and Noranda in the unlisted section climbed 40 cents at 24.00. A generally firm tone was in evidence, though no remarkable price changes occurred. Bidgood sold up four and Barry Hollinger and Newbec were both a point stronger. Treadwell firmed 15 and Teck Hughes 10. Kootenay Florence was about the most active stock on the board and at 30 it was two points higher than yesterday.

Market Is Dull; Advance Continues

NEW YORK, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—Stock prices continued to work higher in today's market, but trading turned dull on the approach of the Christmas holiday. Call money was marked up to 5 per cent, due to heavy seasonal withdrawals of currency, but there was comparatively little calling of loans. Acute weakness cropped out in several of the insurance shares which had recorded sensational gains earlier in the month.

Bullish activity was confined largely to the coppers and a select group of other industrials, including United States Steel Common, Montgomery Ward, National Distillers, Curtis Airplane, and Underwood Typewriter. General Motors and Pittsburgh Coal which were sluggish in early trading, rallied briskly in the early afternoon. The rails were rather quiet, although steady accumulation was noted in Atchison, Rock Island, New York Central, and 'Frisco Common.

Except for the announcement of several railroad orders and the resumption of dividends by the Amoskeag Company, there was little business or financial news to influence the price movement. The stability of the market in the face of a sharp increase in brokers' loans and five per cent call money helped to maintain bullish confidence, although an increasing number of commission houses continued to urge restriction of committments on the theory that the technical position of the market had been weakned by the recent sharp advance.

Nickel and Massey Harris Are Leaders In Toronto

TORONTO, Dec. 23. Canadian Press. — Trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, aside from the unlisted department, was largely a matter of exchanging shares of International Nickel and Massey Harris. These two dominant stocks moved in opposite directions, nickel, the more active, sharply dropping from its recent advance, and Massey Haris climbing two points or so. On a turn over of sixteen thousand shares Nickel touched 90¼ and then slumped to 85¼. It recovered to 87¼ at noon, a net loss of 1 5-8.

Massey-Harris, upwards of seven thousand shares of which were turned over, gained 2 3-8 at 40½; Shredded Wheat and Pacific grain advanced a point, and Brazilian two points. Of the oils, McColl gained a point while British American and Imperial eased fractionally. Hiram Walkers sold up nearly 2 at 64 3-8 on a heavy turn over, and Canadian Brewing and Carling's firmed fractionally.

PLEADS GUILTY TO BEATING BOY

Goulais Bay Farmer Freed On Suspended Sentence On Paying Costs.

BOY LIVED IN CAVE.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—A sequel to finding of a 12-year-old Finnish boy, Einno Kuusela, living in a cave at Goulais Bay, came in police court here today, when Frank McKaughan, Goulais Bay farmer, pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting the boy, and Magistrate Elliot suspended sentence on condition that McKaughan pay $68 costs in connection with the search for the lad.

The boy was missing for ten weeks and when found earlier this week he charged that McKaughan, on whose farm he had been placed by the Children's Aid Society had beaten him, so he had run away. He was found in a cave close to the farm after a widespread search, living on such food as he could get by himself, and unafraid of the wolves and bears seen occasionally in the district.

SANTA VISITS KIWANIS CLUB

Each Member Receives Toy Which Later Goes To Needy Children.

SHORT PROGRAM.

There was no special speaker, but there was a world of fun awaiting local Kiwanians at their weekly luncheon held at their weekly luncheon held in the Empress Hotel to-day at noon hour. Good "eats," a snappy business session, plenty of humor and musical numbers occupied an hour and a half of the mid-day, and all present thoroughly enjoyed it.

Following the luncheon, President McNabb took the meeting in hand, announcing vocal numbers by Kiwanians G. F. Liddle, Vernon Morphet, and violin numbers by W. Ellis. The accompanists were Messrs. Chenhall and Liddle.

The business meeting consisted of discussion of a motion by Carl Browne relative to a change in a by-law. By it he hoped to increase the attendance and the revenue of the club. Many opinions were voiced by the various members, but the motion, and an amendment to it, failed to carry.

Jack Marshall then gave notice of a motion which he will bring in dealing with the same subject.

The real laugh provoker of the day was Jack McKone, who, as Santa Claus, handed out a present to each little boy, eighty or under. The gifts were later returned to the secretary. They will be properly bundled and distributed to needy children in the city. The Kiwanians will have charge of this work.

During the meeting, Col. Miller, one of the oldest members of the club, and a veteran of '66, was the recipient of season's greetings from the president and fellow-members.

There is a custom in the local club that at the meeting before each Christmas, a collection is taken and the proceeds given to the waitresses of the hotel who have attended at the dinners of the club. To-day Mrs. Austin, head waitress, received the money on behalf of her staff, briefly acknowledging the gift. She it was who also made the draw that made Mark Bredin the proud possessor of the blanket which had been raffled off within the club.

MOST HARM DONE AFTER COLLISION

Submarine Damaged By Ship Passing Over After Crash.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press).—Major damage to the sunken submarine S-4 apparently was done when the destroyer Paulding rode over the submersible, which was listing to port after the first impact of the crash, Commander Ellsberg, in charge of diving operations at Provincetown, has reported to the Navy Department.

Cocoanut Lamp Attracts Interest

A lamp that is the centre of much attraction is on display in the store of Jordan Brothers, on Charlotte street. It is very unique, made of a cocoanut, wired and fitted with two red bulbs, the centre containing the lights. The outside has for trimmings, bark from the tree of the cocoanut ornamented with miniature cocoanuts, and the husks. The uprights are the stems, which are also entwined with tiny cocoanuts, here and there around the outside. The lamp is higly polised, and is indeed a work of art. It was made by a local man while in Florida. This unique piece of work will be on display for a few days and is well worth seeing.

SNEAK THIEF GETS MONEY AND WATCH

W. Schoni's Room Visited During His Absence From Home.

W. Schoni, an employee of the Canadian General Electric Co., who boards at 570 Bolivar Street, suffered a very serious loss, when a sneak thief broke into his room early Wednesday evening, during Mr. Schoni's absence. A considerable sum of money was stolen, together with several very valuable personal effects, including a gold watch.

The despicable work was evidently the work of an amateur, and the police are following up the matter vigorously.

ask the Hydro to reduce the power rates before we can get these. I see no reason why we should not have lower rates." (Hear! hear!)

"As for the transportation question," the speaker continued, "I want to thank the Bus Company for coming in here when we needed the service. I admit it is not the best service possible. They promised nine buses and we haven't the nine yet. I believe, however, that the extra buses are to be here for the Christmas rush."

"If I'm elected I can assure you I'll put forward every effort for the people of Peterborough."

Utilities Commission.

John Crane explained how many persons had approached him asking him to serve on the Utilities Commission. "I believe that the position should seek the man rather than the man the position. "As far as Hydro is concerned," Mr. Crane declared, "I am perfectly open-minded. If I am elected I will make a study of the situation and I think my experience in finance and other things may be acceptable and of service."

W. H. Bradburn— "After having spent six years on the Utilities Commission, I believe I have some knowledge of the waterworks and the electric utility," Mr. Bradburn said. "Mr. Denne spoke of the cost of power. There's no one more anxious than I to see if it is possible to get the rate reduced. It is a hard job to get manufacturers unless the power rates are reasonable, and it is unfortunate that 35 or 40 years ago the city had not foresight enough to purchase the power sites north of Peterbdrough. It is likely, however, that the engineers of that time did not know that it was possible to transmit power long distances."

Mr. Bradburn quoted figures telling the operation of the Utilities in Peterborough and the present standing.

A member of the audience asked, "Why not use some of that northern power now?"

Mr. Bradburn— "If a survey by competent engineers shows power of the right kind available from dams 4 and 5, let's have it by all means But we shouldn't take anybody's word."

Board of Education.

William Bolton—The Board of Education is one of the most important executive bodies in the city, Mr. Bolton said. He had not decided whether his name would stand for election, but he would decide by Saturday night.

E. Bruce Fowler— In announcing his decision to stand for re-election Mr. Fowler remarked that a lot of time has been given by the 1927 Board to the building program, which he would like to see through to completion. "I hope all the retiring members will stand for re-election," he said, "because they have a grasp of the situation that new candidates, notwithstanding their ability, cannot have."

James Dutton announced his withdrawal because of pressure of business. He made an appeal on behalf of Mrs. Morris. 'She believes in the Collegiate extension," he said. "She believed in it when other people didn't, and is entitled to the support of the people of Peterborough.

R Harstone, who nominated John Crane in the Utilities contest, spoke in his support. "John Crane's name is a household word," he said. "He has been at the beck and call of everyone for years and years, and is now offering himself in a new sphere of service."

Qualifications To-morrow.

All those who are nominated today and intend to contest the vacant positions must qualify at the City Clerk's office before 9 o'clock to-morrow evening.

POLICE SEEK

was correct, and that "Andrew Cramer" was the actual slayer of the girl, district attorneys pointed out, Hickman's own story still would be sufficient for the impostion of the death penalty in case of a conviction. California law provides that when two or more persons enter into an unlawful act, resulting in the death of another person, each may be found equally guilty of murder.

In an hour and two minutes last night, the county grand jury indicted Hickman on charges of murder and kidnapping with intent to extort money. He was ordered held without bail and the indictment and other papers necessary for an extradition request were dispatched to Governor Young at Sacramento.

Vaudeville After Captors.

PENDLETON, Oregon, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press.)— Cecil Lieuallen, State traffic officer (everyone calls him "Buck" in these parts) and Tom Gurdane, chief of police, to-day found themselves suddenly thrust forward as candidates for the hall of fame because of their thrilling capture of William Hickman.

Four offers of handsome salaries to appear on theatrical stages have already reached two men The best offer, to date, guarantees five thousand dollars a week for six months and stipulates that the officers give "a theatrical lecture" on the capture of Hickman.

Whether William Hickman is the clever, resourceful "fox" that his ransom letters indicated, or whether he is only a deluded youth secretly pleased with the columns of news he has made in engineering the Marian Parker kidnapping still remain a matter of question to-day.

Pleased With Publicity.

"So you think that I will get as much publicity as Leopold and Loeb," he was quoted as having asked his captors. He was represented as having been boastful of escaping the police machinery of the big cities and of having thought it unusual that "small town" officers effected his capture, but described it as "the will of God."

Thus far his words and actions have evoked neither pity nor scorn. But his captors took nothing for granted. They have been told that he talked himself out of a prison sentence in the Los Angeles forgery case, leading the court to believe he was under the prison age limit when he really was old enough to have been so punished. The jail bristled with guns and guards. Hickman was stripped and given new clothing to forestall any possibility that he might have been carrying weapons or narcotics in his regular apparel.

BOYS SURPRISED.

PENDLETON, Oregon, December 23 (Canadian Press). — Jack and Bill Merrill, aged 20 and 21 respectively, of Carfield, Wash., said to-day they had the supreme thrill of their lives, being occupants of the Hickman car when it was captured near here yesterday.

"We had no idea that we were riding with William Edward Hickman," Jack said when he visited the police station. He and his brother immediately crawled to vantage points on the top of the cell block when Hickman was being interviewed.

Father Sends Message.

Hickman's father, in El Paso, Texas, said that if the boy is guilty, he should suffer the death penalty. He sent a message to-day asking William to let him know "on your word of honor if you are implicated. If you were, then God forgive you, and have mercy on the souls of your father, mother ,and your brothers and sisters."

After separating from Edward's mother, now in Kansas City, Hickman came here and married a Mexican girl. There are two children, a boy of four and a baby girl.

Sticks to Story.

PENDLETON, O., Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—William Edward Hickman, admitted kidnapper of Marian Parker, schoolgirl, slain in Los Angeles, today had not weakened in his story that an accomplice was responsible for the killing and mutilation of the child. After an untroubled night of sleep in the city jail here, the prisoner was permitted to elaborate only briefly this morning on his confession in which he named a mysterious "Andrew Cramer" as the actual slayer.

Chief of Police Tom Gurdane maintained a strict guard over Hickman's cell and permitted newspaper men and a few residents of Pendleton only a few minutes' visit with the prisoner.

Bowl for Turkeys

Somewhat over seventy members of the Engineering Department of the Canadian General Electric Co. spent Wednesday evening engaged in a very enjoyable bowling contest at the Duffus Alleys. The players were divided into six groups according to their respective bowling abilities, and a ten-pound turkey was given as prize in each of the six sections. The happy winners were Messrs. H. R. Sills, S. O. Shields, W. English, P. Edwards, Adams, and Thompson. Special additional prizes, one of which, a box of cigars, was generously donated by Mr. Duffus, were won by Miss Condon, Miss Greer and Mr. F. Merrett. The affair was splendidly managed by a committee composed of Messrs. I. McRae, S. J. Hayes, and W. E. Stewart, and it is expected that it will become an annual event.

The wood buffalo in their natural habitat in Wood Buffalo park near Fort Smith, N.W.T., continue to thrive and multiply. The buffalo in the southern range within Alberta are intermixing with those of the plains shipped during successive seasons since 1925 from Wainwright Park, Alberta.

WOMAN BEATEN AND THEN ROBBED

Man Named By Her Placed Under Arrest By York County Police.

TORONTO, December 23. — Following the complaint of Vera Kirkland who fell unconscious across the doorstep of the Fleming Farm, Don Mills Road, early yesterday morning, Norman Turner of Gilead avenue, was arrested by the county police yesterday on charges of assault and theft. He was lodged in the Don Jail and will appear in the county police court this morning.

Mrs. Richard McGee, housekeeper of the boarding house on the Fleming Farm, police say, went to the door on Wednesday night in answer to a knock, and when she opened it the girl, dishevelled, bruised and cut, fell unconscious across the threshold. Chief Constable Risebrough of North York and Dr. Dunning were called, and the girl was taken to the Toronto General Hospital.

Yesterday the girl is said to have told the county police that she had accepted an invitation to go for a motor ride from a man she named as Norman Turner. She had met him several times before, she said. She alleges that at a point on the Don Mills Road she was beaten up and robbed of $6. Then she was taken across the field to the house and left on the doorstep in a half dazed condition, she said.

Chief Risebrough told The Globe last night that there were footmarks in the snow leading to and from the Fleming house, indicating that the man had taken the girl to the door and had returned to a car on the road.

LINDY GREETED IN MEXICO

In picture at LEFT ABOVE is shown the great crowd which greeted Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, when he alighted at Valbuena airport, Mexico City, with the renowned "Spirt of St. Louis." He is seen being greeted by Governor Alvarez, with American Ambassador Morrow in centre. INSET is a photograph of Mrs. Lindbergh, who "hopped off" from Detroit, Monday to join her son.

DISTRICT CHURCHES

WOOLER UNITED CHURCH

WOOLER, Dec. 23.—At the United Church on Sunday morning the choir sang "To Labor in His Vineyard." Psalm one hundred was read responsively, then the pastor, the Rev. H. B. Neal, preached on the subject, 'Womanhood of Our Church,' taking his text from the first chapter of St. Mark, and the thirty-eighth verse. The message was in behalf of the Women's Missionary Society, emphasizing the spirit of enthusiasm, very few men have a very adequate conception of its work, which girdles the world and is independent of the General Board.

The evening service was in charge of Mrs. Neal, assisted by Mr. S. L. Terrill. At the beginning a song service was conducted by C. F. Wessels. Then Mrs. Neal addressed the meeting on "Life's Ideals and Life's Purpose."

"Ideals are the stars which God places in the sky of young manhood and womanhood, like the other stars above the pathway of the traveller. The wise men who follow the star, always reach Bethlehem. History furnishes unnumbered examples of the world's greatest and best who have first been mastered by a noble ideal. A high ideal is the lever under human life and means the elevation of character. He who is satisfied with his first effort never reaches his highest achievement. 'Look higher if you would live higher."

"The great musician had a vision or ideal, then produced it in music. The artist had a great ideal then revealed it on canvas. Edison did not make electricity. He discovered its methods. Newton, the discoverer of gravitation, saw but dimly at first, but his vision proved to be a reality. To talk about the ideal is not to dream.

"Ideals are heavenly messengers that keep our aspirations high. Ideals keep us out of discouragement and ever point us to what we may become. The maiden struggles through her heavy daily tasks with a song, looking forward to the coming of her lover. The young man faces the burdens of life and raises them to his shoulder and dreams of his own home and his own companion and better days.

"A victorious ideal is a steady aim —a constant star. Dugald Buchanan, a Scotch poet, was asked by a pious highlander, 'What is your ideal'; the poet replied, 'I have none in particular, my mind is much like a white sheet of paper.' Then replied the highlander, 'Take care that the devil doesn't write his name upon it.'

"What is the ideal of your life? Art thou a worshipper at the shrine of gold or fame or pleasure or purely the temporal elements oflife or have you hitched your wagon to a star. Low ideals are the creators of a weak character and low living. Lincoln rose to be one of the rulers of the world by the persistence of his ideal. 'I have talked with great men' he told his friend, Green, 'and I do not see how they differ from others. I can be one of them.' He walked seven or eight miles to a debating club. This he called his exercise. He studied the only grammar in his neighborhood. His story is a long one and beset with many hard places, but he fixed his eye on his star and turned all his efforts to that goal and he reached his ideal.

"God never intended the immortal soul to crouch in the lower things of life. It was given the power and liberty to soar and breathe the atmosphere of the upper world. It is disappointment and failure that has made many accept something lower at noon-day than they started out with in the morning.

"The first appearance of Disraeli as a speaker in the House of Commons resulted in failure. Loud laughter greeted every sentence. His closing words were, 'I shall sit down now, but the time is coming when you shall hear me.' And it did.

"These are ideals for our life work. What is the great ideal for our character? God is ever whispering to man, 'Fix your goal; My grace is sufficient for thee.' The perfect pattern and only working ideal for human-kind is the Christ. He alone possesses the qualities of the highest ideal and the power to attain to it. There is a spiritual hunger which makes mortals gravitate toward Him.

"Before the needle of a compass is magnetized, it lies in any position. Magnetized, it points forever in one direction. So the life, when touched by the spirit of Christ, invariably points in the one direction. Shakespeare is an ideal for a poet; Mozart for the musician. So Christ stands out unique and alone as the ideal for all human character.

"Is life worth living? It depends altogether upon the object or aim of your life. Paul said, 'For me to live is Christ.' That life is surely worth living. Judas said, 'What will ye give me.' That was the controlling motive of his life. Judas was a child of magnificent possibilities, but he scorned true riches for tinsel. It was his to look into the face of Jesus, to grasp his hand of love to listen to His marvellous words. But money was the most sacred thing in the world for him. Even Christ must take a second place to it. Of such a person the master said, 'Better for that man had he never been born.' It is better not to have lived than to live a mean, low selfish life. Dust, earth and ashes may be the composition of existence but not of life.

"Life is real, life is earnest, and the grave is not its goal. 'Dust thou art, to dust returneth' was not spoken of the soul. At one time I felt the most important thing in this life was service; but now I would say character-building. The all-important thing is not so much what we are doing, as it is the way we are doing it. We can build better if we are in our proper places. Real living is building upon actual conditions and according to divine plan. Tonight, if this service gives us one good thought or noble desire for our building it has not been in vain.

"Making a living is the time serving man's object. Making a life is the kingly, noble man's object. One lives in the narrow prison cell of self, and the other in a world boundless in its possibilities. Ruskin was a man who lived a life. Money was lavish to him; he became a literary star at 21. Every pathway was brilliantly lighted at his feet and every door was open for his entrance. He turned away from himself to live in the lives of others. He was willing to breathe the air of poverty-stricken districts of London to behold the intense suffering of under-paid men and women and children.

"He saw their hearts faint beneath the tremendous burdens of life. He cried 'How much can I give for its purification.' He gave one-tenth, then one-third, then one-half—and then more. He built schools and clubs and brightened their lives with new ideas.

"The slightest act for others carries its own blessing to the heart that lives outside itself. Carlyle wrote of Ruskin, 'Art is great and there is no other greatness than to make one nook of God's creation more fruitful, better, more worthy of God, to make some human heart a little wiser, happier, more blessed.' We shall not understand all that comes into our lives but nevertheless our business is to build well with Christ the corner-stone."

CHRISTMAS SEALS HELP LITTLE ONES

Those Not Able To Play Like Others Are Given Assistance.

At this glad season of the year there are some healthy kiddies in Peterborough, who are asking for books and toys and numerous other things, and there are others less fortunate, others who are propped up on one elbow, gazing wistfully out of the window, and all they are asking is for a chance, just a chance, to get well.

The money for Christmas Seals that goes to the Health Association gives them the chance. Are you going to help? There are still some whose names are on the list that have not as yet returned their dollar to E. J. Vanston at the Bank of Toronto. There could be no better time to send it than right now, when the Christmas spirit is in the air, to help bring a little Christmas cheer into the lives of those who are only asking for a chance to get better.

Letters bearing the grateful remittances are coming in every day, not only containing a dollar but in almost every case a message of goodwill like those below:

Peterborough, Ont.,
Dec. 16, 1927

Dear, Mr. Vanston,
Bank of Toronto.

Enclosed please find the stamps from Peterboro Health Association, and also the sum of Two Dollars ($2.00). We do not care to use the stamps but greatly admire the work of the Association.

Yours truly, ————————

Peterborough, Ont.,
December 21, 1927

Dear Sir:

Enclosed find One Dollar ($1.00) in payment of stamps mailed to our home.

Thanking the Association for the opportunity of helping along the good work and wishing them the Compliments of the Season.

Yours truly, ————————

Let your dollar follow in the footsteps of the hard-working District Nurse as she makes her rounds, and think of the good it will do. Send it now.

CHRISTMAS AGAIN

Oh, Christmas brings us many gifts,
But this the best: it comes, it lifts
A man a little from his mire,
Brings him again to his own fire,
Calls him again from worlds of strife,
Brings him again to home and wife,
And, if so fortunate is he,
Children around a Christmas tree.

Christmas again! and Christmas things.
The carol that the church choir sings
We had forgotten—now how sweet
The "Holy Night" our hearts repeat.
And then the sermon, words wherein
We find but little talk of sin
And much of love, and draw more near
Than Christ has found us all the year.

Oh, Christmas brings us many gifts.
But this the greatest: when man drifts
God finds us anywhere we are,
And in His window sets a star,
Arouses echoes in our hearts,
And faith awakes, and sin departs.
We wander for a little, then
Christmas—ah, yes, and Christ—again.

CHRISTMAS TREE HELD AT SHELTER

Santa Claus Visits Children at Conclusion of the Program.

The annual Christmas tree in connection with the Children's Aid Society was held at the Shelter last evening. This event is arranged and prepared for by the ladies of the Board, with Mrs J. S. Fanning as convenor. The play-room was prettily decorated and a large tree was laden with gifts. The president, Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, gave a brief speech, speaking of the many joys of this happy season and impressing upon the children the real significance of the event, in the celebration of the birthday of our Lord, Jesus Christ.

A short program included an opening chorus by children of the Shelter, an instrumental selection by Bobby Darcy, a reading by Mrs J. Welsh, a song by Frank Cunningham and a recitation by Mrs. J. L. Hughes. A telegram from Santa Claus was also read and then Rev. J. L. Hughes, impersonating the jolly Saint, appeared and delighted his audience by singing "Well, here's old Santa Claus at last," an item that was very well received, and was sung in excellent voice. This was followed by the distribution of gifts, each child receiving a present.

Later, ice cream and cake were served by the ladies.

This song consisted of twelve verses and was ably sung by Messrs. Clayton Telford, James Jopling, William Telford and Fred Jopling.

The program is as follows:

CARMEL UNITED S.S.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 23.—Carmel church was well filled on Monday evening for the annual entertainment given by the members of the Sunday School, Rev. F. H. Howard occupying the chair.

The decorations were of a Christmas character, and the tree with its load of parcels, and gay with red bells, glittering tinsel and other ornaments, was the centre of attraction for the younger folk at least.

The chairman made a brief address, and the following program was successfully carried out:

Joseph Wilks, who has always had a personal interest in the Carmel school, was won by Marjorie Olan who was present 46 Sundays. Louie Olan and Albert Wood were present 45 Sundays. Mr. Wilks' gift this year was a handsomely bound book.

Lunch was served at the close and a pleasant social time enjoyed by all.

Mr. Will Lunn is the efficient superintendent of the Carmel Sunday school, and Miss Martha Lunn, one of the most energetic workers, is teacher of the young men's Bible class. On Christmas Sunday the school session will be in the morning.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith wore Nils' green orchids to the Harrisons' that night, wore them pinned upon the shoulder of her last year's maize-colored chiffon evening dress and was proudly conscious of the fact that Mrs. Harrison looked upon them enviously as an evidence of Bob's still romantic love for his wife.

"By George," he laughed, as they were crossing the street to their own home at half past twelve, "I'll have to buy you some orchids now to square my conscience. Had a good time didn't we honey? Lord, but I was proud of you! Not a woman at the party could hold a candle to you for looks or brains."

"You're sweet," Faith whispered, squeezing his arm hard. "But Bob, ing, all of them have such a married, settled-down-to-bridge-playing look—about them. I wonder if they think the same about us. Do we look thoroughly married, dear?"

"That's the thanks I get for flirting outrageously with you all evening," Bob grumbled. "I'll bet every woman in that bunch is reading her husband a curtain lecture tonight: 'Why don't you treat me like Bob Hathaway treats Faith?' He acts as if he's crazy about her, pays her compliments and doesn't take her head off if she trumps his trick, buys her orchids—!"

"Oh, you're a model husband!" Faith laughed, her contralto voice rich with happiness. "Why, look Bob, the living room is dark! I thought—"

But she caught herself up in time. She had not yet confided in Bob all the intricacies of the queer conflict between Cherry and Nils. She had not hinted that she and Rhoda had conspired wordlessly to bring Cherry and Nils together that night, nor had she realized until that moment that her high spirits at the party had been partly due to the hope that Cherry and Rhoda's brother would have had an opportunity to reach an understanding.

While Bob was getting ready for bed Faith tiptoed through the silent house, going first to Rhoda's room where she found her "maid" sound asleep, a huge box of chocolates open on the little bedside table.

Maybe Cherry and Nils were out driving, the baby entrusted to Rhoda's care—Faith turned the doorknob of her sister's room noiselessly and slipped into the dark room. She was fumbling for the shaded electric candle on the side of the dressing table mirror when Cherry's voice quavered humbly:

"Don't turn on the light, Faith. I'm here, all right. I told you I'd take care of the baby—and I did. You might wake her up. She cried a good deal this evening."

"Oh, I'm so sorry," Faith whispered, groping her way to her sister's bed. "Maybe she's going to cut a tooth soon. Were you awfully lonesome, darling?" She sat down upon the edge of the bed, her hands straying until they encountered Cherry's tear-wet cheeks.

"Awfully," Cherry confessed. "Rhoda and Nils came in about half past ten. They'd been to the movies. Rhoda wanted me to come out, but I'd gone to bed. I—I didn't want to see anybody."

So her little scheme had fallen flat, Faith reflected sadly. "Can't you tell old, reliable Faith what's troubling you, honey?"

"Nothing," Cherry began to sob suddenly, "except that I've just been trying to make up my mind to be wholly honest and decent, and if I do, I know I'm going to be the lonesomest person in the world."

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

A dance frock that presents an unusual back view, made of black lace with flounces of lace that are pointed at the back.

The back view is the most important aspect of the dance frock, or at least it ought to be. Naturally enough in thinking of our own appearance we seldom think of anything but the front view—the view that we see when we stand facing the pier glass. Yet when we think of the effect of other women's frocks we frequently consider the back view as quite as important.

Odd how little thought many of us give to our back view, isn't it? It sometimes seems as if for many women the bob would be an impossible type of hair arrangement if they ever did get a good idea of how their bobs look from the back. But we are often creatures of but two dimensions so far as our thoughts of our own appearances go.

A simply constructed one-piece silk frock shows a fabric belt fastened by means of a buckle placed right in the center of the back of the frock.

On a number of the new evening frocks the shoulder flowers are made with an avalanche of petals that extends down over the shoulder both at back and front. Some of the newest French frocks show an arrangement of the skirt drapery at one side of the back—an arrangement that is decidedly striking after the long duration of the fashion for frocks with fulness drawn as tight as possible at the back.

Fine lace is now regarded as the most appropriate accompaniment possible for rich velvet and many of the newest velvet frocks show a soft frill or collar of fine real lace at neck and cuffs. It is a decidedly good time to make use of choice old pieces of lace that you have on hand.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1927.

Astrologers read this as rather a depressing day making for retrospection as well as for a sense of haste, confusing and tiresome.

This is a day in which to cultivate contentment and to avoid all inclination to achieve radical changes in the coming year.

A partial eclipse of the Sun today is read as fortunate for the theatrical profession and the film industry.

New business will develop rapidly in the United States, if the aspects accompanying the eclipse are rightly interpreted.

The planetary influences encourage a quest of pleasure on the part of all classes.

Saturn and Mars are in aspects supposed to presage great activity in the steel industry. New railways will be built.

There is a sign read as most threatening which forecasts earthquakes and horrible accidents, one of which will shock the whole world.

War is to be even more prominent in the consciousness of all nations than it has been in the last decade, the seers prophesy.

Women today are subject to a sway that stimulates them to domestic interests and is good for those engaged in holiday preparations.

While trade today has a first-rate direction of the stars, big commercial transactions will be few.

The planetary government is fortunate for philanthropies and charities, which should benefit in novel ways.

Although there will be much stressing of the love interests of this life, this configuration is not favorable to new romances.

Persons whose birthdate it is should prepare for great changes in the coming year.

Children born on this day are likely to be strongly individual and extremely talented. The subjects of this sign usually travel much.

EAR CULTURE

By AUGUSTUS BRIDLE

A musician in an Ontario town who is advertising a course in ear music asked me not long ago my opinion of ear culture. I told him that all the fingering and bowing and traiaing in the world gets nowhere as real music unless the ear is trained to listen.

Playing by ear is not a sin, but a necessity. The great trouble with most of our young soloists is they use exams instead of ears. Most of them don't even know how to jot down a simple tune from hearing it. They have not been taught that the greatest of all arts in music is that of listening; e.g., Mozart whose ear was phenomenal—and also every other composer or performer worth while.

The difference between two players of equal technique, one of whom is a fine interpreter, the other a mere player-piano who wears clothes is; that one listens critically to his own playing and the other doesn't.

That was all I meant by what I said to this ear-culturing musician; but I am afraid he thought I was trying to dam the notationists.

A Toronto Street-Lyric.

For years thousands in this city have been hearing a street-crier who is now into his 797,463rd repetition of the precise opening phrase of an old German carol by Praetorius. "Lo how a rose e'er blooming." Only this vendor is not selling roses. Here is his song as pitched on one of the cold-spell days last week, though in mild weather I swear he goes a semitone higher and on hot days a full tone: F—G—F—F—E. Pick that out on the piano in 4-4 metre, giving the first F the two first beats of the bar, the G one and a half, the next F a half and the next one a beat, with the remaining three beats on the G and you have what fits exactly this lyric: "Ah—ripe—ban—an—a—s." Which is exactly the first line of "Lo how a rose e'er blooming."

to be picked up along the streets of even this uncurious city.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1927-28 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1927, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 14

One of the greatest charms of auction bridge is the fact that practically all players feel that they play as well as the next fellow. Therefore they get much more enjoyment from playing on what they consider an equal basis than if they considered themselves inferior. The old saying that "There is nothing new under the sun," seems to apply equally well to auction bridge. Whist, as probably most of my readers know, was the forerunner of Bridge, as Bridge was the predecessor of our present game of Auction Bridge. In the days of Whist, as well as now, the players thought pretty well of their game, as is shown by the following quotation from "The Posthumous Papers of the Pickwick Club":

"'There!' said the criminal Miller triumphantly, as he took on the odd trick at the conclusion of a hand; 'that could not have been played better, I flatter myself'—impossible to have made another trick!'

"'Miller ought to have trumped the diamond, ought he, sir?' said the old lady.

Mr. Pickwick nodded assent.

"'Ought I, though?' said the unfortunate, with a doubtful appeal to his partner.

"'You ought, Sir,' said the fat gentleman in an awful voice.

"'Very sorry,' said the crestfallen Miller.

"'Much use that,' growled the fat gentleman."

Mr. Pickwick started his travels in 1827 so that the quotation, describing conditions in Whist a century ago, shows how little human nature has changed in the meantime. There are undoubtedly many Mr. Millers playing today who fancy their game, and as many fat gentlemen who delight in criticizing them.

In preceding articles, reference has been made to the informatory double and its proper application. Here are two hands of a similar character that bring out still further principles:

Hand No. 1

	Y
A		B
	Z

Y: Hearts — 8, 7, 3; Clubs — 9, 4; Diamonds — A, K, 5; Spades — J, 7, 6, 5, 2

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one spade, A doubled (informatory) and Y passed. What should B bid? It has the choice of passing the one spade double in the hope that he and his partner can defeat the bid, or of bidding one no-trump. A great many players would probably pass and try to defeat the bid but such procedure seems unsound. At most, B cannot figure his hand worth more than three or possibly four tricks. Therefore, unless B's partner can take four tricks, Z will make his bid. On the other hand, if the no-trump is bid, B's hand has possibilities of game. As between a doubtful pass and a sure score at no-trump, there is no choice. The no-trump should be bid without question.

	Y
A		B
	Z

Y: Hearts — 9, 4, 2; Clubs — 9, 7, 3; Diamonds — 9, 6, 2; Spades — J, 6, 5, 3

No score, first game. Z dealt, bid one spade, A doubled (informatory) and Y passed. What should B bid?

This situation comes up so frequently that it should be carefully noted. When your partner makes an informatory double and the only four-card suit you hold is the one doubled, you can do one of two things: First, if the suit is strong enough to act as a double stopper of the suit bid, you should bid one no-trump. This shows your partner the type of hand you hold and that you probably have no other four-card suit.

Second, if the suit is so weak that it contains no stopper in the suit bid or possibly only one, you should bid two clubs, or if that is the suit doubled, two diamonds. In other words, when the suit doubled is your only four-card suit and it is too weak to justify a no-trump bid, you should bid two of a minor suit; two clubs if that is not the suit doubled; otherwise two diamonds. This is a sensible rule and should be closely followed.

In this example hand, the point is well brought out. Four spades to the jack is too weak to justify a no-trump bid, so B has no choice but to bid two clubs.

Answer to Problem No. 15

	Hearts — J, 10 Clubs — A, 7, 6 Diamonds — 8 Spades — 10, 9, 7
Hearts — 3 Clubs — J, 3, 2 Diamonds — none Spades — J, 6, 5	Y A B Z	Hearts — K, Q, 8, 7 Clubs — Q, 10, 9, 4 Diamonds — 5 Spades — none
	Hearts — 6 Clubs — K, 8 Diamonds — Q, J, 10, 9, 7, 6 Spades — none

Diamonds are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Z play the hand so that he can win all of the tricks against any defense? Z should lead out six rounds of diamonds. A is forced to make six discards. His first five are easy. He can discard the trey of hearts, the deuce of clubs and the jack, six, five of spades. Y must make only five discards. His first four are easy as he can discard two hearts and two spades. B must also make five discards and his first four are also easy. He should discard three hearts and one club. At the sixth trick the cards held by the four players are as follows:

	Hearts — none Clubs — A, 7, 6 Diamonds — none Spades — 10
Hearts — none Clubs — J, 5, 3 Diamonds — none Spades — Q	Y A B Z	Hearts — K Clubs — Q, 10, 9 Diamonds — none Spades — none
	Hearts — 6 Clubs — K, 8 Diamonds — 6 Spades — none

Z now leads his six of diamonds. What can A discard? If he discards his spade, Y's ten of spades is good. Therefore A is forced to discard the trey of clubs. Y should now discard the ten of spades. What can B discard? If he discards the king of hearts, Z's six of hearts is good. Therefore B is forced to discard the nine of clubs.

Z now should lead the king of clubs, then the eight, winning the second club trick in Y's hand with the ace. Y's last club is now good and Y-Z in this way win all of the tricks against any defense, by forcing discards from both A and B.

This forcing of discards is called the "squeeze," and when effective against both opponents, as in this problem, is called the "double squeeze." It is a pretty little problem and should be studied carefully.

SENIORS TIED 2-2 IN FIRST HOME GAME

OSHAWA AND PETES USHER IN HOCKEY SEASON BY PLAYING 2 TO 2 TIE IN EXHIBITION TILT

Freak Goal by Ray Rose Against His Own Team Saves Visitors.

LEGON'S NICE WORK

Petes Show Good Form and Promise to Develop Into Strong Team.

(By F. D. C.)

Ray Rose never netted a rebound more neatly in his life than the one he slipped through in the early stages of the last period of the exhibition game with Sammy Lowe's Oshawa intermediates at Brock St. rink last night, but unfortunately the Petes' captain selected his own net as a target and the Santa Claus goal gave Oshawa an even break, the final count being 2 goals each.

The Petes had the edge over the visitors until the ice conditions became bad in the last period and in spite of Rose's freak goal against his own team should have won the argument. A combination of tough breaks around the net and excellent goal-keeping by Dick Smith, Oshawa's veteran goalie, hbwever, kept them from registering their second victory of the week over the flashily-garbed and hard-working Motorists.

As a workout the game left nothing to be desired while there was plenty of exciting hockey to supply thrills for the crowd. Both outfits will benefit materially from the two battles this week, and in spite of their late start should open their O.H.A. campaign next week in fairly good shape.

Reinforced by Red Legon the Petes shaped up nicely and when they develop some system and team work are going to shake down into a team that will cause plenty of trouble in the senior race. The work of Bert Hall and Jack LeBarr in the nets convinced the crowd that the position left vacant by the departure of Joe Dwyer to the American Hockey League will be well filled. Both boys got a chance last night, Hall playing the first and third periods and LeBarr the second session, and they kicked out the shots in great style. Rose and Clark teamed up well on the defence and they promise to be a tough pair to beat. Up in front the first string forward line, Kane, Legon and McFee were all good individually and only need some work together to round into a formidable attacking division. Legon will be a source of great strength. Always aggressive, he is faster than ever, carries the puck cleverly and he has developed a shot that carries a sting to it. He was a big help last night.

Kane's tricky stickhandling was much in evidence while McFee showed speed and a fine shot. His dash for the Petes' first goal was a brilliant effort and the big boy will fit in nicely. Williams, Maudsley, Foley and Cripps worked their heads off whenever called upon.

The Oshawa team, if Manager Lowe can develop some team work, should do nicely in the dash for the intermediate honors. They have a real goalie in the experienced Smith and Houck and Chartrand, the latter a former Bowmanville player, are a hard checking defence. There is plenty of speed on the forward line where Avery and young Joyce, the latter a junior sub last season, looked particularly good. Joyce hails from that breeding place of good hockey players, Collingwood, and should develop fast. Conlin and Stephens are also useful performers who will be of great assistance.

The game opened on lightning fast ice and the conditions were good until the last period when the surface began to scale and puck-carrying and skating became increasingly difficult.

The Petes had the best of the going in the first two periods. Early in the game they forced the play and Smith had to move fast to handle drives from Rose and Kane. Finally after five minutes hard going McFee broke from his own blue line, steamed away from the Oshawa forwards, split the defence and batted the rubber past Smith. Soon after Red Legon missed a great chance when he took a pass from behind the net by Maudsley, measured Smith cooly and then drove one an inch outside the post. A little later Legon scored on a fast shot from the side but the play was called back for an offside. The Petes led 1 to 0 at the end of the period.

They had plenty of chances to increase their lead early in the second period but Smith did some fine work in smothering rebounds. He flopped on one that Williams snapped back at him and a little later saved nicely when McFee backhanded a hot one after taking a pass from Kane. Once again when Legon drove a lightning shot at him Smith came out and dropped on the puck in time to prevent Kane from netting the rebound. And finally after all these close calls it was Oshawa who scored. Legon had just left the ice to serve a penalty when Avery came down and drilled one from outside the defence that eluded Lebarr and put the teams on even terms. They remained that way until the end of the period.

Soon after the last session Ray Rose impersonated the spirit of Christmas. Hall had spread-eagled to kick out a low shot from Joyce's stick and Rose going back to clear the rebound slid the rubber into his own net putting the visitors into the lead. Legon got that soft one back when he stickhandled through a muddle of Oshawa players to fool Smith at close range, and tied the score. From then on the play did not mean a great deal. The teams were tired and a rolling puck made things miserable for the puck-carrier and both outfits were glad to call it a night when the bell rang for full time.

The teams and summary:

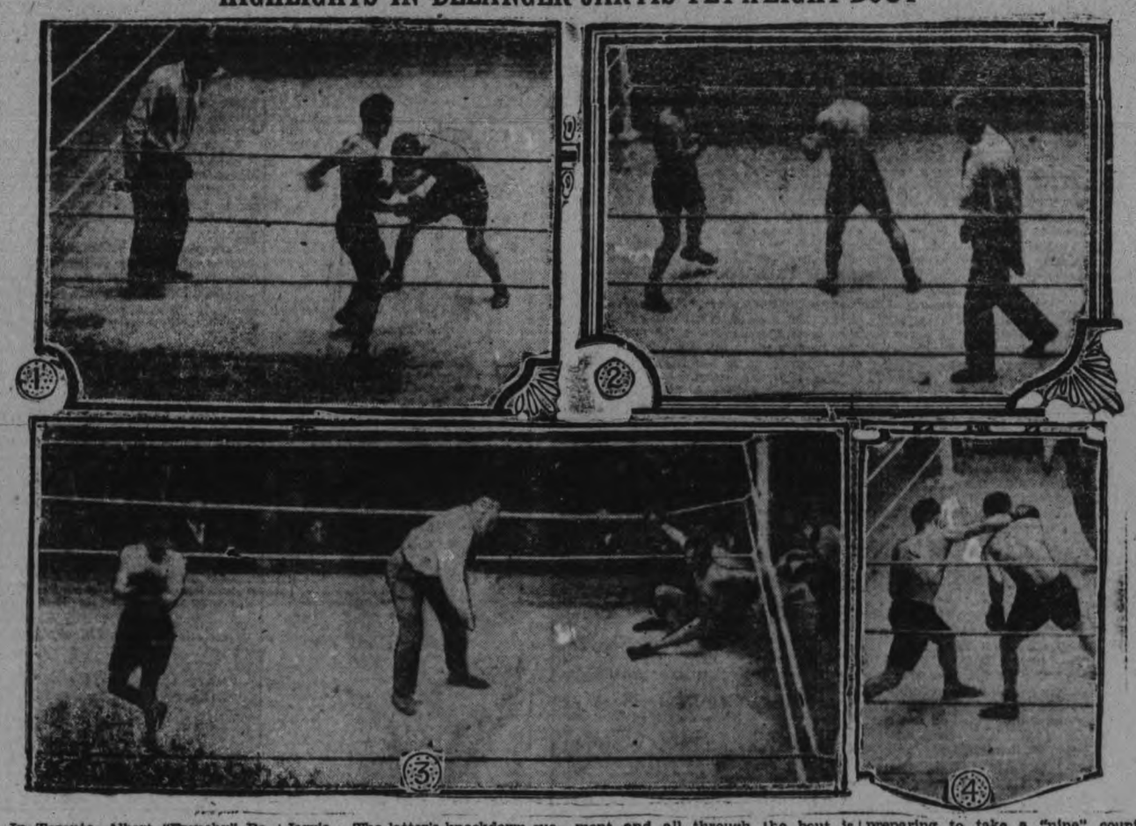
Newsy Lalonde Is Given Stiff Penalty

BOSTON, Mass., December 23 (Canadian Press). — Newsy Lalonde, peppery manager of the Quebec Canadian-American Hockey League Club, has been fined $100, and indefinitely suspended —the stiffest penalty the League constitution allows — President Charles O. Clapp announced yesterday. Lalonde was charged with assaulting Referee Sonny Foley during the Boston-Quebec game here last Saturday, as well as precipitating a fight in the players' quarters after the contest.

League referees have been instructed not to allow Lalonde to sit in the players' reservation during his suspension, President Clapp said.

President Clapp said that Manager Hubert C. Milot, of the Quebec Arena had failed to furnish facts requested covering Lalonde's side of the case, and that a meeting of the League's board of governors had been called here for next Tuesday for further discussion of fistac warfare which has marred several League contests this season.

HIGHLIGHTS IN BELANGER-JARVIS FLYWEIGHT BOUT



In Toronto, Albert "Frenchy" Belanger, a native Canadian, defeated Ernie Jarvis, of London, England, in a 12-round bout which decided the successor of Fidel LaBarba, the retired flyweight champion of the world. Belanger won a sensational bout which was marked by three clean-cut knockdowns — two by Belanger and the other, of course, by Jarvis. The latter's knockdown success came in the eleventh round and almost turned defeat into victory for him. A slashing, determined offensive for Belanger in the twelfth and final round, however, settled the verdict beyond all doubt, and Jarvis was the first to acknowledge that his opponent was the better man. Jarvis' sportsmanship in this acknowledgment and all through the bout is worthy of the traditions of the English prize ring. No. 1 shows Belanger, the winner, boring in and blocking Jarvis' left hook. No. 2 shows the boys sparring for an opening. Jarvis on the LEFT and Belanger on the RIGHT. No. 3 shows the first knockdown of the battle. Jarvis is down from a left to the body and is preparing to take a "nine" count, which, however, was interrupted at "two" by the bell ending the round. In the CENTRE is the referee, Lou Marsh of Toronto, and on the LEFT is Belanger hustling to the farthest corner as the rules require. No. 4 shows Belanger ducking inside of Jarvis' powerful right hand swing. He did not always get inside of it.

NEXT BOUT WITH GENARO

Belanger Not to Pay Any Attention to Challenge of Schwartz.

MUST WAIT HIS TURN

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—Johnny McCoy, Willie Davis, Izzy Schwartz and Frankie Genararo are all hot on Frenchy Belanger's trail and as far as the Queen City's favorite pugilist is concerned they can't come too fast for him. But they will have to wait their turn. He is in no hurry to risk his title and considering the hard seige that he has been through the last few weeks he is justified in taking a holiday.

Three winning bouts with the best flyweights in the game in as many months is a big undertaking for a boy who was little known outside of his own particular bailiwick until he started his climb to eminence by taking the measure of Newsboy Brown last October. Belanger was not given much chance when he was matched with Leo Flynn's ace but he not only outboxed but outslugged the Sioux City veteran. Frankie Genaro, twice conqueror of Pancho Villa, winner over Jimmy Wilde, was next in line and the foxy Italian made it much more interesting for the impetuous Belanger than any of the boys he has met either before or since.

Frankie showed Frenchy a few tricks that were new to him especially in the close work and managed to make it close as a consequence. With a more experienced referee in the ring he might not have been able to get away with his grape vine tactics but even that is doubtful as Genaro is a master boxer and what he doesn't know about ring craft isn't worth knowing. As Belanger's next bout is likely to be with the same wily workman it behooves him to polish up his technique.

The champion's contest with Ernie Jarvis was probably the most sensational of the three mainly because of the great rally staged by the Britisher when he looked to be a soundly beaten performer. It is a certainty that Frenchy will not allow himself to be caught napping in similar fashion again. With victory virtually in his grasp he grew careless and almost tossed off the bout.

Jarvis must be given credit for taking advantage of the situation. Had he not been visibly weakened by the punishment that he had assimilated in wholesale fashion before the big moment presented itself to him he might have polished off Dave Garrity's protege. Belanger invited the catastrophe, first by shifting his stance and second by disdaining to take the count when he was in distress. That he weathered the storm was a miracle but he did and then went on to win almost by himself. His great recovery bordered on the uncanny.

No attention will be paid to Schwartz's claims for a bout until Genaro's pretensions have been disposed of next month. Then if Frenchy repeats his victory over the New Yorker he will be ready to meet Tex Rickard's candidate or for that matter McCoy, who is coast champion, or Willie Davies who is the boss of the division from a Pennsylvania standpoint.

OFFICIALS SUED BY TORONTO MAN

Owners of Chicago "Black Hawks" Face Suit for $700,000.

CHICAGO, December 23 (Canadian Press). — Major Frederic McLaughlin, wealthy sportsman, and two minor officials of the Chicago "Black Hawks," professional National Hockey League team, of which McLaughlin is president ,yesterday were sued for $700,000 by Edward J. Livingstone ,of Toronto, a pioneer hockey promoter, who charged conspiracy to eliminate him as a hockey club owner.

Because he is an alien, Livingstone brought suit in the Federal District Court.

The petition details steps of the alleged conspiracy to render a hockey league franchise worthless, obtain illegally players Livingstone claims he had under contract, and finally to oust him from organized professional hockey.

William J. Foster and John S. Keogh were the others named.

Livingstone contends the defendsants, Alvan H. Warren, Jr., president of the American Hockey Association, Paul W. Loudon, a director, Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, and William F. Grant, secretary-treasurer, conspired to destroy his franchise and the property rights of players under contract.

Livingston claims Marvin P. Wentworth, Edward D. Graham, Robert Burns, and Ralph F. Taylor, hockey stars, were paid $500 to $1,000 by McLaughlin to break contracts with him.

As a result of the contended conspiracy, the Toronto man charges that he lost his franchise in the American Hockey Association and had to abandon a lease on the Chicago Coliseum, where his team, the Cardinals, played.

STRATFORD LOSES.

Bogardis One of Hamilton Stars in Game With Nationals.

STRATFORD, December 23. — The Stratford Nationals took their second beating of the week here last night at the hands of the Hamilton Tigers, the same team that beat them earlier in the week, and by the same score, 2 to 1. In order to give staffs of stores an opportunity to witness the contest, the game was not called until nine o'clock, and was witnessed by a fair-sized crowd. The first period went scoreless, the visitors got their two in the second, while Stratford scored their lone tally in the final stanza. The victory elevated the Hams to second place in the Canadian League standing.

The visitors played their positions well, with Bogardis, the former National player, Green and Roth the outstanding players. Roth proved a regular burr and broke up attack after attack. Brydson's forte was his quickness in breaking, and he drilled in a number of good shots on Dolson. Green played well both defensively and offensively.

PIRATES ENTER WIN COLUMN BEATING LEAFS

Score Tying Goal in Last Minute and Win in Overtime.

MAROONS WIN.

Defeat Americans in New York—Canadiens Win at Home.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—For a team that is down in the cellar of the National League standing the Pittsburgh Pirates showed an extraordinary amount of dash and fight in their league engagement with the Maple Leafs last night, and these were the qualities that brought them through to their first win in twelve games, as they certainly didn't have any of the luck of the game. Local fans have been bemoaning the fact that the Leafs have not been getting the breaks this season, but last night they nearly balanced their account in this regard and yet could not win, the Pirates leaving for home with a 3 to 2 victory after 31 seconds overtime. Quite a proportion of the smallest crowd of the season did not see the finish of the game as the Leafs were leading by 2 to 1, all three goals having been scored in the first period, with less than a minute to go and the Pirates were playing one man short through a penalty to Burke and many of the spectators left.

The Summary.

First Period—
1. Pittsburgh, Cotton 12.50.
2. Maple Leafs, Rodden (Bailey) 5.22.
3. Maple Leafs, Carson, 1.37.

Second Period—
No score.

Third Period—
4. Pittsburgh, Milks, 19.40.

Overtime Period—
5. Pittsburgh, McKinnon, 31.

Final score: Pittsburgh 3, Maple Leafs 2.

MAROONS 5, AMERICANS 2.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, Dec. 23.—The flashy Montreal Maroons climbed all over the New York Americans in a game full of scoring, fighting, penalties and the mischance of hockey last night. The score was 5 to 2, and all of the eight thousand customers had a thrill, for until the last period no one could say which team would win.

The Maroons won because they obtained an early lead, and then adopted the policy that a fine offence is the best defence. They ran riot in the last spasm, the Star-Spangled team frantically charging, only to find that Nels Stewart, Babe Seibert or Hooley Smith had eluded them and was driving down the ice on an unguarded Joe Miller. Joe had a bad night, for he was gashed over the eye by a flying puck at the close of the first period, and the session was cut short to allow him to recover.

Canadiens 5; Chicago 2.

MONTREAL, Dec. 23. — The slim figure of Aurel Joliat emerged triumphant from the Canadien-Chicago Black Hawks National Hockey League match here last night. The little left winger of the local club secured three goals, all as the result of clever team work and unselfish passing by his team-mates. The score was 5 to 2 in favor of Canadiens.

Chicago secured a two goal advantage in the second period through scores by Keats and Mackay. The first period was scoreless. Just as the second period ended Herb Gardiner got Canadiens' first goal.

The third had hardly started when Joliat went on a scoring rampage. Morenz, Mantha and Gagne were credited with assists. Gagne got the last goal of the game with a rush around right wing.

The game was lightning fast all through. The Chicago forward, particularly the veterans, Mackay and Irvin, tried hard, but found Hainsworth and his guard too strong. Gardiner in Chicago's nets turned back shot after shot, but could not weather the storm of pucks poured upon him.

Many People Offer Advice to Rescuers

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., December 23 (Canadian Press). — At least 250 persons throughout the country think they know how the crew of the S-4 could have been rescued. Telegrams and letters from that number of people were sent the mine sweeper Falcon, suggesting the use of almost everything from magnets to towboats. One woman advised the Navy to use a magnet, and an anonymous adviser told the rescue workers to force flowering plants through the torpedo tubes. The oxygen in the plants would keep the survivors alive, the writer said. A letter brought Diver Tom Eadie at Provincetown a religious badge to attach to the S-4.

"It may be of great help, who knows," the writer said. Eadie kept the badge to fasten to the conning tower so that it would be the first thing out of the water when the wreck was brought to the surface.

LEARNING THROUGH THE EYES

The eyes speak with an eloquence and truthfulness which surpasses speech. They are windows through which one can easily see into the soul of friend or stranger. We see the look of the lion or the lamb, of the saint or the sinner, of the lover or the enemy, and that first look into strange eyes will often tell a tale far different from the story he tells you with language trained and cultivated to effect his hidden purpose.

Our own conduct is much controlled by the fact that other people can see and observe our actions. How different we would act if we knew that everyone in the world but ourselves were blind! How changed would be our dress—our every action!

The questioning, critical glance of our neighbor keeps us always as actors on the stage of life. Yet, how true it is that no two people react the same to the same visual stimulus. We are always limited in our reactions to a sight stimulus by the amount of understanding we have of what we see.

The artist is affected by a landscape in a very different way from the realtor. The artist sees more of the beauty in the natural colors of the rolling hills, while the realtor dreams his vision of a profitable and practical subdivision. The physician sees the tired, enervated, bilious look of a patient, while the judge sees before him the same man only as a vicious criminal. Each has his viewpoint true to his understanding.

How unwise it is for us to criticize the viewpoints of others whose training and environment have given them a different perspective from our own. We will find it of infinitely more value to observe the actions of others as a student studies the example of his teacher. For instance, it is folly to waste time and energy in trying to reform the food drunkard. If his behaviour brings on physical ruin, we are at liberty to profit by his mistakes.

We learn by what we see a great deal more than by any other teaching, and the amount that we benefit by such visual education depends entirely upon our mental equipment.

If we cannot today learn at the feet of the glutton our lesson about food intemperance, we will surely do so some time in the future when our stock of knowledge is enriched by more experience and observation.

As our mastery of the health problem is more secure, we will visualize more and more the ideal of a beautiful body, and learn to look for beauty of body and soil in those with whom we come in contact in our daily life. We will then watch to find out what kind of habits make for health, and learn to comply with nature's laws.

If you will use your eyes to learn your daily health lessons, you will find yourself richly repaid with knowledge that no amount of philosophy or preaching can impart.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. F. asks: "What causes the palate to often drop down on the tongue, and what can be done to prevent it?"

Answer: The average soft palate touches the back of the tongue part of the time. If it bothers you very much there is a simple operation you can have performed which consists of clipping off the end of the soft palate if it is too long.

Question: W. J. L. asks: "What foods may be used with the starchy foods?"

Answer: Starchy foods should be used only with the cooked and raw non-starchy vegetables.

Question: Mrs. A. L. T. writes: "Please advise if in playing golf with a person who is in the first stages of tuberculosis, one is in danger of taking it."

Answer: I do not consider there is the slightest danger of contracting tuberculosis from another even through close contact. However, I would advise you to tell your tubercular friend to stop playing golf, as the swinging necessary with a golf club is too strenuous for one who is suffering from any form of pulmonary trouble. Tell him to take his exercises by walking long distances each day, but to stop exercising his upper body.

Question: Polly asks: "Could you please tell me the cause of a staggering and dizzy feeling in my head in the mornings, and the remedy? Also the reason for a rash completely covering the body when a person gets excited? I was listed as 50% anemic two years ago. Would this have anything to do with it? My weight is about 170 pounds.

Answer: If you are still anemic, that could account for your dizziness in the morning and also for the rash on the body. Have a blood count made in a laboratory, send me the report, and I will give you further advice. Be sure to give your full name and address.

Uncle Wiggily

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S CHRISTMAS DOLL.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

"Who is there?" asked Uncle Wiggily. The old gentleman rabbit, as you may remember, was in the backyard of the house where Mrs. Blue Heron, the long-legged bird had lived. The bunny had taken off the line a big stocking which Mrs. Heron had forgotten as the flew south for the winter.

Uncle Wiggily wanted a long stocking so he might get plenty of Christmas presents in to give away to boys and girls whom, otherwise, Santa Claus might forget. But, as I told you in the story last night, no sooner had he taken the Heron lady's stocking off the line than a voice cried:

"Stop!" So, of course Uncle Wiggily asked,—

"Who is there?"

"I am!" snarled an unpleasant voice. "What do you mean by taking my wife's long stocking?" With that the sly and hungry Weasel crept out from beneath a pile of snow and slithered toward the rabbit.

"Dear me! There must be some mistake!" said Uncle Wiggily gently. "This stocking belongs to Mrs. Heron, a bird with two long legs. How can she be your wife when you have such little short legs?"

"Never mind about that!" snarled the Weasel. "She's my wife all right and, just for you taking her stocking, I'm going to bite you!"

"Oh, I think you must be mistaken," said Mr. Longears, gently. "Mrs. Heron has only two legs and you have four. You couldn't possibly be her husband."

"Yes, I could!" snarled the Weasel. "My wife was very contrary. She always insisted on having only two legs. She could just as well have had four. I'd have paid for 'em! Now get ready to be bitten!"

"Oh, but just another moment, if you please," went on Uncle Wiggily. "You are an animal, Mr. Sly Weasel, and Mrs. Heron is a bird. She could not have been your wife."

"I tell you she was!" insisted the ugly chap. "She was contrary I tell you! She said she'd be a bird and I could be an animal if I wanted to, and, of course, I did. So you took my wife's stocking and, just for that, I'm going to bit you! Here I come!"

Of course Mrs. Blue Heron was no more the wife of the Sly Weasel than the doorknob was. The bad chap just said that to have an excuse for eating Uncle Wiggily.

"Give me back my wife's long stocking!" snarled the Weasel.

"Oh, well, if you insist, here it is!" said the bunny gentleman suddenly. With that he began whirling and twirling the long stocking around in the With that he began whirling and twirlair with a zizzling sound. And, all at once, the foot of the stocking hit the Weasel 'ker-bunko alongside his head, for the rabbit gentleman was twirling the stocking around very fast and close to the Weasel.

"Socko!" went the Heron lady's stocking on the side of the Weasel's head.

"Oh, what a hard knock!" cried the Weasel. And away he ran, not bothering to bite Uncle Wiggily. The rabbit gentleman emptied the chunk of ice from the toe of the Heron lady's long Christmas stocking, and then hopped on his way back to his bungalow.

"Well," said Mr. Longears to himself as he skipped along. "I have a Christmas stocking, but, as yet, I have nothing to put in it."

"Why don't you put me in?" suddenly asked a voice near a snow bank.

"Who are you?" asked the rabbit.

"I am a Christmas Doll," was the answer, and then, surely enough, out of the snow drift came walking a beautiful Christmas toy doll with round, staring blue eyes that looked straight at the rabbit. "Put me in the stocking," begged the Christmas Doll. "If you do, something wonderful will happen."

And whether the rabbit did this or not, and what happened after that, you may read about in the next story which will be called Uncle Wiggily's Christmas skates.

SISLER GOES TO SENATORS

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 23 (A.P.).—Regarded five years ago as one of the greatest all-around players of all time and worth at least $150,000 as baseball values go, George Sisler was sold outright yesterday by the St. Louis Browns to the Washington Senators for a sum understood not to be in excess of $25,000.

Although the famous first baseman was sought by at least three other clubs, reports were current that he had brought as low as $15,000 in the open market, a tenth of his value while at the height of his career and before he was attacked by eye trouble. This figure, however, apparently was confused by some observers with the salary called for in his contract, which the Senators will take over.

The sale of Sisler, who has been with the Browns for the past twelve years—three of them as manager—marked another step in the breakup of the St. Louis club, promised recently by Phil Ball, the president, and apparently to be fulfilled with a complete reorganization.

There were at least a half dozen other deals consummated and as many others "in the air."

Emil Yde Released

Principal among them was the release of Emil Yde, southpaw pitcher and National League sensation three years ago, along with Catcher Roy Spencer by the Pittsburgh Pirates to Indianapolis with the understanding that the Corsairs will have their pick of the Hoosier roster for 1928.

Both Yde and Spencer have been with the Pirates for four years but they saw little activity last season.

Johnny Bassler, Detroit catcher, and rated among the foremost major league backstops a few years ago, was released to Toronto in payment for Red Hargrave, another receiver, but probably will start the 1928 season with the Hollywood, Calif., club of the Pacific Coast League. Negotiations to obtain Bassler as well as Red Wingo, outfielder, from Toronto, were opened by Oscar Vitt, Hollywood manager.

Toronto figured in another deal by selling Shortstop Bob Lamotte and Outfielder Andy High, both former major leaguers to Baltimore for $6,000.

Mussolini Pardons 300 For Christmas

ROME, Dec. 23.—(United Press).—Three hundred persons who had been sentenced to enforced domicile, meaning exile have received a Christmas present from Premier Mussolini. In the past few days the Dictator has pardoned these men who had been sentenced for political offences.

Although faces may be lifted to keep a person looking youthful, science has not yet discovered any method of rejuvenating the hands, which show age more than faces.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

KEN PULLED FILM RESCUE, BUT IT WAS REAL THING.

A daring act of heroism — and the more daring because in spite of the clicking cameras that recorded it, it was real — was performed by Ken Maynard, cowboy star, during the screening of "Somewhere in Sonora," his latest First National production made by Charles R. Rogers, now playing at the Regent Theatre here.

Unfortunately, it was one of those happenings which are generally used in fiction and rarely believed unless seen. Yet fifty members of the company testify to its happening

Al Rogell was directing a scene in one of Mexico's canyons. The action required Kathleen Collins, the leading lady, and Yvonne Howell to be driving in a buckboard led by two horses, who were supposed to run away. The horses, frightened at the action, instead of doing a "make-believe" runaway, started on an actual one and went tearing down the canyon, alongside of which was a yawning chasm several thousand feet deep.

Ken Maynard, star of "Somewhere in Sonora," immediately hopped on Tarzan, his horse, and tore after the runaway team. He effected a rescue such as has never been seen on the screen, for the buckboard was beginning to lean over towards the chasm by the time he caught up with it and grabbed the flying reins in his hands. He jumped from Tarzan to the nearest horse in a manner similar to stunts he has done before. The difference was that prior to this incident they had been but "stunts" and here the lives of both girls depended on his doing it successfully.

AT THE CAPITOL.

TOM MIX, WITH "TONY," IN "SILVER VALLEY"

One of the peppy Tom Mix pictures that are really entertaining and have such a thrill in the exploits of the star's wonder horse, Tony, is the feature at the Capitol Theatre for this week-end.

The hero has a different role this time. Usually, he occupies most of the picture with a series of startling episodes that display the skill, both of himself and his superb horse. In "Silver Valley," he is an aviator and does equally thrilling stunts in the air.

The story is the usual whirlwind of hasty episodes, with a heroine who requires to be rescued several times, a gang of bandits, a gold chest, and a brawny, brainy hero. Dorothy Dwan has the role as the heroine, with an excellent supporting cast.

One of the entertaining "Collegians" pictures accompanies the big picture, and a number of shorter reels.

Subway to Run Through Boneyards In Catacombs Beneath Paris Cellars

PARIS, Dec. 23 (United Press).—The ghastliest subway in the world soon will be run through a charnel house of six million skulls and countless millions of bones of Parisians who have died in the course of centuries

Engineers now are tracing a path through the famous Catacombs for a subway which is to relieve the congested traffic of the southern section of Paris. Wherever possible the bones will be untouched, but the subway will be walled in to cut off the view of tiers upon tiers of loose bones.

Drills and electric trip-hammers are pounding away in the cavern which was the burial place of millions of mysteries as well as millions of dead. For generations thieves have used the Catacombs for their lair, knowing that they were safe there. It would take veritable regiments of gendarmes to corner them in this vast underground city of the dead

The Catacombs originally were hollowed out as a quarry. Then they were used as a depository for skeletons dug from Paris cemeteries which were later turned into building lots.

The skulls were built into pyramids and the bones laid crossways to form walls. They are remarkably well preserved.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE WAY TO LEARN.

The game of bridge is much too deep
For my poor mind to comprehend.
I find it very hard to keep
The lead, or even keep a friend.
The other man can make a deuce
Do more for him that I a king.
I often murmur, "What's the use?"
I just can't seem to get the thing.

The game of bridge my youngster plays
The neighbors say is pretty good,
And how he learned its rules and ways
I never really understood.
I asked him how it was he won,
The proper play he always picked.
And got this answer from my son:
"I learned to play by getting licked."

The game of bridge, the game of life,
Are not so different, I guess.
They're both a battle, both a strife
Of brains and courage, more or less
The ones who won were not the men
The mule Misfortune never kicked.
When down they just got up again
And learned to play by getting licked.

LIFT LOCK IS AGE'S MARVEL

Listed in Christmas War Cry as One of Canada's Wonders.

PICTURE SHOWN

The Christmas number of The Salvation Army War Cry has a reference to Peterborough in which it names the Lift Lock as one of the "Seven Wonders of Canada." The other six are: Niagara Falls, Cap-lans Canyon, Quebec Bridge, Welland Canal, Toronto's Board Walk, and the Sulphur Pool at Banff.

On another page are illustrated the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, and illustrations of seven wonders of this modern age fill a third page. The latter are: Submarine, automobile, airship, X-ray, trans-Atlantic telephone, gramaphone, and radio.

WARSAW NEWS

WARSAW, Dec. 22.—On Friday evening, December 16th, the Warsaw Women's Institute held its first social evening. Despite the wild storm which started a little after four o'clock, and lasted until after eight, nearly all the members were present, with their husbands, brothers or friends and a few guests who were visiting at members' homes, also any children who could not well be left home alone. About half-past seven those present, numbering about eighty, sat down to supper. Mrs. Herrington led in singing grace. The supper consisted of hot roast goose, mashed potatoes, salads, jellies, apple sauce, pickles, bread, butter, pie, cake and tea.

The tables were prettily decorated with runners of green and red, plants and flowers. The hall was festive with Christmas decorations.

After the wants of the inner man had been supplied, Mr. Currie, as toastmaster proposed the toast to the King, when the National Anthem was sung. In proposing the toast to the Country, he showed that Canadians were not necessarily those born in this new country, but are those who are loyal to Canada, and do all in their power to make Canada a worthwhile country.

In replying to this toast, Dr. Munro humorously said he had had a year and a half to prepare his reply. Canada is developing into a country with her own habits and characteristics, and these are, in part, determined by her boundaries. The name of Canada is often associated with the great mass of territory, with its wealth in many forms. The greatest wealth is the citizenship. The greatness of Canada is the greatness of its people. Canadians must be careful not to lose hold of the best things, and so become filled with materialism. The Women's Institute has done much to hold up the ideals. They are sometimes considered cranks, but if people are left to themselves they deteriorate.

The doctor ended by saying that Canada has more varied and greater opportunities than any other country on the face of the earth, and if we put first things first, it will develop into a great and noble country.

In proposing the toast to the federated Women's Institutes, Mr. Currie said he knew the Women's Institute only as he had seen it in Warsaw. But, in his reading he had found it is not new. It was common in Rome, and in England, even in the Middle Ages. It took four forms, namely: social, political, practical and professional. These forms still exist, though now it stands principally for the practical. He said it looks after the little things of the community. It started the first rural circulating library. It looks into social conditions, sanitary conditions, child labor and evidences of its work are seen all around. He thought true religion lies in the work the Institute does.

In replying, Mrs. Thomas Cooper, member of the Federated Board of Women's Institutes, said she appreciated the honor of being asked to reply to the toast. She spoke of her kindly reception as a member of the provincial federated board, which numbers seventeen members. In Ontario there are one thousand and seventeen branches, with thirty-five thousand, seven hundred members. The work of the board is mostly planning revisions for the hand-book, which must be exact, receiving and passing resolutions. The organization known as Women's Institute is non-partisan, and non-sectarian. The society oroginated at Stoney Creek, thirty years ago, for the purpose of studying and exchanging ideas on homes and home-making. This was the first organization of rural women in the world, and it is impossible for any living person to estimate the magnitude of its usefulness.

Mrs. Hoodless was the first president, and her name will go down in history as that of a public benefactress.

The motto is For Home and Country, and that includes about everything in the world.

That small organization, like a tiny seed, has grown and spread to a mighty tree, so that now there are about three thousand branches in Canada.

A branch was started in England in nineteen-sixteen, and now there are four thousand branches. Their official organ, "Home and Country" has a circulation of more than thirty-five thousand. To be a thorough Institute member, is to be a really good person.

When he proposed the toast to the Warsaw branch of the Institute, Mr. Currie spoke of the banquet being held, which was an experiment, and was proving a success. He thought, perhaps, he might learn some of the secrets which happen behind the scenes.

Mrs. Weller, President of the Warsaw branch, replied that she thought the women were as able to keep their secrets as the men, but the motto for the Institute is "For Home and Country," and that means service, and that is what they try to do. In proposing the toast to the youth of the community, Mr. Currie spoke of the hackneyed saying that the youth of today are the men of tomorrow. These lively, mischievous children will soon assume control.

Mr. Herrington replied that he was full of optimism. Some thought the children have too much leeway, and if so, it is probably the parents' fault. Perhaps there are no more excesses than in the past. To-day there is a wider range. It is a far cry from Old Dobbin to the automobile.

Young people may be doing more thinking for themselves. When brought face to face with the great things of life, he finds, on the whole, there is a greater response.

The toast-master decided there should be a toast to man, and asked Mr. Anderson to reply, which he did by telling some of his inimitably funny stories, causing, as usual, a good laugh.

Community singing, and a solo by Mr. Henry Batten, comprised the musical program.

Everyone present pronounced the innovation a decided success in every way.

There was one thing to mar the joy of those who had the management of the supper, and that was the cold, crowded kitchen. All who were assisting there thought if the Council could just have to prepare a supper there, they would see the need of a new kitchen.

THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR — XLI — by Nicholas Afonsky

Captain Rene Fonck was the premier French ace, with 75 victories credited to him, more than any other Allied pilot. He worked most successfully at a great height—above 20,000 feet—and sometimes forced his enemies down without firing a single shot. He earned the title of the Allies' King of the Air.

Captain George Guynemer, another great French ace, tried as a schoolboy to enlist in the infantry, but was declared too young and small. So he got work as a laborer in an aviation camp. The aviators taught him to fly and he soon became a pilot. He was an intrepid fighter and sometimes was in ten combats a day.

At first he led a charmed life, for he was forced several times to land in No Man's Land with his plane shot to pieces. But one day—after his fifty-third victory—he started in pursuit of a German plane and was seen fighting above Ypres. No more was heard of him. Even after the War, nothing could be learned of his fate.

Charles Nungesser was another of the great French aces, credited with 43 planes and balloons. He was badly injured several times, and once, in hospital, was offered a discharge and urged not to fly again. But he refused and returned on crutches to rejoin his regiment. He made many more flights.

The great new sense of Justice which came into the world nineteen hundred and twenty-seven years ago recreated the faith of man in his fellows. All humanitarian service goes back to the Birth at Bethlehem.

Memories of an Angel Song

In the holy hush of morning o'er my soul there steals along,
Wafted down the changeful ages, mem'ries of an angel song.
Humble shepherds in the nighttime, watch were keeping o'er their fold
When a light shone round about them, flooding all the hills with gold.

Fear and trembling seised upon them as an angel by them stands,
Bringing such a gladsome message to the near and distant lands;
"Fear ye not, behold I bring you and to people all this word, Born today in David's city is a Saviour, Christ the Lord."

Suddenly a Heav'nly chorus with the Angel then was seen
Paising God and saying, "Glory in the highest to the King,"
And to men ere they departed for the Heav'nly land above,
Peace and Goodwill sang they sweetly; telling of a Father's love.

When the wondrous sight had faded, spake those shepherds, "Let us on Even now to Bethlehem's village at the bursting of the dawn
See this thing which God revealeth unto us by Angels fair";
And they found the little Jesus in a manger over there.

For no room was found to shelter at the Inn the Promised One
Nor His loving mother, Mary, watching o'er her first-born Son.
What was told them by the Angels, made the shepherds known abroad,
All who heard were filled with wonder, Mary pondered on her God.

Then the Shepherds, home returning, glorified the Lord for all
They had heard and seen that morning, from the Angels to the stall.
Unto us a child was given; unto us a Son was born,
When the Angels hailed the shepherds on that first glad Christmas morn.

—Molly Bonny, Havelock, Ont.

CHRISTMAS CONCERTS

ST. ANDREW'S UNITED S. S.

(Contributed.)

The annual Christmas supper and entertainment was held last night in the Sunday school hall. The usual crowd of old children and young children were present. Some who had been attending St. Andrew's Sunday school for nearly forty years were there, and some who had been attending for about forty days were there, too. Supper arrangements were in the hands of Mr. Kerr's Bible class, with Mrs. B. McNeely as convenor, and enough for all, with abundance to spare, covered the tables. All Sunday school scholars and workers and parents of wee scholars had supper.

At 6.45, upstairs in the assembly room, moving pictures began, provided by Mr. Roper's and Mr. McNeeley's classes, showing people in all sorts of awkard and troublesome situations, some in love, some married, and so forth. Industrial pictures, educating in value and most interesting were also shown.

The last number was a beautiful and fascinating pageant put on by the C.G.I.T. class of St. Andrew's, in which the immortal story of Christmas was depicted in picture, song and story. It formed a quiet and reverent close to the program of the evening.

Of course the big show of the night was given by all sort of little people. Little folk gave big recitations and some big folk gave little recitations, and there were some performers whose contribution consisted mainly of two "bows," short and very jerky, with a verse or two between just to keep the two "bows" from getting too close together. Every number was interesting and altogether delightful and just beat all to pieces any other program that you can think of. Here is the true humor and pathos of life and its mystery, too.

Then came Santa Claus with real whiskers and fur coat. It is understood that Santa had extreme difficulty in arriving on time and that without the timely assistance of Ernie Reid and Harry Dickin would not have arrived at all. It is reported that these two gentlemen dug him out of all sorts of snow drifts and other trouble, and by dint of indefatigable exertions enabled him to arrive just in the nick of time. One hesitates to contemplate the horror of what would have happened if he had been say twenty minutes late. He was accorded a reception which must have been hard on the roof and on nervous people and was most acceptable to Santa Claus and all others. It was a big night, Superintendent J. A. McKone was in the chair and seemed very happy as he had a right to be.

To-night (Friday) the C. G. I. T. class led by Mr. McKone, are giving a supper to another group of children, some 200 in number— those who had summer camp in Jackson Park. Mrs. McKone reported that she was still a bit short of Christmas presents and would be glad to receive telephone messages of help.

On Sunday morning parents and children will join in a Christmas worship service at 11 o'clock. There will be no Sunday school in the afternoon.

LILY LAKE SCHOOL.

The annual entertainment and Christmas tree of Lily Lake School was held on Wednesday night, with a good attendance. The decorations were carried out in the appropriate colors of red and green. The program was given almost entirely by the children of the school, trained under the able direction of their teacher, Miss Helen Stuart.

F. Clarke, who is always a favorite with the audience, gave several banjo selections, and among these was a darkey interpretation of "A Watermelon Growin' on Dat Vine," which pleased the audience very much. Little Eric Mason was loudly applauded for his vocal solo, "Miss Fogaty's Christmas Cake," with encore. J. A Middleton, in his able manner, acted as chairman for the evening. The following is the program:

Opening chorus—"How Do You Do, Ladies and Gent.'s," by children of the school.

Dialogue—"The Cobbler," Jack Rowland and Hector Latchford.

The Auction Sale—Reading a Sale Bill, Cecil Hancock.

Christmas play—"Why Santa Comes in December."

At the close of the program presents and candy were distributed from the Christmas tree. Mr. C. Ferguson successfully impersonated the good Saint. Mr. Middleton moved a vote of thanks to Miss Stuart to which she replied, thanking the parents and friends for their support. C. J. Hancock moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Clarke who so willingly contributed to the program. The singing of the National Anthem brought the evening to a close.

BRAILEY'S SCHOOL

A very pleasant evening was spent last night by parents and friends, when a successful Christmas concert was given in Brailey's Hall by the pupils of the school. These children were trained under the leadership of their teacher, Miss R. Tully. R. T. Lillico acted as chairman for the evening. The following is the program: Opening Chorus by School. "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear." Chairman's Address, R. T. Lillico. Recitation, Elizabeth Lillico. Solo, "Away in a Manger," Mary Robson. Play, "Their Magic Hour." Guitar Selection and encore, Donald Duncan. Drill, "The Gloomy Gloops." Recitation, Earl Hanbidge. Dialogue, "Cora's Callers." Vocal Duet, Jean and Jack McGowan. Dialogue, "Miss Gregg's Christmas Orphans." Doll Drill, by some of the boys. Recitation, Norman Lillico. Song, "Miss Fogarty's Christmas Cake," with encore, Eric Mason. Piano Solo, Mary Hendren. Song by School, "Hurry Mr. Clock." Dialogue, "Pa's New Housekeeper," given by five young people of the community.

At the close of the program the presents from the Christmas Tree were distributed by Santa Claus.

SMILE THE WHILE YOU TRAVEL.

The "Vancouver Express" is by no means a joke, but you cannot help smiling when its porters hand your baggage down because the smile has become a habit. It may be that the smile is infectious and you caught it from the porter when he showed you to your berth, but one thing certain is that having travelled on the "Vancouver Express" nothing has happened to take the smile away. The service, the cuisine, the equipment, the road-bed, the gentle-handling of this million-dollar train have all contributed to your happiness—that is if you have acquired the habit of travelling Canadian Pacific between Toronto and Vancouver.

The "Vancouver Express," the continents standard of Railway efficiency, leaves Union Station at 9.00 p.m. to-night and every night of the week.

For rates, reservations, tickets, etc., consult J. Skinner, C.P.A., 343 George street, or any Canadian Pacific ticket agent.

NEW ROSE ROOM

Cheu's Rose Room at 334 George Street has been re-opened after alterations and decorating, and the interior presents a very attractive and up-to-date appearance. A number of stalls have been added, making the total number now sixteen, and finished in a cheerful, bright green British Columbia fir, that good-looking wood that harmonizes so well with the color scheme used on the walls, the dado painted in dark green, with an upper portion of pale pink, and a border of green and gold. The work, which is very artistic, has been done by Mr. Wm. Thomas, painter and decorator, and two painted panels on the upper wall have been added by Messrs. Harris and Boddy, following out the attractive scheme of using peacocks as a central idea. The sidelights are shaded with rose and two post lights have been added in the ornamental scissors point work and Oriental designs, to follow out the pagoda-like effect of the electroliers. Green and gold silk curtains hang at the entrance of the ladies' room and the windows, where a tiny roasted sucking-pig is the central theme, surrounded by quantities of iced Christmas cakes and bon-bons, are draped with dark rose velvet hangings. Tall palms add a finishing touch and the floor has been done with tiled green and white linoleum. Altogether, the renovated Rose Room is a very attractive and interesting place, and the excellent and bountiful meals served there have a fitting setting in the artistic color scheme and spotless woodwork and walls. The counter, which formerly occupied a position near the entrance, has been moved back, giving the interior the appearance of a metropolitan restaurant.

5,000 PILGRIMS VISIT GROTTO AT BETHLEHEM

Patriarch of Jerusalem Will Officiate at Masses To-morrow.

OTHER CEREMONIES.

Symbol of Christ Child Will Be Laid in Manger—Grotto Very Small.

BETHLEHEM, Palestine, Dec. 24 (United Press).—Pilgrims of all sects of Christianity were trudging the road from Jerusalem today to pay homage at the birthplace of Christ. The Latin patriarch made the journey in state, and more than 5,000 pilgrims accompanied him on the five-mile trip to Bethlehem, where almost all the population was waiting to greet him. As the procession passed villages along the route, shepherds with the flocks they were unable to abandon straggling along the roadside beside them joined in the march to the birthplace of Christ.

Upon hi sarrival at the church, the patriarch will don the sacrificial robes and prepare for two Masses to be held during the day; the final one terminating at 1 p.m. During the day pilgrims from all parts of the world, many of them American prelates, crowded into the basilica built around the grotto; where, according to legend, the Saviour of the Christian world was born and where at midnight tonight the patriarch was to conduct the first Mass of Christmas Day. At 2 o'clock tomorrow morning the great procession, led by the patriach and the apostolic delegate, will proceed with great pomp to the grotto, where a symbol of the Christ Child will be laid in a manger to remain during the Christmas holiday.

The grotto, so tiny that only a few of the many who try will be able to enter it—is beneath the surface of the earth. It is lighted by fifteen lamps; four representing the Latin church, five the Armenian, and six the Greek. They burn around a vermillion star fitted into a marble pavement, which bears the simple inscription in Latin, "Here, of the Virgin Mary, Jesus Christ was born."

LITTLE ONES EXPECT SANTA

But Nothing in the Larder and Few Clothes in the House.

FATHER A VETERAN.

A little wooden shack—father and mother and six children, the eldest twelve years of age and the youngest three, with a pair of twins in between—bright children with clean faces and curly heads—the boy of twelve wiping off the stove with a wet rag and the father mopping up the floor—nothing much in the house and still less in the larder—a picture of Christ on the wall, a sinner pleading with upraised hands at His feet—no church affiliations ("I can't go to church in clothes like these")—the father a man who fought for Canada when the Great War made it necessary—no clean linen, no boots for the children—smiles on their small faces at the thought of Santa Claus and a shake of curly heads at an offer to take any one of them to a home where they would be well fed and clothed—little hands hanging to the mother's cotton skirt and the eldest boy forgetting that he was a man long enough to turn his face to the wall to hide big tears that came through a forced smile—and a good deal of love for the parents—

AND—a baby coming to-day or to-morrow—

Anyone who would like to contribute anything—anything at all—linen or flannelette or clothes or food or fuel—is asked to telephone 2452W or 788W and things will be gladly called for.

Victor Caban, 68 Auburn Street, whose suitcase was stolen in the Toronto Union Station on Thursday night while he was on his way home from Christie Street Hospital, has received the suit case and other parcels and most of the contents. These were recovered by H. Harper, C.P.R. officer at the Union Station. However, the money, a pair of trousers, a new dress for Mrs. Caban, a rubber sheet, and one toy were not found.

FIRE MARSHAL HEARS APPEAL

W. W. Theobald Ordered By Fire Chief To Make Changes at Apartments.

CONTESTS ORDER.

Fire-Marshal E. P. Heaton was in the city yesterday hearing the appeal against the order which Fire Chief George Gimblett served upon W. W. Theobald, 709 Water Street, requiring that certain improvements be made to the Theobald Apartments since the recent fire, and that the large frame building adjacent to the house be removed.

Mr. Heaton promised full and prompt consideration to the representations made and stated that he would give judgment the first of next week.

Mayor Holloway is also in receipt of a letter from the Fire Chief and City Engineer, in which several recommendations are made whereby the apartment may be made more fireproof. The letter is as follows:

Dear Sirs,

The recent fire in the Theobald Apartments at 709 Water Street emphasizes the many unsatisfactory and unsafe conditions existing in this apartment house and the frame workshop at the rear and adjacent to it. Had the aforementioned fire occurred during the night while the occupants were asleep, the material damage would no doubt have been heavy, and there would likely have been serious loss of life.

In view of the foregoing we beg to submit the following observations for your consideration:

The workshop being of a very inflammable nature and being used as a private garage and kept in a very untidy condition, being strewn with straw and shavings, is in itself a menace in its present location.

The apartment building is of such construction and plan as to be a menace to life in case of fire.

There are no by-laws which authorise the correction of most of these faults.

We therefore respectfully recommend:

That the workshop be removed from the premises.

That the apartment house be put in a proper state of repair and that additional emergency exit facilities be provided.

That a by-law be passed to enable city officials to deal successfully with similar cases in the future.

CITY RINKS OPEN MONDAY MORNING

Ald. J. M. Greene Announces They Will Be Ready For Holiday.

When the mercury dropped early today the hopes of skaters went up accordingly. J. M. Greene, chairman of the city rinks committee, stated this morning that by Monday, the Christmas holiday, every rink in the city would be open to skaters. The cold wave has made this a certainty.

HAND GUIDES CLOCK.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—When the clock of the famous St. Paul's Cathedral broke down recently, the hands were moved by a man's finger in order that thousands of city clerks would not arrive late to work. Repairs took most of the day, and all that time a clockmaker with a watch before his eyes gradually moved the minute hand, second by second, until the mechanism was fixed.

The Season's Greetings

To its thousands of readers, young and old, in Peterborough and the surrounding district, The Examiner extends, on the eve of the anniversary of the most outstanding event of the world's history, its most cordial wishes for a gloriously happy Christmas.

It is difficult often to find words in which to adequately give expression to the depths of the feeling of goodwill and friendliness that prevails on the occasion of this most happy festival: It has all been said so many times that the words have become almost hackneyed and threadbare.

And yet there is a new magic every Christmas; selfishness is driven back in defeat; one's own interests become suddenly of less importance than usual; there is a thought for others, a desire to bring joy to people who have not been too fortunate in their battle with life, a pleasure in making children happy.

The world all at once becomes a happier place; we discover that those around us, those we meet at work or at play are fine people with qualities that somehow or other we have underestimated.

Friendliness is in the air: It seems to shine out from the eyes of the folks on the street, it radiates everywhere, and we are all happier beings because of this spirit of Christmas that gets into the hearts of even the most hard-boiled amongst us.

The Examiner's Christmas greeting to its readers includes the hope that it will be possible for us to catch up some of this wonderful atmosphere of love and goodwill, and carry it through the New Year so that this community will be a happier, more friendly neighborhood than ever before, and so that in the hearts of us all not only over the Christmas season, but throughout the months ahead, there will be a store of kindly feelings toward each other that will make life more glorious and more complete.

Too often, as the poet said:

"We ring the bells and we raise the strain,
We hang up garlands everywhere,
And bid the tapers twinkle fair,
And feast and frolic—and then we go
Back to the same old lives again."

Many Proposed As Candidates For Aldermen

Twenty-one Nominated at Meeting Held in Council Chamber Last Night to Contest Five Seats on City Council—Retiring Five Again in Field.

FIVE OF THOSE NOMINATED FILE NECESSARY PAPERS TO ENTER RACE

Platforms Set Forth By Those Candidates Present at Meeting Lower Taxation, Health, and Employment of Local Labor Principal Points Advocated.

Twenty-one men were nominated last night for election as Aldermen, five of whom are to be elected. The nomination meeting was well attended, all the benches in the gallery of the Council Chamber being filled, and many of those nominated were present to speak after the lists were closed.

The nominations came in little bunches. Ald. W. J. Hancock was the first to be mentioned, while papers for Aldermen G. A. Macdonald and C. H. Ackerman followed quickly. The others came in two or three at a time, and at 8.00 o'clock, with the time half gone, fifteen were in. Six more followed, but the last ten or twelve minutes produced no results.

Five of those nominated qualified last night. Ald. R. S. Cotton was the first, signing his declaration before the nominations had closed, as he was in a hurry to catch a train. Others signing their papers before going home were J. R. Paquette, Stanley A. Lowe, D. J. Holland, and George A. Macdonald.

Those nominated, with their proposers and seconders, were:

Wilbert J. Hancock, Auctioneer, by V. Eastwood and E. F. Reid.

Three Nominated For Reeveship of North Monaghan

Two Named For Deputy-Reeve at Municipal Nominations for the Township of North Monaghan Held in May's School Yesterday Afternoon.

SEVEN CANDIDATES NOMINATED TO CONTEST SEATS FOR COUNCIL

Fire Protection By-law, Park Street Drain, Road Improvements and Granting of Strip of Land Along Lansdowne Street to Exhibition Board Criticized By Speakers

Three candidates were nominated for Reeve, two for Deputy-Reeve and seven for Council at the municipal nominations for the Township of North Monaghan, held in May's School yesterday afternoon.

Reeve
R. T. Lillico
T. M. Hunter.
H. B. Rye.

Deputy-Reeve
Robert A. Dobbin.
W. G. Waterman.

Council
W. G. Waterman.
Andrew Kent
William Stevens.
Herbert Bourne.
George Patton.
William Whitfield.
John Williams.

Following the official nomination, Bruce Johnston was the honored choice of the ratepayers that filled the schoolroom to capacity, to act as chairman. All the nominated candidates were called upon to address the gathering.

Ex-Reeve H. B. Rye criticized the council of 1927 for the fire protection by-law, as he maintained that the suburban section should not be taxed for fires, but that those citizens desiring fire protection should sign an agreement with the city council, and if fire protection was needed for their property they should pay for it. T. M. Hunter declared that he was the only one of the old council who supported the proposal of the city council in July, whereby the city would bear 60 per cent. of the cost of Park street drain and the township forty.

Fire By-law Criticised.

From other speakers the fire protection by-law, Park street drain, road improvements and the granting of the strip of land along Lansdowne street to the Exhibition Board received severe criticism.

R. T. Lillico, the first speaker, when called upon, thanked his mover and seconder for the honor they had conferred upon him, but he announced that he was retiring from the council for the time being. He discussed the affairs of the township in a very business-like manner, explaining that county and township rates were reduced five-tenths of a mill each in this year's tax bill, but the general school rate was higher on account of the extra teachers required in May's school. The council also had to pay several outstanding bills during the year that were

HICKMAN WARNS AGAINST CRIME

Issues Statement To Young Men Telling of Consequences of Wrong.

MOTHER STAYS HOME.

PENDLETON, Oregon, December 24 (Canadian Press). — A warning to young men to avoid ways of crime was given by William Hickman in a signed statement given out at the City Jail here to-day. The statement follows:

"This affair has gained nation-wide publicity, and the great reward and the search by the people of the West Coast show the opposition of the American people to criminal tendencies. Kidnapping and savage murders are the worst of America's crimes, and everything should be done to prevent any one from interfering in any way with the liberty and life of American citizenship.

"Young men and college students should consider the Parker case as a typical crime of the worst that can happen when a young man gradually loses interest in family, friends, and his own honesty.

"The young men of this country can see that I can pass as an ordinary young man as far as outward appearances go.

"Crime in its simplest definition is to have money without work and enjoy the same place in society as other people and still show no honest effort or intention to go right.

"Young men, when crime has once overcome your will power to be honest and straight, you are a menace to society. Take my example to illustrate this. See how I tried to get what every young man wants, but in becoming a criminal to do so I put my own life in a mess and the way out is dark.

"I hope I can do some good by giving you this warning. Think it over. See my mistake. Be honest and upright. Respect law. If you do these things you'll be happier in the end and you will have gained much more from life.

(Signed) "W. Edward Hickman.

BRAVADO DISAPPEARS.

PENDLETON, Oregon, December 24 (Canadian Press). — The turning of the tide in the criminal career of William Edward Hickman began to take effect to-day on the kidnapper of little Marian Parker. As he fought in his cell for peace of mind by audibly reiterating again and again that he abducted but did not murder the twelve-year-old girl, he lost the appearance of bravado which had supported him through his capture near here on Thursday and the ensuing ordeal in which he confessed his participation in one of the most remarkable crimes in the history of the west.

The torture of bearing the role of an evil genius, whose deeds have all but cast him beyond the realm of sympathy began to show when his dark eyes lost their lustre. He winked as he assured himself aloud that he did not kill the girl he kidnapped. He tried to assure himself that he was "decent," that he did not drink or dissipate, that he did not associate with women.

VISIT ABANDONED.

KANSAS CITY, December 24 (Canadian Press). — Mrs. Eva Hickman temporarily has abandoned plans to visit her son Edward, confessed kidnapper of Marian Parker. This was announced to-day by Col. Charles Edward, former Chief of Police here, to whom Edward Hickman was paroled after he was convicted of forgery while employed at the Los Angeles bank of which Marian's father is an official.

Garments Found.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.) — The discovery of stockings and underclothing believed to have been worn by little Marian Parker when she was kidnapped and slain here was announced by the police to-day. The garments were found at the rear of a residence on Pasadena avenue.

Woman Involved

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press). — Finger-prints found in the Bellevue Arms apartment here of William E. Hickman, confessed kidnapper of little Marian Parker, today definitely connected a woman with the case of the murder of the child, police announced.

NOTHING HEARD FROM AVIATORS

Dawn Overdue at Harbor Grace—Not Reported Since Last Night.

WEATHER CLEAR.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 24. Canadian Press. — The Dawn, Mrs. Frances Grayson's amphibian plane, which left Roosevelt Field, N.Y., at 5.07 p.m., yesterday, for Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, was not heard from during the night or early to-day.

The last authentic report up to 9 o'clock to-day was that the plane had passed over the French Cable Telegraph Company's station at Orleans, Mass., on Cape Cod, at 7.15 p.m.

Radio stations along the New England Coast and in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, kept a sharp watch for signals from the Dawn's wireless apparatus, but heard nothing. The weather was clear over the entire course with a brisk northwest wind along the New England shore.

In Boston it was the coldest morning of the winter. Apparently it was warmer in Newfoundland, as an early morning despatch from Harbor Grace said that it was "not freezing" and that the wind was very light. The plane had been expected to reach Harbor Grace soon after sunrise.

Warned Against Flight.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)— The Western Union Telegraph Company announced to-day that its station at Heart's Content, Newfoundland, advised that a complete check from all stations along the coast failed to show any trace of Mrs. Grayson's plane, Dawn.

Mrs. Grayson undertook the flight against the advice of the weather bureau, Dr. James Kimball, meteorologist, told the Associated Press.

He expressed slight hope that the Dawn, despite its pontoons, could long withstand the buffeting of the waves if, as aviation observers agreed seemed likely, it made a forced landing during the night somewhere between Cape Cod and the coast of Nova Scotia. With Mrs. Grayson were Oskar Omdal, pilot, Brice Goldsborough, navigator, and Fred Koehler, engine expert.

Search Fails.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)— Every possible effort to locate Mrs. Francis Wilson Grayson's plane Dawn, which sailed last night from New York on a flight to Harbor Grace, Nfld., had proved futile up to an early hour this afternoon.

THE WEATHER

The day before Christmas brought the first zero weather of the present season. At daylight this morning the temperature was at 6 degrees below zero. Yesterday's highest mark was 30 degrees. We have been favored with good weather this Christmastide—fair sleighing, no severe temperatures and an entire absence of storms. At this time I take the opportunity of extending to each reader of these little notes my personal greetings for a very happy Christmas, and also a merry one (in reason), for I am aware that there are opportunties for merriment of an artificial nature now that we have not had for ten or twelve years.—W. P.

MARRIED.

JOHNSON—MORENCY.

On December 20 1927, at Sayre, Pennsylvania, U.S.A., Margaret Morency, formerly of Peterborough, to John Johnson, of Rochester, N.Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will reside in Rochester, N.Y.

"Behold, I Bring You Good Tidings Of Great Joy," - - Luke 2: 10

THE UNRESTING, UNHASTING FLIGHT OF TIME has again brought us to the season which has everywhere writ large over it festivity, holiday-making, gifts. The time-honored greeting, "A Merry Christmas," rings out from many loving hearts and loses nothing of its kindliness or sincerity with the passing years. The great day of the year falls this time on the Sunday, hence the services at the various places of worship will perhaps gain in heartiness and joy. Thousands of our boys and girls rejoice in freedom for awhile from tasks, lessons and examinations. The teachers alike will welcome the relief that is promised from the stress and the strain that is involved in teaching the young ideas how to shoot! The air is full of the Christmas feeling and the Christmas expectation. In tens of thousands of young hearts is a lively hope that Father Christmas will not pass them by, but from his varied and seemingly exhaustless store leave some present that shall make them glad, and add to their treasures.

CHRISTMAS PAYS.

That mythical individual, "Santa Claus," is too valuable a patron of special trade not to be cultivated, and nearly every store offers to provide him with suitable gifts for his expected visit. Gifts to suit every taste and meet the condition of every purse. Thus the "glad tidings of great joy" that were borne on the notes of angelic song 2,000 years ago seem more and more to be translated into forms of material good and sensuous gratification.

CHRISTMAS PAGANIZED.

Shame on us if the anniversary of the coming of a "Saviour" who is Christ the Lord should be known simply or chiefly by its eating and drinking and holiday-making. This were verily to paganize it!

In this lull to the din and strife of industrial competition—this respite from the toil to which the mass of us are bound—with the delightful days that will come to myriads of souls, shall no thought of that way back to the Father, that that Life has brought, that revelation of the Father's heart, of the Father's mind, that He became—that hidden spring of joy that He discovers, that secret of the passing understanding peace, that He brings, that hope which spans with its rainbow the darkest storm cloud of life, enter with its purifying and uplifting inspiration, so that

We may carry music in our hearts,
Through dusky lane and wrangling mart,
Plying our daily task with busier feet,
Because our secret souls a holy strain repeat, assured that the passing years can never spoil that holy strain or make obsolete that priceless gift it records, for "Is it not the same yesterday, today, and for ever?"

CROWDED OUT.

If we would but stop long enough to catch the significance of these words, "And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn," we might be brought to see that there is a sense in which the Son of God is still being crowded out.

When the King went to Edinburgh to thank the Scottish mothers for sons sacrificed in battle, the place of meeting was so wonderfully decorated that, in commenting upon this fact, some of the newspapers said, "We could scarcely see the King for the decorations." And that is what often happens at Christmas: we can scarcely see the Christ for the decorations.

THE SPECTATOR.

Many years ago The Spectator had an article on "How Would Jesus Spend Christmas?" in the course of which some strong speech was used, part of which I might very properly paraphrase in an attempt to bring it up-to-date.

If the Christ, who ought to be the centre and the circumference of Christmas when it is at its best, were among us at this season of the year He would not devote the time to any pursuits which would encourage His friends and followers to indulge in selfish luxury and the culture of carnal appetites for mere personal pleasure, or for exclusive social intercourse in narrow circles only.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

If Jesus were to come to Peterborough at this Christmas-tide, we may feel assured that He would not patronize with His presence any sphere either of ordinary worship or of fashionable pleasure. Wherever selfishness is in the ascendant, either in conventional religion or in social organizations, there would be no place for the Son of Man in His reappearance. No welcome would be given to such an archangelic epiphany. He would be an absentee from the gatherings of all who are the representatives of self-righteousness without any knowledge of self-sacrifice. Ritual would be by Him ignored, and clerical assumptions would be to Him repellent as when He and His apostles encountered that sacerdotal bigotry which is the most refined form of spiritual arrogance.

WHAT JESUS WOULD DO.

If He came into our midst this Christmas He would again be the friend of the poor, the helpless and the sad. An ideal Christmas is one which provides comfort for the needy and brings gladness and joy to brighten homes from which earthly lights have gone out. I am sure that Jesus, if He came to our city this Christmas-tide, would spend the anniversary of His nativity not in the solaces of ease and mansions of overflowing affluence but in spots shadowed with misery, darkened by despair, and blackened by guilt.

WHAT WILL YOU DO?

In His absence Christ expects every Christian to be an agent of mercy. The true Christian is an opportunist in the only good sense of that term. Indeed, he is the only good opportunist. The function of the true follower of Jesus is to utilize every possible occasion of making his own life a blessing to other lives. What better opportunity does the whole year bring for the exercise of the choicest forms of altruism than Christmas? It is at this season that hearts are softened, the better sentiments come uppermost in the vast majority of human souls, and the thoughts of God Himself are willingly admitted by those who at other seasons open their minds chiefly to earth's sordid inspirations. If Jesus were here He would make His presence the centre of all the best agencies for ameliorating the woes and satisfying the wants of humanity. Let each one seek to make himself in his own degree a Christ-like centre of kindness and sympathy, as a humble representative of the absent Christ.

And in conclusion, we wish all our readers, in no formal way, the gladness that comes through vital experience of all that Christmas suggests.

—Allan Fairbairn.

THE DEITY OF CHRIST

THE inspired writers give Him all the titles of the Most High God. They call Him over and over by the uncommunicable name of Jehovah, never given to any creature. They ascribe to Him all the attributes and all the works of God. So that we need not scruple to pronounce Him God of God, Light of Light, very God of very God; in glory equal with the Father, in majesty co-eternal.

—John Wesley.

Story of a Little Song

By A. E. F. A.

IT is snowing softly on old London. "A white Christmas—it's going to be a white Christmas!" cries one beaming neighbour to another. Yes, it is going to be a white Christmas. And Londoners do not see one so often that they fail to remark on it, as if it were some miracle—which, indeed, it is.

It is a miracle to those gentlemen, beaver-hatted, flower - waistcoated, who are hurrying home laden with countless odd-shaped packages and a sort of guilty expression as if they expect to be discovered in some dreadful crime. It is a miracle to those hoop-skirted ladies who hurry through crowded shops at the last moment like frantic spirits. But, above all, it is a miracle to those little children who gaze up, open-mouthed, into the sky as if expecting some further miracle to follow.

And it is a miracle, too, I suppose, to the old woman selling chestnuts by the glowing brazier on the corner; just as, no doubt, it is a miracle to the fashionable people who are entering their carriage by the lighted arcade.

Christmas is a time of miracles. It is the feast of the greatest miracle of all—the miracle of love.

Far from the buzzing shops a man is walking slowly down a quiet residential street. He shuffles the snow as he goes, aimlessly, with the toe of his boot. The pale light of a street lamp reveals him as he passes. His clothes are undeniably ragged, but arranged with that curious, almost defiant, care which one observes in out-at-the-elbow actors. His hands are thrust deep into the sagging pockets of a distinctly inadequate surcoat. His shoulders are stooped, while his eyes are fastened fixedly upon those shoes with which he pushes the snow, and which are barely held intact by two pieces of tape. His cheeks are pale and sunken. About his mouth are ugly, cynical lines.

He looks as if he didn't believe in miracles. Why should he believe in them?

He has been ill, too. He feels a spell of dizziness come over him, and leans upon an iron railing, his wet sleeve over his eyes as if to shut out something.

There are many things, indeed, he would like to shut out, but cannot. . . .

He can remember well enough the foppish young actor on the New York stage; the brilliant young critic and dramatist. Oh, what a success he is! The whole town is talking about him. What a future! Yes, he is a success—very much of a success. He has made up his mind what he will do; he will go to London; this place is too small for him. And he does go. He sets out on the long, perilous voyage amidst flowers and huzzas.

London!—there is magic for you. But it had not been so easy at first. He had been lonely, too—ridiculously sentimental about it, into the bargain. He had written the words for a song then, he remembered. He always laughed later when he recalled that time. He hadn't thought himself such a mawkish fool! This song—it was all about home and its beauty and sanctity, and what-not rubbish. To be sure, he had been thinking of his own childhood home back there on Long Island, but—bah! Anyway, old Bishop had set it to music, and it had made quite a hit in the opera later on.

Later on . . . yes, what a triumph that "later on" had held for him. Forgotten were his petty successes back in New York; forgotten, his little time of loneliness. Everything paled before the new splendour. There was the great theatre—the glitter of jewels—the glare of lights—the tier upon tier of gallery—the brilliant throngs—the adulation of the crowd—the praise—the wealth. There were the mad parties after the final curtain—the beautiful women. What a time of movement that had been—feverish, exotic, glorious! The world was at his feet—and then. . . .

Yes, the tide ebbed—somehow, who knows? Things stood still. It was almost as if he awoke one morning from a wild dream. His friends were gone. He was unwanted. He had spent prodigiously, and now his funds were pitifully small. For weeks—or was it months?—he vainly trod the London streets. Then the illness came. . . .

There is a sound in his ears now as he stands by the railing. It is a sound which has come to him for several days: the dull sound of the oily waters of the Thames lapping against grey stone. He shudders, and vainly tries to clutch his ragged coat closer about him.

Then something happens there by the iron railing. A little strain of music comes singing its way on the snow-laden air. The body of the man stiffens, alert. He turns wonderingly.

There is a lighted window behind him. He regards it, a curious gleam in his eyes. There is music coming from within . . . voices singing. What is that? He strains forward as in a dream. Something seems to grip him. Why—why—those words—he knows those words—why he. . . .

"Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam. . . ."

Music. . . . The morning stars sang together before time began. Down

The Peerless Christ

HIS words have been the wonder of the world. Age has not dimmed their light, lessened their sweetness or diminished their force. Familiarity has not spoiled their freshness or their fragrance; life, though it has grown richer and more varied, has not outgrown their wisdom or superseded by fulfilling their ideals. Time and culture have called into the field of thought the wealth of many centuries and lands, but there have come no rivals to the words of Jesus. They shine as peerless as ever, the sweetest, calmest, simplest, wisest words ever spoken by man to men. So true are they, so mighty in their energy, so soft in their strength, so reasonable, so fitted to make life peaceful, gentle, happy and holy, that men who have wished not to believe the Christian religion have refused to part with the truths and consolation of Jesus.

"For Unto Us A Child Is Born, Unto Us A Son Is Given," - Isaiah 9: 6

THERE CAN BE NO REAL LOVE FOR GOD, which is unattended with love for man. The final test of a Christian's love is not the worship of God, but always the love of man for man. If the message of Him whose birth we celebrate at Christmas teaches us one thing above all others, it is not what we shall try to do for Him as person, but what we shall seek to do for one another. That is knowing Jesus and clearly understanding Him.

And whenever this true conception of His life and teaching is reached, there we find men and women thrilled with the passion of giving. The little child wakes on Christmas morning with his heart filled to overflowing with gladness, and by every gift in stocking, or beside cradle or bed, is taught anew the old, old lesson of love. Husband and wife, brother and sister, lover and sweetheart, friend and friend, as they receive their gifts are reminded once more that love is not a dream, but a reality—and a reality that grows more vital, more precious, and more enduring with years.

WHAT MAKES THE WHEELS GO?

WE found a fine thought well expressed. "What is an ideal?" asks a questioner. The answer is luminous with truth: "An ideal is the spark that keeps the machinery going." That's it, and it doesn't matter that the illustration is borrowed from the technology of the automobile business.

Practically every human creature has some sort of an ideal toward which he is working or for which he longs. Those who have no ideals have neither mind nor imagination. But for real men and women there is always the glow of the spark that keeps the machinery going. That tells the story of all worthy activity, of all progress. See that your ideal-spark is never extinguished.

AN OLD STORY.

SOME things can not be bought for money! That was the discovery made by a husband and wife when they offered $10,000 to be paid at their death to any satisfactory young woman who would live with them and take care of them to the end. They secured a girl who thought she would be willing to meet the conditions. However, she discovered that $10,000 was not enough to pay her for what was required; that was, celibacy and care of two old people.

But there are hundreds, if not thousands, of young women who are doing for nothing in Canada that for which this girl was to receive a considerable sum. There is doubtless no reader of this article who is not acquainted with one or more girls who are living at home and taking care of the old folks just because they need her care. Some of them are supporting a widowed mother or an invalid father with uncomplaining devotion, and there are young men equally unselfish.

No money could buy this service and no money could pay for it. The fact that it is rendered freely is one of the things which makes this wicked old world worth living in.

Hustling Days

HUSTLE is the motto of our civilization, and in its very nature it will wear us out before many generations pass by. It is all right to get a move on, but toward what are we moving? We hear it said that no one should retire from business, but keep at it, for the experience of doing nothing and waiting for the sunset will make a man miserable and hasten his end. There are lots to live for besides money or business. There are the women, the woods and the stars. By their side, business shrivels into an atom.—A. F.

THE MISTAKES OF RELATIVES.

TO blame a person for what his relatives have done is far from right.

Supposing your father, mother, brother or sister should do something disgraceful; would you feel that you were treated right if all your acquaintances shunned you on that account? Most certainly not. Why, then, should you hold your skirts so tightly, as if you might be contaminated by that other person whose relative has gone wrong?

It makes a lot of difference whether you are the one affected or whether it is someone else; and, with the majority of us, it is a case of having to have an experience along that line to realize what some of our own actions are doing to the other fellow.

When one member of a family goes wrong, the relatives have enough to bear. It is your duty to assist in making the burden lighter.

Perhaps you can think of some one whom you have dropped from your calling list because of trouble in her family. Show that you have a broader vision of life than you have displayed previously and treat her as if nothing had happened.

Is There a Santa Claus?

WE take pleasure in answering at once and thus prominently the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of The Sun:

Dear Editor:—
I am 8 years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus.
Papa says 'If you see it in The Sun it's so.'
Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?
VIRGINIA O'HANLON,
115 West Ninety-fifth St.

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseenable in the world.

You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, romance, can push aside that curtain and view the picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God! he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousands years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

The above was written by Francis P. Church and originally printed in The New York Sun, Sept. 21, 1897. The Sun makes a practise of reproducing this editorial each year just before Christmas.

Christ Divides The Centuries

WHO needs to be reminded that Christmas is once again with us, with all its glad re-unions happy associations and sacred memories? It is one thing upon which we are all agreed. Once again is there a brief pause in the fret and fever of daily life; kindly thoughts fill the mind, and in the calmer, clearer atmosphere, men catch a vision of heavenly glory, and listen while the angels sing. When you get to the real heart of Christmas its observance is a testimony to man's need of the spiritual, and to the strong hold that Christ has of the race.

Christ, by His advent, divides the centuries. He is, to use the fine phrase of the writer of Hebrews, the maker of the ages. B.C., A.D. are letters of tremendous significance. By His coming a new era began and a marvellous transformation effected. So it is well to observe Christmas, and in quiet, reverential mood to meditate on its significance.

As real as His first coming will the second be, but very different in character. Then He came in great humiliation; we wait for His glorious appearing. Almost incognito the King came the first time; a second time He comes in great glory. And, as at the first He ushered in a new era, so will He the second time. At His first coming the world was taken by surprise, so shall it be when He returns. But the fact is certain. Some great intervention there will be before the Golden Age is ushered in. The coming of the King is the only hope, both for the church and the world. All this, and much more, Christmas suggests. It commemorates a great fact; it glows with a magnificent promise. The first advent implies the second. The cross is the way to the throne. So, again we say, Christmas thrills with the joyous certainty of ultimate victory. It is a glad festival because of its memories; it is yet more glad because of its exultant hopes.—A. F.

NO SURPRISES.

No surprises developed at the nominations for the mayoralty and Utilities Commission yesterday, there being no names added to the list of those who had already declared their intention of entering the race.

Four well-known and highly-esteemed citizens are in the running in these contests, and interest in the campaign promises to be unusually high on that account.

Ald. Nagle Phelan, who has been a member of the Council for seven years, is competing for the honor of occupying the Mayor's chair against ex-Ald. R. Denne, who recently resigned from the Council to stake his political fortune upon the result of the mayoralty contest, and whose public service record includes twelve years on the Board of Education and three as Alderman.

For the Utilities Commission the candidates are W. H. Bradburn, Chairman of the Commission, who has had six years' experience as a Commissioner, and John Crane, who has served the public previously as a member of the Board of Education.

It is expected that the two contests will be vigorously fought, and that as a result there will be a larger vote polled on New Year's Day than is usually the case.

MUNICIPAL SLACKERS.

The duty of nominating candidates having been fulfilled, it now remains for the electors to weigh the claims of the various aspirants for office and to discharge the responsibility that is theirs by virtue of their citizenship by exercising their franchise and having a voice in the selection of the civic government.

There is not the shadow of excuse for failing to meet this simple test of citizenship.

Voting takes place on a public holiday when there is ample time for every one to mark his ballot, and the location of the polling booths at the city's schools eliminates an alibi that has been frequently used as an explanation for failure to vote.

The citizen who does not use his franchise is by his indifference convicted of neglect of duty, and could have no logical complaint should he find the privilege of voting taken away from him.

Yet the roar that would go up from such shirkers were such a drastic policy to be advocated can be imagined.

The air would be rent by the loud protests of people who would fight to retain a privilege that they rarely use.

This year there should be few slackers in Peterboro.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

The controversy over daylight saving is developing along the expected lines.

This is one of those vexed questions that split the community in two camps, neither of which seems willing to concede the possibility of there being any force in a single argument advanced by the other.

Advocates of the system stress the advantage of having an extra hour's daylight for recreation and sport in the evening, and undoubtedly make a strong case from their viewpoint.

On the other hand, there are those who fear daylight saving may interfere with business, and still more who object to the plan because of the difficulty in getting young children to bed on time.

It is possible that both the advantages and the ill-effects of daylight saving may be exaggerated by the rival forces.

Cities which have carried on under the system for years cannot surely find very much danger being done or the plan would have been dropped long ago.

The young people who want to participate in healthful recreation and their elders who like to watch them at it find daylight saving of great benefit, and probably the others do not suffer a great deal of inconvenience.

Otherwise it would be difficult to explain the fact that daylight saving measures invariably pass in those centres that have given the system a fair trial.

THE BEST CHRISTMAS.

(By the Rev. Dyson Hague, Toronto.)

"It should be the best." We know more. We have more. And this year, it's a Sunday Christmas.

Between the rush of Saturday and the hilarity of Monday, it comes this year as a day between.

The churches will be crowded, and all will remember that One was born Who was no child of man, but the Saviour of the world; the Wonderful, the Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Prince of Peace.

Yes, on Saturday we will prepare for the holiday, and on Monday we will enjoy the merriment, the presents, the dinners, and the festive lights. But on Sunday we will sing, "O Come, All Ye Faithful" and "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," and bring to the feet of our King the gift of gifts—our happy, grateful and rejoicing hearts.

We will bend the knee in reverence before the King of Kings, and mothers, fathers, friends and happy children will rejoice.

For Chrismas is nothing if it is not Christian.

The bells are ringing because the Son of God was born.

The gifts are given bcause God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son.

When that young girl said, "I have two dollars and a half to spend, but I am not going to spend it on my family. They don't need it. I am going to buy presents for the poor children who have no money," it was just because the spirit of Christ at Christmas time had opened her heart.

And if the world over myriads are unselfishly trying to make others happy and thereby doubling and trebling their own happiness, it is because He, who was born for us all, died for us all that we might henceforth live not for ourselves but for Him and for others.

And if at this time a vast number of people realize that Christmas is a good time to forget and forgive, it is because there is born this day unto us and all a Saviour, Christ the Lord

How we wish all church members throughout our land would only send Christmas cards that have something about Christ in them, a text or a hymn verse, not a mere message of cheer and friendly greeting.

For that is to leave Christ out of Christmas.

How we wish that our church people would try to give up the folly of Christmas giving to people who have no earthly use for the gifts they send, and would think rather of making children and poor people happy and those whose lives are hard. For this is the true spirit of Christ and Christmas.

As the little girl prayed: "Bless those who haven't nice beds like mine and any shoes and socks, and bless those who are out in the dark!"

We mustn't become like the little child—God bless her, she didn't know any better—who objected to having a Christmas hymn or anything about Christ.

"No, no. Christmas isn't Sunday time—it's fun. What I like is songs about jingle bells and such things on Santa Claus day."

For the danger in Canada today is that we may make Christmas a mere day of jollity, of family hilarity, with a dash of goodwill, and of transient charity, and Christ left out of home and feast and gift.

What would you think of an Easter celebrated by infidels without an Easter anthem or an Easter song?

The happy bells are ringing across the snow and the countless carols sung today because Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners. Our Christmas is no pagan feast day, or unhallowed festival. It is a feast day. It is the happiest day of all days in the year for home and childhood. But it was the heavenly angel that began the song. It was the glorious gospel that started the joy. Sing your songs you merry-hearted; scatter your gifts ye generous and good; shine, shine, ye tender eyes with love's own radiance; clasp friendly hands with cheeriest good-will.

But never forget that as this day we gaze with wonder on that Christ Child face we are looking into the eyes of Emmanuel, "God with us," Incarnation, Transcendant Love, the Mystery of Mysteries. Nay, as we look deeper we seen in that Face, with eyes of faith, the very heart of God.

PRAYERS AND POLITICS.

It was a well-known Canadian politician who gave utterance to the remark that "elections are not won by prayers." To some of us, the phrase may merely suggest that some of the elements which may enter into a political campaign are not usually associated with any form of devotion. But the greater truth is that in politics as in most things, if you want success you have to work for it.

Yet the prayer book is not altogether an unknown or negligible factor in politics. Oliver Cromwell implicitly believed in its efficacy as an instrument of reform and revolution. It was the storm-centre of many a fierce party struggle in England. Round it gathered the spirit of protest that prompted Jenny Geddes to fling her stool at the head of a Bishop, and led to a rebellion in Scotland. And, to judge from the commotion caused by the action of the British House of Commons in rejecting the revised version, it looks as if the prayer book will again be an issue of grave significance in British politics.

The prospect is one that cannot be viewed with equanimity by the people of any religious persuasion, or by the adherents of any political party. Essentially, the revision of the Anglican book of common prayer, even if it does involve changes of doctrine, is neither a sectarian nor a party matter, as the debate and vote in both Houses of Parliament clearly showed. Its purpose, as defined by the authorities responsible for it, was to bring the ritual, discipline and service of the church into closer conformity with the concepts and needs developed by modern conditions; and to that extent it was a question of internal economy which concerned the Church of England, and that great body alone.

But having been injected into the political arena by virtue of the law requiring Parliamentary sanction of its emendations, the prayer book has become a subject of controversy extending far beyond the jurisdiction of the bishops, and creating religious and political complications the issue of which it is impossible to forecast. On the one hand there is the statement of the Prime Minister, who favored the revision, that rejection may plunge the whole country into a long and bitter struggle over the relations between the Church and the State, in which view he was supported by Lord Hugh Cecil, than whom there is no stauncher Anglican.

On the other side there was the prediction of a member of the House of Lords that acceptance of the prayer book in its revised form would precipitate bitter strife in every parish in England, and bring about a state of religious and political chaos and confusion that would endanger not only the establishment, but the very life of the church. Add to these portentous warnings, uttered with calm deliberation, the no less pointed prognostications of Anglo-Catholics, Fundamentalists, Evangelicals, Nonconformists, advocates and opponents of church union, and the like, and it is not difficult to realize the gravity of a situation which the venerable head of the Anglican Church himself describes as one of "confusion and anxiety."

Notwithstanding the gloomy outlook, it may be hoped that some way will be found to avert the calamity of a political struggle over a religious issue, with all the unfortunate complications which such a battle would involve. The revised prayer book has been politically damned. It remains to be seen whether, as Sir William Joynson-Hicks declares, it is really dead. But however regrettable, it is not inconceivable that the present chaotic situation may hasten a general election in which prayers, in the old form and the new, will play an important part. And in that event, with doctrinal controversy and sectarian passion added to the bitterness of political factions, the consequences may reach further, and cut deeper, into the religious and political life of England than the revision, or non-revision, of the church liturgy.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

To all readers of this column our best wishes for a merry Christmas are extended.

Even when the Christmas spirit is at its heighth the mere mention of daylight saving is certain to cause a controversy.

Add similes: As impatient as a small boy on Christmas Eve.

One sad thought in the midst of the rejoicing is that while you may escape the ill-effects of Christmas cigars you may get knocked out by one of the campaign brand.

Not the least interesting of the municipal fights in the district will be the battle between H. R. Rye and T. M. Hunter for the reeveship in North Monaghan.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—Extreme dullness again marked the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday, there being little demand from any source.

The domestic market was also exceedingly quiet owing to the fact that dealers showed no disposition to operate. The tone of the market for oats was easier and prices were reduced ½c per bushel.

The trade in Spring and Winter wheat flour was slow but values were steady.

A fair amount of business was transacted in all lines of millfeed and the undertone was firm. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and prices were unchanged.

An active business was transacted in all grades of eggs and prices ruled steady. The receipts were 252 cases.

The market for potatoes was again inactive and without any special feature to note. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.15 per bag of 90 pounds; Prince Edward Island white potatoes at $1.05 per bag of 90 lbs; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.00 per bag in bulk, and New Brunswick white potatoes at 95c per bag in bulk, ex-track.

There was little demand for butter and the undertone was easy. The receipts were 125 packages.

The trade in cheese was dull but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 141 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—Big arrivals of corn yesterday, together with weather conditions likely to facilitate the movement of the crop, did much to pull down corn values yesterday. Liquidating sales on the part of holders of corn led also to weakness of other grain.

Closing quotations on corn were heavy, 1¾ to 2⅝ net lower. Wheat finished ¾ to ⅞ to 1⅜ off; oats ½ to 1¼ to 1⅜ down, and provisions varying from 7 to 10 cents decline to a rise of 7 cents.

Wheat and oats declined owing largely to the unsettling effect of corn weakness. General demand for wheat was apathetic, and export call for wheat from North America appeared to be virtually at a standstill, despite advices telling of decreasing stocks at Liverpool.

Provisions averaged lower.

through endless ages the music of the spheres sounds in notes too massive for human mind to comprehend. O'er the gentle slopes of ancient Bethlehem, they say, the angel choir sang its message of hope to all mankind. What a carol of joy must have surged through the heart of the Virgin Mother that night; or what must have been the tenderness of the lullaby she crooned to the slumbering Babe. . . . What tongue can tell of the majesty of that last and everlasting "Gloria!" which shall resound in magnificence before the Eternal!

Music. . . . People must always be singing, for music is ever in the human soul. he people of the northland have sung their minor songs, as plaintive as the wind that moans around their cottage roof. The people of the south-country have sung their songs of joy, as warm as the sun that shines on their azure sea. The lover sings of his passion and of the virtues and fairness of his beloved. The great master sings with the relentless urge of that poetic fire which burns within him.

But who can measure the power of a little song?

The man is peering through the window. In one corner of the room within stands a tree, gleaming with bright trinkets and packages full of mystery. There is a man sitting by the fire, a smile of infinite contentment on his face. There is a woman seated at the little square piano. And there are children—two little tots cleanly arrayed in their best in honour of Christmas Eve—singing. . . .

"'Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home. . . ."

Is this a mist before his eyes, or is it only the frost on the window pane?

"A charm from the skies seems to hallow us there,
Which, seek through the world, is ne'er met with elsewhere. . . ."

With a stifled cry the man lets his head fall into his arm resting on the cold iron. This time it is not to shut out memories, but to welcome the awakening of memories too long dead.

It is his song—his song! Oh, God forgive him, what a fool he has been! Tears which he has forgotten how to shed burst forth and shake his very being.

"Home! home! sweet, sweet home!
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

There is a flower-covered cottage somewhere that still holds a welcome for him. God helping him, he will go back!

Gone is the sound of lapping water; the humming of bees is in his ears; the perfume of honeysuckle is in his nostrils. At length, with a last sob, he looks up. The stoop seems gone. There is a new fire in his eyes. The lines about his mouth seem softened.

And that is a miracle, too.

MRS. GRAYSON HOPS OFF FOR HARBOR GRACE

Woman Flier To Make Another Attempt to Span the Atlantic.

FOUR ABOARD PLANE.

Says Convinced That Winter Trans-Atlantic Flight is Feasible.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N.Y., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—Heading into the north on the first leg of what she hopes will be a trans-Atlantic flight to Croydon, England, Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson hopped off a few minutes after five o'clock yesterday for Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

It was twilight when her huge amphibian plane 'Dawn" was trundled to the foot of the mound where mechanics warmed up her motors, but darkness was falling when the ship came down the runway, gathering speed and lifting her heavy load after about two-fifths of a mile.

Oskar Omdahl, the pilot; Brice Goldsborough, who accompanied Mrs. Grayson on a futile attempt to fly across the ocean in October, and Fred Koehler, motor expert, were aboard the plane with Mrs. Grayson.

Just before the take-off, Mrs. Grayson said she had taken aboard 500 gallons of gasoline and that the ship weighed 10,000 pounds. She said she is convinced that the winter trans-Atlantic flight is feasible and believes that the greatest hazard, that of ice forming on the wings, has been eliminated by coating the wings with glycerine. This, it is thought, will prevent condensation and freezing of fog on the ship.

Once the plane gathered headway after taking off, it disappeared quickly in the thickening darkness. Omdahl said he would steer a compass course to Harbor Grace and that he expected to reach there by 7 o'clock this morning.

Await Weather

Once there, Mrs. Grayson said, they will take off at any time, or as soon as weather conditions are favorable. Goldsborough, at the radio, will send out a call to coastwise ships for weather conditions along the way, he said. The radio call of the ship is WNU, and its wireless sends on a wavelength of 630 metres. The fliers know they were heading into intense cold in Newfoundland and were prepared to strike a temperature of 10 degrees below zero near Harbor Grace. They wore only the usual flying suits and there is no way of heating the plane. It will only be slightly warmer in the cockpit than outside.

The proposed course of the Dawn should take the ship through Central Connecticut, passing near Hartford, and diagonally across Massachusetts, between Worcester and Boston. Skirting the southern tip of Maine, the plane will fly over Portland a little to the east, passing over Old Orchard, scene of the take-off of October's unsuccessful flight.

Suitable for Flying

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—The weather over Newfoundland is at present as suitable for flying as at any time in the late Autumn, the ground is clear of snow and the temperature here at present is 35, with the forecast indicating little change; a light wind is blowing from the North, the lake in the country are but thinly coated with ice. At Harbor Grace similar conditions prevail. The condition of the landing field is reported to be quite satisfactory; all arrangements are complete for refuelling the Grayson plane immediately upon arrival.

SALVAGE WORK CONTINUE UNTIL VESSEL RAISED

Will Not Cease Until Forced to, Says U. S. Admiral.

REPLACE AIR HOSE.

Authorities Still Hopeful That Someone May Be Alive on Submarine.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., December 24 (Canadian Press). — With all hope gone that life exists aboard the sunken submarine S-4, the rescue fleet continued its efforts yesterday to raise the ill-fated craft from its grave 160 feet below the surface of the sea before unfavorable weather forces suspension of salvage operations.

The Navy will not discontinue its attempts to raise the submersible "until forced to do so," Admiral Frank H. Brumby, in command of the rescue fleet, declared.

"It must be remembered," Admiral Brumby said, "that off Block Island in December, 1925, it was necessary because of weather conditions to cease operations on the S-51 on December 6. These operations were resumed in the spring of 1926 when weather conditions permitted them. We hope to have the diving work about the submarine more advanced than it is now, but in diving operations you are doomed to many disappointments."

Captain Ernest F. King, directing the salvage operations, said the divers were still working late yesterday afternoon, drilling a tunnel through the mud under the bow of the S-4 so that cables might be looped around the sunken craft.

Replace Air Hose.

Joseph Eiben, one of the divers who went down late yesterday, replaced the air hose, which had been connected with the torpedo compartment. The air indicator on the mine sweeper Falcon, flagship of the rescue fleet, had shown that the tube was in danger of collapse. Although officers of the rescue fleet had given up hope that the six men in the torpedo compartment were living, pumping of air into the room was continued yesterday. The latest tests of the air returned to the Falcon through the hose showed that it contained less than one-half of one per cent. of carbon dioxide.

Since nine o'clock yesterday morning, divers have been working on the tunnel under the submarine, although weather conditions were none too favorable for such work. The sky was overcast and a stiff north-east wind made the sea choppy. The divers worked under submarine flood lights, which gave them a range of vision of 12 feet at the bottom. Captain King said late yesterday that he did not believe weather conditions would permit diving during the night.

In a formal statement yesterday, Admiral Brumby said that every suggestion made in connection with the rescue work had been given careful consideration, and expressed his thanks to those who had offered advice.

STILL HOPEFUL.

WASHINGTON, D.C., December 24 (Canadian Press). — Still hopeful that someone may be alive on board the submarine S-4, Secretary Wilbor decided yesterday to go to Provincetown to confer with officers of the rescue fleet and make a personal inspection. He arranged to have Admiral Hughes, Chief of Naval Operations, go with him, leaving last night.

"I refuse to believe that the men are dead until it has been proven," Mr. Wilbor said. "As long as we can carry on over the spot where the submarine went down, we will do so, although we must operate carefully in order not to take the lives of the brave men who are conducting diving operations."

While the Secretary still clung to his faint strand of hope, there were many who were not so optimistic, and official Washington generally turned its attention yesterday to a checking up for the determination of blame and to see whether adequate measures had been taken to protect those on board.

COUNTESS IS GIVEN FREEDOM BY PARIS COURT

Prosecutor Assails Victim of Alleged Shooting For Jilting Woman.

HOUSEHOLD A WRECK.

Presiding Judge Took Lenient View of Her Action.

PARIS, December 24 (United Press). — An attractive young American countess was placed on probation here yesterday after one of the strangest trials on record, in which the prosecuting attorney joined with the defence in pleading that she be treated mercifully on the charge against her—of shooting and seriously wounding an aristocratic young Englishman who jilted her.

The woman was the Countess De Janze, the former Alice Silverthorne of Buffalo and Chicago. She was accused of shooting Raymond De Trafford, youngest son of Sir Humphrey De Trafford, wealthy English sportsman baronet.

Women in the crowded courtroom sobbed as the young countess unemotionally told the story of her love for De Trafford and of the shooting, which she declared to be accidental.

De Trafford, on the stand, said he took all the blame and confessed bluntly that he would not marry the countess because he was afraid his family would cut his allowance.

In the end the three judges who tried her gave the countess a suspended sentence of six months' imprisonment, and fined her 100 francs.

Apologizing in his opening statement for "having to plead against a woman of extraordinary loyalty to her friends, who was extremely sensitive, whose health, spirit, and household were wrecked when she was abandoned by a lover who had promised her marriage," Prosecutor Gaudels vigorously assailed De Trafford.

Countess De Janze appeared in Court in a simple tailor-made costume. She was pale and looked ill.

Sitting in the dock, she testified unemotionally in her own defence. She tried to kill herself, she said, when De Trafford told her his Catholic family would not permit him to marry her, a divorced woman.

She insisted the shooting was accidental. Her lawyer added that she had tried four times to commit suicide.

De Trafford, testifying in monosyllables of yes and no—No most of the time—said in response to one question:

"I accept the entire blame."

He explained that he did not marry the countess because he was afraid his family would cut his allowance.

"If this case were that of some Paris dressmaker's assistant or midinet who had shot her unfaithful lover," said Countess De Janze's lawyer in her behalf, "this Court would free her. Why should this well-bred American suffer?"

"Why limit your statement to Midinets?" asked one of the three robed judges who heard the case instead of a jury. "Why not say any Frenchwoman?"

It was obvious that the sympathy of the entire Court was with the accused woman.

Attorney Gaudels, in summing up for the prosecution, seemed more like an attorney for the defence. His whole argument was a plea for leniency, and he declared the countess' health had been ruined through the blow to her pride when De Trafford jilted her.

"I should not like to bear his responsibility for a broken heart and a disrupted home," said the prosecutor.

The countess' lawyer introduced a deposition from the Count De Janze, who stood by her after the shooting despite their divorce, declaring that his wife's health, mental and physical, explained the shooting.

Throughout the hearing the countess whispered to her lawyer. When all the evidence was in, she testified again. Her only idea, she said, was to commit suicide. The countess' aunt and other relatives greeted the countess when she was freed, and she fell into the aunt's arms.

FOUR BANDITS ESCAPE AFTER LOOTING BANK

BOOTY FOUND.

Used Two Little Girls as Protection Against Bullets of Pursuers.

CISCO, Texas, Dec. 24. Canadian Press. — Leaving an abandoned automobile two terrified little girls, whom they had kidnapped and used as a screen against the bullets of the pursuers four of the five bandits who held up and robbed the First National Bank here yesterday afternoon fled on foot to the underbrush several miles out of town and were reported surrounded by a posse.

One of the men left behind by his companions, was shot at least four times but was still alive late yesterday. It was at first reported that he was slain.

At a local hospital, George Carmichael, policemen, was reported to be dying; G W. Bedford, the chief of police, was lying with three bullet wounds in his body, and Alex. Spear, cashier of the bank, was suffering a gunshot wound in the jaw, the result of a gun battle outside the bank as the bandits fled amid a fusillade of bullets. Two of the four fleeing bandits also were believed to be wounded.

Part of the loot amounting to approximately $10,000, was found in the automobile which the third wounded bandit was driving.

Laverne Comer, 12, and Emma May Robinson, 10, the two children taken by the fleeing robbers said the balance of the loot was left in the abandoned automobile.

Shortly after noon a man in a Santa Claus garb entered the bank and spoke to Spear in a mumbling tone of voice. When Spear asked him to repeat his question, the man suddenly pulled a revolver and commanded the banker to "reach for some sky." Following closely behind him were four other men, all brandishing revolvers. They lined up the officials of the bank and the customers.

Notified the Police.

While the men scooped up all the money in sight a woman customer, unnoticed by the robbers, fled from a side door and notified the police.

Seeing officers coming, the bandits grabbed two of the bank men by the arm and led them from the bank. Just outside the door they released the men and seized the two little girls, placing the children between them and the officers. They backed slowly toward two waiting automobiles, four into one car with the girls, while the fifth with part of the money, entered the other. A second later the lone robber fell to the car shot four times. The others fled, firing volley after volley into the crowd. The men drove several miles into the country where they abandoned the car and left the children while they ran to cover.

CHRISTMAS Returns — Dear Old CHRISTMAS

FRIENDS, in the face of so many manifestations which we all witness during this season, what right has one of us to say that the Light of the World grows dimmer?

Our hearts tell us there is no dimming. Let us be thankful for the extra radiance of Christmas. Let us seek to carry it into our daily lives. My wish is that this occasion, at least, will help all of us to forget our tribulations and our sorrows, our complaints and our animosities, and that it will be to all a day of cheer and everything which Yuletide typifies.

May this be your Merriest Christmas, and may 1928 bring you Joy and Prosperity is my sincere wish.

The Fickleness of Women :-: :-: By Fanny Darre

As far-famed as the beauty of Helen, the witchery of Cleopatra, the simple charm of Juliette—is the fickleness of the modern maid. She is a lady of many moods, and she will not have them ignored.

Be she fair as Guinevere or dark as Rachel she is the same capricious creature the world over. And for every mood she requires another admirer. When she is gay and light-hearted the young swain who dances divinely and tells the drollest stories will claim her attention. When her mood is more sober she insists on a tete-a-tete with the boy around the corner who says such profound things. And when she is restless and discontented she finds herself yet another companion to share her mood.

Never the same one! Whimsical, flighty, changeable, this adorable butterfly flits from flower to flower gathering what pollen there is to satisfy her capricious tastes.

And yet no one seems to mind. For wherever she goes she leaves behind her such an aura wholesome loveliness, of refreshing youth that her coming and going are an everlasting delight!

Dictation -:- By Juanita Hamel.

His jo bis not an easy one, for she is a fastidious and exacting mistress. Although she has not specified about his height or the color of his eyes or hair, she insists that he have far more important qualities. He must have all the qualities that go to make up the gentleman in character as well as in appearance. He must be gentle, manly and brave. Like Sir Galahad, his strength must be as "the strength of ten because his heart is pure."

It is up to Cupid to see that she gets her Heart's Desire, and even after he has found the One and Only, his work is not finished, for he must furnish all the appurtenances that go to complete the life of Perfect Happiness. He must find the "cottage small by the waterfall," he must furnish it with Love and Tenderness, and he must plant the garden with Tolerance and Understanding.

Yet Cupid does not find all this irksome, for is She not worthy of the effort that must be expended? She is indeed, for She has given that which is worth more than all the gold in the universe, an unselfish, whole-hearted Love.

Cod Liver Oil

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

WHEN another woman turns to me and asks, "What kind do you give your children?" I know perfectly well without further comment that she means Cod Liver Oil. If my children aren't taking it just then I must either carefully explain or suffer silent embarrassment because, of course, every one knows that all children-in-good-standing take this charmed dosage now-a-days, take it by coercion, or bribery, or as a treat, as is the case of youngsters I know who have never tasted candy and when they are good they may have a spoonful of Cod Liver Oil!

THE King and the Queen in their robes of consultation
Were discussing affairs of importance to the nation
With His Honor McGoo, friend in Court and high Physician,
Who was wise and was learned and a very smart magician.
Said the Queen, "All the Princess-pets
And their Highnesses the Prince-erettes
Are a-needing of a tonic or a Something-Else like that.
Do you think, oh McGoo, that Cod Liver Oil's becoming
For the heirs to the throne to be taking to get fat?"
And McGoo smiled a smile that was simply magoo-fishy-ent,
While he said, "Yes, Oh Queen, it is highly benny-fishy-ent,
And with all that I know, since you ask me what I really think,
I should say Cod Liver Oil is just simply, simply, simply SQUINK!"
Then the Queen dropped a curtesy, "Ah," she cried, "As I've always thunk, It's a fact that this oil is just absolutely simply SQUNK!"
So the King and the Queen and the Duchesses of high degree,
The Lords, and the Earls, and the Little Ones of pedigree,
All danced in a ring in the very highest kind of glee,
And this is the song that was sung:
Oh, Cod Liver Oil is simply squink,
The King and the Queen and the Doctors think,
Heigho for the Queen who has always thunk,
That Cod Liver Oil is simply squnk,
Oh squnkity, squink;
Oh squinkity, squnk;
For Cod Liver Oil, hooray!

KNIGHTS HOSTS TO LITTLE ONES

Hold Annual Christmas Tree For Children From Orphanage.

The Knights of Columbus were hosts to thirty-seven children from St. Vincent's Orphanage, last evening, in their annual Christmas treat for the little boys and girls there. An interesting program of songs, drills and recitations was provided by the small guests, and Santa Claus, assisted by George Lynch, appeared later, to give every child a number of useful and pretty gifts. Then a program of moving pictures was presented.

The entertainment committee, with V. McCabe as chairman, was in charge of the affair, and extended thanks to the Regent Theatre for the loan of the films; to the Border Transit Company, for provision of a bus to bring the children to the club rooms; to the Tuthouth Company, who loaned the Santa Claus outfit, and to R. C. Flitton of the Engineering Institute, who operated the moving picture machine.

RAVINAS DEFEAT LEAGUE LEADERS

Turn Back Kitchener Millionaires 5-4 on Toronto Ice.

TORONTO, December 24. — Kitchener Millionaires were halted in their march at the top of the Canadian Professional Hockey League at the Ravina Rink last night, by a 5 to 4 loss to the Ravinas, who are now pressing them closely for the pace-setting position. The Millionaires lived up to their name and standard, for they have a clever collection of hockey players, but the locals had the edge on them last night in a thrilling and well played game. Frank Selke's six got off to a flying start, and although they were tied once during the furious fray, they were never headed despite the desperate efforts of Alf. Skinner's squad to take a win on Toronto ice.

Many good games have been played at the Ravina Rink this season, but all were just ordinary, compared to the tilt last night, which was crowded with sensational incidents from the first to the final gong. Everything that goes to make a good hockey game was packed into the hour, and through it all Ravinas came out on top, well deserving the win.

The locals displayed a little more finish around the goal, they had more punch to their attack, and were steadier on the defence. For speed, individual ability and trickiness the monied men from Kitchener were superior, but it was not enough to offset the locals' advantages in other respects.

MANUFACTURERS BUY LARGE SUPPLIES

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—In a summary of the iron, steel and machinery markets, Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News makes the following comment this week:

Canadian manufacturers apparently feel assured of a good demand for their products for the winter and early spring, for they are contracting for supplies, and specifying against contracts, in a manner not apparent a few weeks ago. The net result is that books of iron and steel producers are taking on a more healthy aspect, and sentiment is notably improved.

The industrial outlook is undeniably improved, and reports to Canadian Machinery indicate that not only has the past year measured up well, but that the industrial enterprises now under way and in view promise a demand for iron and steel that will keep trade totals well up over the next few months.

Following upon announcement that the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool has under consideration the erection of a 10,000,000-bu.-capacity terminal elevator at Port Arthur, it has been learned unofficially that plans have been made for a 4,000,000-bu. terminal at Fort William. Test piles have been driven.

Western Canada, the Winnipeg district particularly, will benefit by the development of the Flin Flon district. A railway line is to be immediately pushed into the territory.

No. 3 blast furnace of the Algoma Steel Corporation was blown in on Dec. 2. The blowing in of the furnace was found necessary to get sufficient iron to carry on the regular steel program at the mill. Up to the present time, cold metal, which had already been provided by the furnaces, was used, but new metal is now required to complete the C.P.R. rail order upon which the mills are working. The 12-in. merchant mill of the Corporation will start this week on double shift.

The annual report of Canadian Car and Foundry Co. for the year ending Sept. 30, 1927, shows the best results of any year since 1924. Forty per cent. of the business emanated from sources other than the railroads. Control of the National Steel Car Corporation of Hamilton is now held entirely in Canada.

Details of the probably operation of the Ford plant are not yet made public and, although the new cars have been placed on display, it is rumored production on a large scale will not commence for some time yet. The Canadian plant is in the market for tool and die makers.

Price changes of the week were not important, and important moves are not forecast. The New Toronto brass and copper rolling mill announces a further advance in prices on rolled brass and copper products, effective Dec. 3.

In Great Britain, the steel market is more active. Structural demands are larger, and special grades are also wanted. Continental mills continue to offer strong competition.

In the United States, pig iron demand has expanded to proportions indicating a first quarter buying movement is under way.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1927-28 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1927, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 15

One of the difficult problems of auction bridge arises when the opponents have bid four or five of their suit and partner has doubled. Shall you go on with your suit or try to defeat the opponents? The answer to that question decides many a game and rubber, so any examples that help to decide it should be very helpful.

Hand No. 1

Y
A B
Z

Hearts — Q, 10, 4
Clubs — Q, 7
Diamonds — A, 10
Spades — A, K, Q, 10, 9, 8

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one spade, A bid two diamonds, Y bid two spades and B passed. Z passed, A bid three diamonds, Y bid three spades and B bid four diamonds. Z bid four spades, A bid five diamonds, Y doubled and B passed. What should Z do? Should he allow the double to stay in or should he bid five spades? This is a very close hand. The fact that Z's partner has helped his bid twice makes it practically certain that he can make five spades. On the other hand, it looks as if he can beat the opponents three or more tricks at five diamonds doubled. In my opinion, however, Z should take the certain game and rubber, especially as he holds eight honors. If he defeats his opponents, they may win game and rubber on the next hand and so nullify the good results of the double. On close hands such as this, take the certainty. There is really no other determining factor.

Hand No. 2

Hearts — J, 4
Clubs — 7
Diamonds — 10, 8, 7, 6, 2
Spades — Q, 9, 4, 3, 2

A B
Z

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one heart and A passed. Y bid four hearts and B doubled. If Z passed what should A do? Any double of a bid of four or more is a business double, one made to defeat the contract, so that A has the choice of passing, in the hope that B has sufficient high cards to defeat the bid, or of bidding four spades.

If A makes the latter bid, he should do so for two reasons: First, because he thinks Y-Z will make four hearts doubled; second, because he thinks Y's jump bid of four hearts shows a desire to shut out the spade bid. B's double must be based on high cards in the other three suits, so A may make four spades and so win game and rubber.

The determining factor, however, is the great weakness of A's hand; the fact that he holds so many spades and diamonds makes it unlikely that even if B has high cards in these suits, he will take as many tricks as he expected. A should, therefore, bid four spades. This is another close hand and should be carefully noted.

Hand No. 3

Y
A B
Z

Hearts — K, Q, 10, 9
Clubs — 7, 5
Diamonds — J, 10, 9, 7
Spades — K, J, 9

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one heart, a very questionable bid. With this type of hand, it is much better to pass and find out what the other players bid before taking any chances. The result of the heart bid was that Z got himself in a position where he played the hand at the wrong bid and failed to go game. After Z bid one heart, A bid one no-trump, Y bid two hearts and B bid two spades. Z and A passed and Y then bid three clubs. If B passes, what should Z bid?

After having made the mistake of bidding one heart as dealer, Z hasn't much choice except to bid three hearts; but if he would stop to think, he should realize that he and his partner hold the best hands and that their best chance for game is not with a weak four-card heart suit but in no-trump. He has the opponent's declared suit, spades, stopped twice, so should make a bold try for game by bidding three no-trump. At either hearts or no-trump, Y-Z can make three odd, so that Z's bid of three no-trump would have been a big winner. If Z had passed in the first instance, he would not have got into any trouble. A also would have passed and Y would have bid one club. B would have bid one spade and Z could then have made a sound bid of one no-trump. All would have passed and Y-Z would have scored game. This hand is noteworthy — first, for Z's bad original bid; second, for the opportunity later offered to correct his mistake. It is interesting and instructive.

Problem No. 16

Hearts — J, 6, 5
Clubs — K, 8, 5, 2
Diamonds — A, 7, 3
Spades — Q, 10, 6

Hearts — K, 8, 7, 3, 2
Clubs — Q, J, 10, 9
Diamonds — J, 4
Spades — 9, 8

A B
Z

Hearts — 10, 9
Clubs — 7, 4
Diamonds — K, Q, 10, 6
Spades — J, 5, 4, 3, 2

Hearts — A, Q, 4
Clubs — A, 6, 3
Diamonds — 9, 8, 5, 2
Spades — A, K, 7

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one no-trump and all passed. A opened the trey of hearts, Y played the five, B the nine and Z won the trick with the queen. Z now led the trey of clubs, A played the nine, Y the deuce and B the four. A now led the queen of clubs which Z won with the ace in his own hand. How should he play the hand to go game against any defense? Solution in the next article.

"ASK DOCTORS TO FIGHT MORE"

Consultations held by doctors over a patient are not often fruitful of any good results, and this is principally because the first doctor on the case invariably calls in other doctors whose training has been practically the same as his—possibly even a graduate of the same school. While the ostepoaths, chiropractors, homeopaths and eclectics are generally willing to consult with doctors of other schools, this is not true with members of the allopathic medical association, as their members are not permitted to consult with doctors who belong to other medical societies.

The man who is sick is learning to know that his best safeguard against biased opinion is to call in, separately, doctors who advocate different systems of treatment, get the individual diagnosis from each one of them, and then make his own choice of what seems to him a sensible method.

It is a pity that doctors cannot compare their different viewpoints without getting angry because the others do not judge the case the same!

Judge Stephens, of Salt Lake City, who is an authority on medical legal problems, recently pointedly said in a lecture:

"It is fine for doctors to be properly aloof and impersonal, but medical progress would be greatly aided by a little of the quarrelsome criticality of the courtroom. Of course, doctors cannot hold court over each case on the operating table; they could, however, safeguard the interest of the patient in obscure cases by approaching each other as opposing counsel.

Lawyers are forced to give their very best because they know a keen opponent is watching their every mental process. If doctors were equally critical of each other's work the science as a whole would be greatly stimulated.

By this I do not mean that doctors should be carping or captious. Their criticality should always be directed toward the process and never against the individual, being like the attitude of lawyers who argue heatedly before the bench but walk away arm in arm. This kind of controversy will find facts and expose mistakes."

Judge Stephens recommended that the "courtroom technique" be applied first in hospital staff meetings. Here, each member should review his difficult cases, placing before the others his provisional and laboratory findings, diagnosis, treatment, results and follow-up. The entire group, sitting then as a friendly jury, would be greatly benefitted by this procedure, he said, and lead to a closer co-operation in the matter of consultations.

Questions and Answers.

Question: High School Girls asks: "What would you advise for a girl that wanted to sleep all the time?"

Answer: If eight hours of sleep do not refresh you it is because your system is burdened with poisons from bad habits of eating, and from the effects of too much study and not enough physical exercise. If a physician's examination has failed to disclose any definite disease, you can rest assured that you need a thorough bodily housecleaning which will eliminate the morbid material in your blood stream with which you are burdened.

Question: L. S. writes: "Please advise when cottage cheese is used in place of meat, what is the ample portion per person?"

Answer: It is all right for most people to use about one quarter of a pound of cottage cheese in place of the same amount of meat. This is approximately an ordinary sauce dish full.

Question: Mrs. K. writes: "I weigh 190 pounds and should weigh 130. If I take off my surplus flesh at the rate of 10 pounds per month would that be too much? If I walk five or six miles per day will that help me very much in taking off flesh?"

Answer: It is all right for you to take off surplus flesh at the slow rate of 10 pounds a month, but you can lose much faster than that if you will first take a short fast and then follow it with a limited diet, free from carbohydrates. There is no danger in reducing rapidly if you will follow the plan I have so often suggested in this column. It is essential for you to walk at least five miles daily if you wish to reduce the weight around your hips and buttocks.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

CHRISTMAS COMES

Man's heart is like a house of stone,
Great corridors that long have known
No sound but silver, joy but gold,
And all the things a heart may hold
That keep us all so busy. Now
Each window shows a lamp, somehow,
And carols echo through the halls
So long so silent. Christmas calls.

He had forgotten that life's joys
Are not man's wealth but children's toys,
And that the things he thought so great,
For one dear day at least, can wait.
He had forgotten, seeking much,
The mightiest things are here to touch.
He had forgotten many things,
But Christmas many a memory brings.

Man's heart is like a house of gray,
Great walls with which he shuts away
The lights of laughter and of love.
But now one star, one star above,
Has penetrated darks and damps,
Has kindled all its little lamps,
Till every window shows a light,
So long so dark. 'Tis Christmas night.

CHRISTMAS CONCERTS

CALEDONIAN CLUB.

The annual Christmas Tree of the Caledonian Club was held on Friday evening in the Woodman of the World Hall, when about 200 of the members gathered together to celebrate this annual occasion, which is always a gala day in the life of the younger folk.

The decorations were of a Christmas character, and the tree with its mas character ,and the tree with its gay red bells, glittering tinsel and other ornaments was the centre of attraction.

The concert for the evening reflects great credit on the part of the trainers as all of the numbers were well rendered.

The following program was given, Mr. George Lowe, president of the club, acting as chairman:

Dialogue—"Visit from Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, Junior," by Emily Hemphill (as Mrs. Santa Claus) and Margaret Wyllie (as Mr. Santa Claus).

At the close of the programme, the younger children enjoyed for the next half hour or so a most bountiful repast, while the older folks were served a light luncheon. The table for this occasion was prettily decorated in red and white, and with pink and red roses.

While the tables were being cleared away by the many willing helpers, the children played several games, which were interrupted by the arrival of Santa Claus, impersonated by Robert Gilmour, who was given a very warm reception. After giving a short address, Santa gave to each boy and girl a small gift, together with a bag of candies, nuts, etc. When everyone had received a present, he was thanked in the usual manner by three cheers, and the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

GRACE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Grace Sunday School of George Street United Church held a Christmas Tree and entertainment in their Sunday School hall on Thursday evening, December 22, with a large number of parents and friends in attendance.

The hall was prettily decorated with red and green streamers and Christmas bells hung from the chandeliers and window tops. The piano was draped and adorned with red candles in brass candlesticks. Most beautiful of all was the Christmas tree, with its dark green boughs adorned with bright-colored lights, glittering tinsel, stars, bells and gay streamers. It was heavily laden with fancy boxes and wonderful bulging packages.

Rev. Dr. A. Brown acted as chairman for the program, later being relieved by A. F. Hagerman, Superintendent of the school.

A very enjoyable program was presented by the school, consisting of Two Choruses by the School; Chorus by the Primary Department; Several Piano Solos, and Recitations by scholars. Two clever sketches were put on: 'Hiring Help on a Farm," by Messrs. Jarvis and Smith; "Different Opinions," by Maurice Wearing and Ralph Hagerman. Special mention might be made of a Missionary Playlet put on by the scholars of Miss Might's Class, assisted by Dorothy Bamforth and Joy Walker. This was an exceedingly good number.

Rev. J. E. Todd made a short speech and told some amusing stories.

At the conclusion of the program Santa Claus appeared and was greeted with loud applause by the little folks and each child of the school received a gift. The proceeds of the entertainment amounted to $9.

Mr. Hagerman, Superintendent of the school, is to be congratulated on the fine entertainment presented. Mr. Hagerman and his teachers are doing a wonderfully fine work in this school under very adverse circumstances.

He was assisted by Rev. Dr. Brown, Miss Might, and Miss Stella Bennett.

REFINERY FIRE THREATENS CITY

Feared That Tanks at Tientsin Standard Oil Plant May Explode.

WORTH $5,000,000.

TIENTSIN, China, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)— The Tientsin plant of the Standard Oil Company of New York caught fire to-day. It was feared that the plant, the largest in Northern China, would be a total loss. The plant with the stocks of oil on hand has an estimated value of five million dollars. It is situated across a narrow river from the foreign settlement. It includes six three million gallon tanks. Fear was expressed that these might explode and cause widespread destruction. The cause of the fire was not determined.

ROPE LOOPED AROUND SUB

One Tunnel Completed Under S-4—Storm Halts Work.

WILL LIFT VESSEL.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—With one tunnel completed under the sunken submarine S-4, and work in progress on the second, operations were halted here to-day by gales and rough seas. The completed tunnel was about nineteen feet aft of the bow. A four-inch manila cable was passed under and looped. The same procedure will be followed when the second opening is forced through the mud 46 feet from the bow. Then a stout battleship cable will replace the manila and both lines will be attached to lifting pontoons.

PLENTY OF FOWL OFFERED TO-DAY

Slightly Lower Prices Quoted in Some Cases—Eggs Are 55.

Prices of fowl at the farmers' market this morning were practically the same as on Wednesday, with a slight lowering in some instances, and there was a large quantity on hand. Turkeys were priced from 38 to 45 cents a pound; geese from 28 to 30 cents, ducks at 25 cents, and chickens at 25 and 27 cents a pound. Eggs were selling from 55 to 60 cents a dozen, and butter at 40 cents a pound.

THE MARKETS.

Many Shares Bid Up In Brisk Session To-day

NEW YORK, Dec. 24. Canadian Press. — The Christmas spirit was reflected in the broad upward movement of prices on the New York Stock Exchange to-day. Operators for the advance, radiating cheer regarding 1928 business prospects, bid up more than a score of isues to record high prices Trading was unusually heavy for the pre-holiday session, the days sales running around 1¼ million shares. U. S. Steel touched a new high on the movement at 155 and then ran into considerable profit taking, backing down to below 154. General Motors continued to force upward with the rise accelerated by active short covering. Midland Steel Products preferred was the sensational individual feature, soaring more than 12 points to a new high record at 252.

Grain Prices Lower; Trading Very Light

CHICAGO, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—In all around light trading, grain prices averaged a little lower today, sellers slightly predominating. The comparative firmness of Liverpool wheat quotations, however, helped somewhat to steady the wheat market here. Opening at ⅛c off to ⅛c up, Chicago wheat later eased a trifle, but kept near to the initial range. Corn started at ⅝c decline to an equal advance and subsequently underwent a moderate general setback. Oats followed corn. Provisions tended to sag.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 125⅛, March 127⅝. Corn December 68⅜, March 65⅛. Oats December 51⅜.

shall be last," should not prevail." He had enjoyed every minute of his three years in office.

Little of great importance is to be decided next year, he said, except the paving business. He will work to have this done with cement, which he says is cheaper, and keeps all the money in the city, whereas asphalt is costly and the money leaves the city.

He has been chairman of the Property Committee, which has had only minor matters to deal with, except buying two or three small pieces of land.

As chairman of the Board of Health he has done his utmost to work with the board in preserving the city from contagious diseases. He gave a great deal of credit for the work done to the efficient officers and nurses of the board.

One thing which will have to be dealt with is that of fire insurance premiums. The council has got the department up to date and was promised a reduction which the council should get after.

The citizens, he continued, feel that they should fill vacancies on the council, such as that caused by the resignation of J. O. Fife. He will endeavor to have this corrected.

Speaking of the work entailed by election to the council, he said he had been called to 98 meetings during the year, besides many shorter calls. The ratepayers do not realise what work there is. Sometimes the mayor lets the aldermen go away on some of the delegations, so there is some pleasure in the business.

Ald. Hancock recalled that he had been honored with election to the executive of the Union of Canadian Municipalities. He promised that if elected he would try to serve the large masses of the people.

Ald. G. A. Macdonald.

Ald. George A. Macdonald expressed his pleasure at serving in the council. He promised to give his closest personal consideration to every question coming before him. He feels that his two years of service will be of value to the city.

Ald. Macdonald pointed out that the council had tried to get a dollar's value for every dollar expended. He favors doing all the paving by local labor, if possible.

A full time medical health officer was advocated by the speaker, who felt that efficiency and economy would be gained by combining all the services.

Ald. C. H. Ackerman

Ald. C. H. Ackerman expressed his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him in his election two years ago, and in nominating him again. He felt that some explanation was needed as he had stated that he would not be a candidate. He had felt that he would be out of town for a great deal of time and should not therefore run, but he also considered that he had more time to serve than many others, so had altered his decision.

The question of health will be the principal one to come up in 1928 and if re-elected he will devote as much time as possible to this question.

He expressed the opinion that the aldermen had endeavored to serve everybody alike.

S. A. Lowe.

"I wish to thank the gentlemen who are responsible for my nomination, and I want to say that I am in business, own property, and have the interest of the city of Peterborough at heart, as my business, like others, depends largely on the development of the city.

"If I can be of any service to the people, I will only be too glad to render any assistance of which I may be capable. My work takes me into all parts of the city, and I feel that I have some knowledge of the conditions that exist."

D. J. Holland.

D. J. Holland thanked those who nominated him. He mentioned that he comes from East City, but that, if elected, he would serve all parts of the city. As a native of this city, educated and in business here, he feels that he is qualified for the office and appeals to the electors for support.

Harry C. Huffman.

Harry C. Huffman, while still a young man, has been in business for over 20 years, he said, and believes that if he looks after the city's interests as well as he does his own, the citizens will have no complaint.

He spoke of his service through the Kiwanis Club, and remarked in passing that the trees placed on the streets had not affected any reforestation scheme.

He promised to give all the consideration and time necessary for all business coming before him.

Ald. Walter Stocker.

Ald. Walter Stocker recalled that this has been a busy year for the aldermen. He has been an advocate of the hiring of local labor and spoke of the fact that there was a great deal of outside labor used on the outfall sewer. In Oshawa $170,000 had been spent on paving, of which only the price of the cement had left the city. This city has made its own sewer pipe at a great saving this year, and this he held up as an example of what could be done.

Ex-Ald. Joseph Crowe.

Ex-Ald. Joseph Crowe thanked his mover and seconder, but declared that it was not his intention to run for Alderman. He had had some experience during the past two years and could tell the people something, but he wouldn't. He was glad to be out of the job he had had. It is hard to say, however, what will turn up between now and to-morrow night, he said.

J. R. Paquette.

J. R. Paquette thanked those who proposed him. He felt a stranger but had been pressed to run for Alderman, as new blood was needed, and stated his platform as lower taxes and work done by local labor. He promised to do his best for the city if elected.

None of the other candidates responded, although several had been present when the speaking started.

THREE NOMINATED FOR REEVESHIP

left over from 1926. One of these was for road work which amounted to $275, another was for $250, the fire bill of the year before. He explained the fire protection by-law and said that it cost the township $250 this year as the city threw off $100 in the case of the two automobile fires on cars passing through the township. The charity account for the township amounted to $1,200 during the year and the greater part of this was for hospital accounts that the statute forces the municipality to pay. He complimented the ratepayers in having such a fine clerk as Bruce Johnston, and said he considered him the best in the county. "Mr. Johnston has always helped me to the best of his ability," he said.

When the addresses were all heard an election for reeve, deputy-reeve and council was assured.

Robert Dobbin.

Robert Dobbin, deputy-reeve, discussed many of the problems that are coming before the municipality. "There is a great work to be done, especially with the sewage disposal plant question. The city has made it very disagreeable and unsanitay for the residents in the east of North Monaghan. We sought advice on the question and went about the work very carefully. We obtained the services of the best city solicitors. They say they have remedied conditions, but I am doubtful. I am willing to co-operate for the best, but I am afraid the city has not treated Monaghan right. The city put into effect the municipal drainage act and as a result we are loaded with a big share of cost of Park street drain. I am also against making the council the collecting agency for the city. In closing Mr. Dobbin announced himself as a candidate for deputy-reeve and asked that he be given the support of those present.

T. M. Hunter.

"I see there was a meeting over in the east end the other night and they said the council was no good and Mr. Paterson was worse. That district has been given its share. You must remember, gentlemen, you are under country rule, not city rule, as you cannot issue debentures and get the township into all kinds of debt." The speaker made a plea for co-operation with the city and through time Monaghan may use some of the utilities at a modern prices.

Fire By-law.

"We got fire protection and this will be made legal at the coming session of parliament.

"It is a serious thing that the Park street controversy went as it did. Last year in July the city council proposed to pay 60 p.c. of cleaning the drain and Monaghan 40 p.c. A survey was made and the result is we are in for 73 p.c. of the cost of the survey. I thought it was poor business and I was the only one on the council to vote for the previous agreement on 60 p.c. 40 p.c. basis.

"The charity account in Monaghan is large but cannot be helped. One girl came in from Asphodel and was in the township for 3 months and became sick and her bill cost between $500 and $600. You can't blame the council, as those are fixed expenditures." In concluding Mr. Hunter announced that he would be a candidate for reeve.

Building By-law.

"It seems to me we are not getting at the root of the matter in regards to charity," said W. G. Waterman, who was nomintaed for deputy-reeve. He suggested that there be some building restrictions in the east end of the township so as to prevent people putting up one and two room houses. "The township needs building machinery to make roads and until it is secured there will never be good roads in the township. As far as I can make out we are not getting a square deal in regards to assessment. Some of the northern townships are getting more proportionately to what they pay in to the county treasurer. It has been a great pleasure to work with Reeve Lillico and I have learned much from him during my year in the council.

Andrew Kent.

During the year, Andrew Kent said, $840.25 was spent on Lansdowne street, and of this the city paid half. The township needs a grader and a team to keep the roads up. On Lock street there was $346 spent during the past year; on Braidwood avenue $70, on McKeller street $57, on Edison avenue $58. As a whole the very best was done for that section of the township.

Criticized By-law.

H. B. Rye said he was in hopes Mr. Lillico would have decided to run again or I would not have come back into the harness." The council has done its best in the past year. The township is faced with the problem of better roads and ratepayers are clamoring all over the township for them. If you want better roads you have to pay for them. I do not think the sewer connection should have been stolen after dark, but why did they admit it. We went into the rural electrical area and I think it has been a very good proposition. People objected to the 20 year contract entered into but a new school has been built and a 20 year debenture issue has been made. I do not think it was good business in case of the fire protection agreement to chare it up against the special area. The arrangement was better when individuals were given the opportunity to enter into an agrement with the city. I agreed with the stand taken by Mr. Hunter on the Park street drain question, but even now I can't see how the township is responsible for draining the De Laval. The city entered into an agreement to drain the De Laval property and now they want to load it on North Monaghan. The people in the area of the drain have to pay the shot. For Mr. Waterman's information and it is absolutely impossiblines in regard to the building by-law, but at present there is no legislation and it is absoltuely impossible to get any by-law in the statute to stop erecting these little shacks.

In conclusion Mr. Rye said he had had decided to stand for reeve and asked for the support of those present. If elected he was willing to stand on his past record of eight years in council.

William Stevens charged that money had been thrown away during the past year, and he objected to dumping gravel on the boundary or any other road without first breaking the surface. He promised, if elected, the strictest economy would be practiced so as to serve the best interests of all the people. He objected to pulling out cement culverts, as had been done in the past year, and replacing them with galvanized iron. Following the criticism of the Council road building policy, there was plenty of fireworks between Mr. Stevens and members of the Council.

Not In the Race.

William Whitfield declared that he would not be a candidate. George Patton said he was undecided, and J. A. Williams did not expect that he would be a candidate.

Run By Exhibition Board.

Ex-Councillor Barnes stirred up a real live question when he criticized the Council for granting a strip of land along Lansdowne Street to the Exhibition Board.

"The new Council must be composed of alert men for Peterboro is encroaching upon North Monaghan. The Council granted the strip of land to the Exhibition Board for 20 years when the Board only has a lease on Exhibition Grounds for 10 years. We petitioned against it but the Exhibition Board was trying to run the Council, for it stood in with Denne, Reeve Lillico. Mr. Denne has nothing to do with North Monaghan. Mr. Barnes, "Well, the Exhibition Park is only blocking the growth of this section."

Other speakers were Joseph Madill, John McIntosh, Fred. Wilson, and F. McIntyre.

DYING POLICEMAN FOILS HOLDUP MEN

Writes Down Number of Car As Robbers Flee—Men Captured.

NEW YORK, December 23 (Canadian Press). — The clear-headed bravery of a dying policeman to-day brought two hold-up men into the police line-up charged with homicide and robbery. Shot four times when he tried to foil the robbery of a saloon at Long Island, Police-Lieut. John Kemmer abandoned his efforts to draw his own gun, ripped a scrap of wrapping paper from a roll on the bar, and scribbled the license number of the automobile he had seen outside the place.

A few minutes later he was describing the robbers as he lay at the point of death. Shortly afterwards, the automobile was spotted and the robbers arrested. They were Edward Byrne, who said he had turned hold-up man to buy his sweetheart a Christmas gift, and George Appele, former Chicago gunman.

Christmas Is Christmas Even In Penitentiary

KINGSTON, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—The practice of granting extensive paroles to prisoners in Canadian penitentiaries has been largely discontinued, but Warden J. C. Ponsford and the staff of Portsmouth Penitentiary are doing all in their power to introduce the spirit of Christmas into the institution. Six men will be released before Christmas Day on ticket of leave.

Both in the Protestant and Catholic chapels special services will be held on Sunday. The respective chaplains will officiate, while Right Rev. C. A. Seager, Anglican Bishop of Ontario, will deliver an address in the Protestant chapel.

Monday will be observed as Christmas Day, and only absolutely necessary work will be done. Discipline will be relaxed to some extent and a first-class Christmas menu has been prepared.

MANHOLE COVERS HURLED INTO AIR

Explosions in Brooklyn's Italian Section Terrify Thousands.

NEW YORK, December 23 (Canadian Press). — With a series of explosions that terrified Brooklyn's Italian section to-day, six manhole covers were blown fifty feet in the air, injuring one man and damaging a trolley car. Police reserves were called out to calm the thousands who poured from the tenements believing the explosions to have been caused by bombs.

COMMUNISTS EXECUTED.

One Was Leader of Recent Uprising of Peasants Near Hankow.

HANKOW, China Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—Four Chinese communists were executed here last night. One was said to have been the leader of the recent Red uprising near here a fortnight ago. In the uprising he captured the city and established a peasants' government, killing numerous Turyshan gentry and merchants.

CHRISTMAS CONCERTS

ST. ANDREW'S, CAMPBELLFORD.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 24.—The Sunday School rooms of the Presbyterian Church were well filled on Thursday night when over two hundred people came to enjoy the entertainment which the pupils of the Sunday School were putting on. The entire program was typical of this sort of function and every number seemed to win the approval of the audience. The variety which the program afforded along the entertainment line was sufficient to hold practically everyone till the very last number.

The two choruses by the entire school were under the direction of Mr. William Pearson, church organist. One came at the beginning of each part of the program. The first part of the program was devoted to the spirit of the Christmas season, while the second half was along patriotic lines. The two opening choruses were, "The Christ Comes to Earth" and "My Own Canadian Home." Miss Helen McCreadie was unable to be present, and the piano solo which she was to have played had to be dispensed with. Recitations by Marion Ryder, Mildred Easton and some of the little tots of the beginners' classes were very well spoken and heard with eager interest by the audience. There was not a sound in the room as the little people said theirs pieces.

The motion song and the Christmas drill were very pretty. These were under the direction of Miss Lillian Hay, Mrs. C. Massie and Miss Emma Massie. The beginner and primary departments, under the direction of Mrs. Hume, Mrs. Rollo and Mrs. McMillan, acquitted themselves very creditably.

As an extra number little Marie Hardy gave a recitation before the sketch, "Coming to the Rescue," was put on by four of the boys. Particularly pretty was the touch of pantomine under the direction of Mrs. John Shand. The stage was occupied by twelve girls completely robed in flowing white gowns, and the music for the act came in the form of a solo from the wings. This was a solo, "Abide With Me," s: g by Mrs. Shand. Miss Freda Nelson's good-night drill, a very unique affair, and a tableau completed the first half of the program.

In the second half, a piano solo by Miss Ruby Townsend followed the opening chorus. She played an old favorite, "The Garden of Dreams." Miss Watson's sketch, recalling the earlier history of Canada by the impersonation, by several boys, of some of the famous explorers and pioneers of this country, was loudly applauded. Miss Margery Ackerman's reading, "Mrs. 'Arris at the Telephone," was along humorous lines and served for just the required amount of humor to relieve the serious trend into which matters had drifted. The old maids' chorus was perhaps more amusing than it was intended to be since the "Old Maids" were some of the prettiest girls in the Sunday School. Very few of them care to admit that they stand a chance of becoming old maids. Lady bachelors is the term they prefer. A tableau, 1867-1927, and the Fathers of Confederation completed the program. After this, as a fitting conclusion, the audience sang "O Canada" and "Rule Britannia."

Then Santa Claus appeared with his gifts for the little ones. He apologized for his late arrival and explained that he had broken some of his reindeers' harness. Assisted by very willing volunteers, he soon distributed his candy and gifts to his little friends and was gone again. The Rev. James Grier officiated as chairman throughout the program and assisted Santa Claus to distribute his wares. So that those on the committee responsible for the very delightful entertainment might not think their efforts had not been fully appreciated, a vote of thanks was tendered them by Mr. Charles McKelvie and Mr. J. D. Cumming. From the applause, the vote was unanimous.

AT MADOC.

MADOC, Dec. 24.—At the Empire Theatre on December 21 the Sunday school of Trinity United Church held their annual Christmas tree and entertainment. The theatre was thronged with parents and friends.

Mr. James Keene as president welcomed all and acted as chairman for the evening. The opening number was a chorus by the junior classes of the school, "Glory to God in the Highest", after which followed a dialogue by the tiny tots of the Primary department, and a song by all. These little folk played their parts well indeed. Then came a drill by the Intermediate girls of Miss Ross's class, which was a impressive scene with its Christmas evergreens which were finally held in position as an immense Christmas tree.

A recitation by Lorna Roberts was followed by an address of welcome by the Rev. G. W. Rivers and a short talk on Christmas and Christmas trees. Then Mrs. Bailey's class of junior boys put on a very effective flag drill followed by a display of a large Canadian flag and a song, "The Union Jack."

A short recitation by Jean Nickle was followed by a beautiful pantomime by the junior girls of Miss Norma Fair's class. The reading was given by Miss Lillian Rivers owing to the absence through sudden illness of Miss Fair and during the reading of "Peter Pan" these little girls acted their parts wonderfully well. Lenore Bird as Peter Pan, in green with her fair footsteps and dainty dancing, was exceptionally good. The part of the Tinker Bell Fair was taken by Jean Nickle daintily dressed in white. The dog "Nanna" was well represented by Bernice Bailey. Wendy, little John and Michael were Evelyn Smith, Margaret Moon and Ruth Smith. The parts of father and mother were well taken by Benson Kincaid and Kathleen Ludbrook. Mean old Captain Hook was Grey Rivers, the pirates were Jean Whytock, Harley Smith, Lilian Connor, Phyllis Reed, Moira Reynolds, and Bernice Blakely, while as Indians were Helen Osborne, Irene Shane and Francis Cassidy, all playing their parts well and showing the careful training given by Miss Fair. The whole scene was concluded by all joining in singing the son, "Peter Pan."

Mr. Hough's boys of the intermediate class gave an amusing dialogue "How they got their dinner", and were followed by an effective pantomine by the Young Ladies' Bible Class, showing a young girl restless, dissatisfied and discontented being presented one by one with the choice of a career in college, music, art, pleasure, riches, power, sport, love, and Christianity. Though fascinated and half persuaded by love she yields to Christianity and the closing tableau finds her kneeling at the cross while the hymn, "Nearer My God To Thee", was softly sung by Miss Edna Pettit, representing Christianity.

The Young Men's Bible Class put on one of their famous "Court Scenes", a negro breach of promise case. Where all sustained their parts well it is unnecessary to mention any particular player, but Colin Dafoe as the lady in the case was splendid and the whole dialogue was laughable and much enjoyed.

Mrs. Ashley's class of senior girls had a pantomine "Onward Christian Soldiers" and with long white robes and glistening tinsel were exceedingly pretty and as the hymn was sung by Mr. Colin Ross, acted their parts with grace and precision.

A duet by Miss Muriel Rousehorn and Mr. Colin Ross was well received and music by the orchestra filled in between the parts. The arrival of Santa Claus was the signal for the distribution of the presents and candy from the tree and all felt was a fitting close to the evening's entertainment.

MARMORA UNITED CHURCH

MARMORA, Dec. 24.—The reputation which the United Church Sunday school has for its annual Christmas entertainment was well sustained at the Town Hall on Tuesday evening when the audience was of largest dimensions.

Rev. C. J. Beckley, upon whom a great amount of labor fell in connection with the event, was chairman. Santa Claus, with the aid of an Alladin lamp or rather lantern found his way to the midst of the anxiously waiting children by the time the program was concluded.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith returned to her breakfast on Saturday morning after a long telephone conversation, flustered and apologetic.

"It was Fay," she announced to Bob and Cherry. "She's having the whole family to dinner at her house tomorrow —Dad and Kate and Joy, Aunt Hattie and Grandpa and Grandma Lane. She wants us all to come. I know you loathe family dinners, dear," she worried, turning her big, troubled brown eyes upon her husband, "but I don't see how we can get out of it. It's Grandpa and Grandma Lane's forty-ninth wedding anniversary, and we're all afraid Grandpa won't live to celebrate his golden wedding."

"Rather short notice, isn't it?" Bob mumbled. "As a matter of fact, Faith, I'd planned to work nearly all day tomorrow on the Hemingway plans. It will mean a lot to us if I land that job."

"Oh, I'm so sorry, but I can't go either," Cherry exclaimed with exaggerated regret. "I've got a heavy date that will keep me from ten in the morning until heaven knows what time tomorrow night. You'll be an angel and take Hope to Fay's with you, won't you, darling?"

"Of course," Faith answered shortly, "if I go. I don't see how I can go if you're going to stay home, Bob. You'll have to have your dinner.

"I'll cook it myself, if you'll leave a few things in the ice box for me. Don't worry about me, honey."

"I talked with Bill Warren over the 'phone last night, darling," Cherry announced casually. "He asked me to go to the regular Saturday night dance at the Marlboro Country Club with him tonight and I'm going to a matinee this afternoon with George Pruitt."

"That doesn't sound very much like the life of a lonesome lady," Faith commented dryly.

Cherry flushed, then laughed rather too loudly. "Meow! Kitty, kitty! Don't you know me well enough by this time not to take my midnight resolutions too seriously, darling? Your excellent wife, who has far too good a memory, Mr. Hathaway," she turned her laughing golden eyes upon Bob, "is referring a trifle cattily to a remark I made last night in a moment of profound depression. It had something to do with my resolution to be wholly decent and honest, and, therefore, lonesome."

"Then your date tomorrow is with Nils?" Faith asked coldly. She might have known that Cherry could not rest content until she had wrung an abject declaration of love out of this strange new admirer of hers—

"Being lonesome is not the only way of being decent," Cherry retorted cryptically. "No, darling, my date is not with Nils Jonson. I never expect to see him again. Oh, Rhoda!" her voice changed to ecstatic admiration: "What a gorgeous omelet!"

Rhoda set the platter with its fluffy yellow triumph before Faith and slipped into her own chair, beaming with pleasure.

"When is your brother leaving, Rhoda?" Faith asked.

"At one o'clock tomorrow," Rhoda answered. "He wants to be back at the farm Monday morning. He asked me to thank you all for being so nice to him and so good to me, and to say he was awfully sorry he wouldn't see you all again before he left."

Faith stole a glance at Cherry. The girl's face had gone very white, and her golden eyes were wide and blank with amazement.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1927.

Kindly stars rule this day, according to astrology. All the aspects are benefic and the planetary rule is rarely favorable to dwellers on the Earth.

The early morning is especially favorable to elderly persons who should find much joy in the day's experiences.

Mars is in a place stimulating and encouraging in influences, making for constructive and optimistic thinking.

All the aspects presage for the next month vital interests that inspire persons of every degree of intelligence.

The rule is promising to all engaged in industry and is believed to foreshadow new power for those who work with the hands as well as the brain.

Women are subject to the best possible direction of the stars under this planetary government.

Hospitality should be particularly successful while this rule prevails for it inclines men and women to enjoy the simple things of life.

Love affairs may be extraordinarily conspicuous at this season, which may incline to romance in unusual quarters.

Older persons as well as those who are young may be most susceptible to sentiment under this direction of the stars.

Engagements to marry, dating from this time should be rarely lucky for long happiness is presaged.

Despite the discussion of marriage problems, which will mark the entire winter, the stars indicate a tenacity to old established forme for the civil and religious contract binding men and women together.

Churches today come under a rule that is believed to assure growth and increased scope.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy day into which Neptune should bring pleasant memories and assurance of a prosperous year.

Children born on this day probably will be wonderfully gifted in mind and attractive in character. Loyalty is a trait of those born under this sign.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1927.

Astrologers read this as a day of many planetary influences, most of which are strongly benefic.

There is a promising sign for all who start a new business or undertake work in a new position.

It is pre-eminently a time for facing one's financial situation, the rule of the stars indicating pleasant surprises for those who investigate bank balances.

The seers foretell radical changes in the world's credit system, which economists may not approve.

For all who owe money this is believed to be a most auspicious sway under which to pay debts. It is supposed to discourage future inclination to contract obligations.

Under this direction of the stars employers and all who control the destinies of large numbers of persons are most fortunate.

The configuration is favorable to governors, mayors and all in executive positions. By this sign the President of the United States is especially lucky.

Even though it may be a day late the presentation of gifts should be most fortunate to donors.

This is read as a lucky day for the bestowal of engagement rings or wedding anniversary presents.

The evening is a time especially favorable for entertainments of every sort and particularly for banquets in honor of distinguished guests.

All the signs seem to presage a coming year of great prosperity, which, however, will be counterbalanced by many unusual world calamities, most of them due to convulsions of nature.

The new year will bring to many cities beauty in architecture and centers for artistic advancement, the seers prophesy.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of happiness in their work through the coming year.

Children born on this day should never need money. Many lawyers are born under this sign.

Hints on Etiquette

1. When should one plan to stop in a friend's apartment, on making a trip to New York or other large cities where space is at a premium?

2. Is it ever anything but bad form to make a convenience of a girl's apartment just because she is a "girl from home," not a particular friend?

3. What can an apartment dweller do, if "folks from home" drop in uninvited?

The Answers.

1. Only when expressly invited.
2. Never.
3. It is often better to frankly state the inconvenience, rather than grow irritable putting them up.

SCENES DURING AND IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE HOSPICE ST. CHARLES FIRE

The picture upper left is a photograph of the ruined Hospice St. Charles in Quebec showing the widespread damage done to the building in which some many young lives were sacrificed. Upper right is a photograph taken just as dawn was breaking and while smoke was still pouring from the smouldering ruins and hindering the firemen as they searched the building in search for bodies of the little victims of the fire. Lower left is shown the crowd gathering outside the morgue, among those anxiously waiting being many who feared for relations who had been in the building when the fire broke out. It was through crowds such as this that the searchers had to carry the bodies as one by one they were found in the ruins. Lower right is a photograph of the wing containing the dormitory where it is feared fifty young lives were snuffed out. The gaping windows on the top floor show the location of the room.

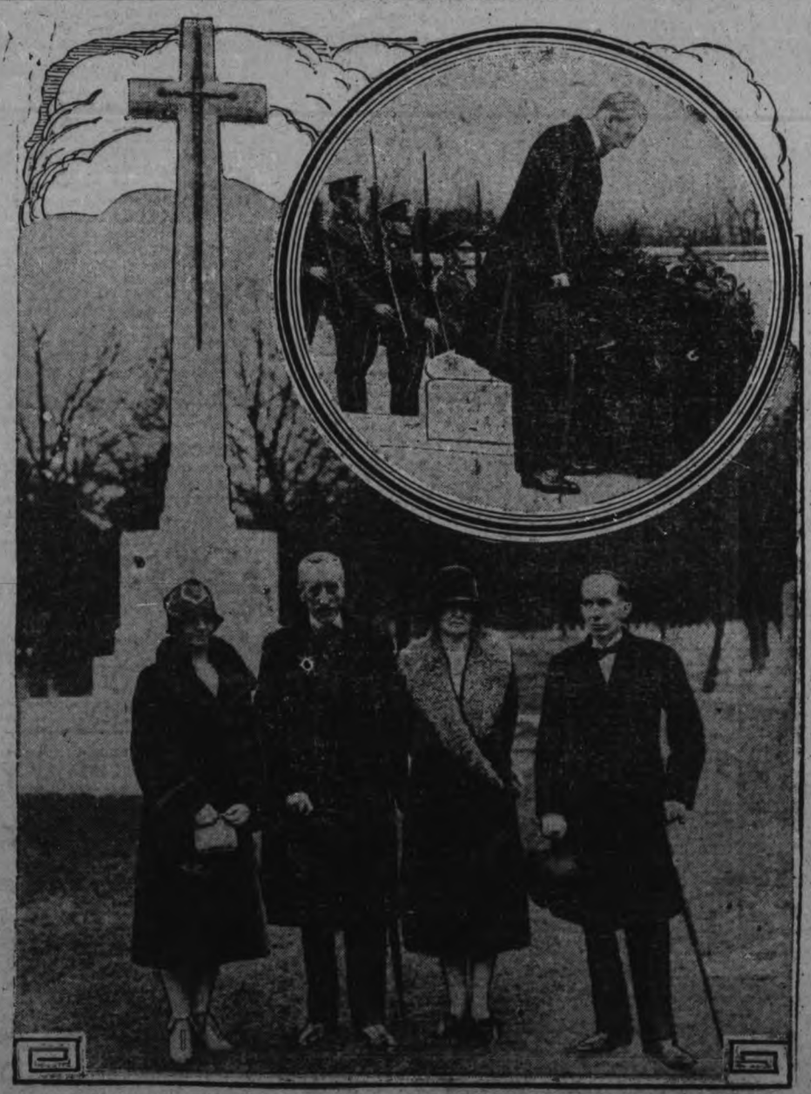
George says California and the movie world are all right, but you can't help to be back to your old home. George's mother is more than delighted. He is all she has in the world, and secretly she's pleased that some of George's fame has blown over, and given him back to her for a while.



LIVED 35 YEARS BESIDE GOLD DEPOSIT

For thirty-five years Bill Leclair and his Indian wife, Maggie, LEFT, lived practically beside the immensely valuable gold field of Kamiskotia, now being developed by Hollinger Consolidated. Their chagrin is shared by others, even engineers who went over the ground and failed to observe the wealth at their feet. It remained for a prospector named Jamieson, RIGHT, who with two companions had the good fortune to properly appraise its value. The outcropping of gold ore is discernible in the background.
